U. S. PREPARES TO KEEP OUT OF FAR EAST WAR

Roosevelt to Avoid Entanglements.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—With war impending between Japan and Russia and Japanese officials discussing the possibility of war with the United States, President Roosevelt, THE TRIBUNE learns, is developing a policy of far reaching import in dealing with the grave situation in the far east.

The utmost secrecy surrounds the President's discussions of far eastern policy with Secretary of State Cordell Hull and other officials of the state department.

Shaping of the Policy.

Enough has leaked out, however, to indicate that the policy is shaping along these lines:

1. Avoidance of entanglement in the Russo-Japanese imbroglio and the war between the Nipponese and the Muscovites that American diplomatic officials generally regard as inevitable.

2. Cultivation of friendlier relations with Japan, particularly through avoidance of such provocative actions as the attempt of Secretary of State Stimson in the Hoover administration to frustrate Japanese absorption of Manchuria.

3. Strengthening of our national defense by building the American navy up to full treaty strength and provision of a large force of army and navy aircraft.

4. Refusal to accede to a treaty agreement according Japan navy parity with the United States and Great Britain instead of the 60 per cent for capital ships allowed in the Washington conference treaty and the 70 per cent for auxiliaries allowed in the London agreement.

Report on War Preparations.

For several weeks the state department has been receiving official reports on the preparations for war going forward in Japan and Russia and on the attitude of the Tokio and Moscow governments which have convinced officials cognizant of the developments that the two nations are on the point of a resort to trial by combat to settle the quarrels and the rivalry between them. In fact, it is the growth of rivalry between the oriental empire and the soviets now overshadowing specific quarrels, that strengthens the belief that a Russo-Japanese war cannot be averted.

Such disputes as that over railroad control in Manchuria have sunk into insignificance as a breeder of war compared with the jostling of each other by two rapidly expanding nations, each filled with overweening ambitions and confidence in its own physical strength. Specific disputes might be composed, it is pointed out, but national rivalry is as certain to produce war in the far east as it was in Europe two decades ago.

Both Keep Weather Eye on U. S.

That both Russia and Japan were proceeding with a weather eye upon the United States was disclosed at the time President Roosevelt opened negotiations for the recognition of the Russian soviet government last fall.

President Kalinin of Russia accepted the overture in a note in which he dwelt on the importance of a reconciliation between Moscow and Washington as a preserver of world peace. Patently what he was thinking was that the recognition of the soviet government by the United States, opening up a vista of Russia winning American sympathy, financing, and supply of munitions, would give Japan pause.

Japan likewise took much the same view of the matter. There was an outburst of anti-American feeling among the Japanese. There were heated accusations that Mr. Roosevelt was taking sides with Moscow. Then President Roosevelt made a move calculated to allay Japanese irritation with his Russian policy. He announced that the entire American fleet would

GANGS BROKEN, KEEP UP FIGHT! LOESCH URGES

History of Gunmen's Fall Told.

Frank J. Loesch, president of the Chicago Crime commission, yesterday reviewed accomplishments of federal, state, and local authorities in crushing the power of the gangster. Then he said:

"Don't let us stop. This fight must go on. It is a winning fight now after six years, but it cannot be said that the strife is over.

"Chicago has a bright face. She is known today for her courageous overthrow of a gun government which had left the gangster wealthy, free with the protection which his wealth provided, and impudent upon the streets. Chicago now is an example for the rest of the nation. Her example is being followed."

The decade between 1923 and 1933, Mr. Loesch said, was one in which the most spectacular lawlessness in the history of the United States developed and then waned. The gangster era, he declared, ended with the sentencing of Al Capone, Public Enemy No. 1 of the whole country, to a federal penitentiary.

History of Gang Activities.

Capone came to Chicago a year or so after the world war as an attaché of a vice resort. He was an able organizer and he was tough. When his boss, Johnny Torrio, was frightened out of town Capone took the reins and, through his consolidation of alcohol, beer, vice, and gambling under his expanded gang, made huge profits for almost ten years.

He developed the most powerful gang Chicago ever saw, committed murder with impunity, and, as a business necessity, elected public officials, and then failed to pay his income tax. Treasury department investigators proved that he had cheated the government of nearly $100,000 in taxes over a three year period. He was sentenced to ten years in Atlanta penitentiary, where he is serving the sentence now.

Capone's Gang Broken.

With his conviction the power of his organization crumbled. His lieutenant, Murray Humphries, tried to divert the hoodlum division which Capone used only for "enforcement" into the labor rackets. Although partially successful Humphries today is hunted on two indictments growing out of his labor racketeering. The rest of the Capone gang has fallen apart, largely because repeal has stamped out the illicit booze traffic.

Contemporaries of Capone were Joe Saltis, Frank McErlane, and the two O'Donnell gangs, that of Edward [Spike] O'Donnell, who waged gun battles with Capone gangsters for beer rights in a section of the south side, and William [Klondike] O'Donnell, who made an agreement for similar rights in western suburbs.

Saltis and McErlane for a while sold beer over 10 square miles of the southwest side. McErlane, called the "cruelest gangster," introduced the "gang ride," and the Thompson submachine gun. Then, in 1929, Saltis retired to his resort in northern Wisconsin, where he still lives. He says he is "out of the racket." McErlane rented his gun and his bravado to the highest bidder, but he was not shot down like most of his pals. He died of pneumonia in a Beardstown [Ill.], hospital on Oct. 8, 1932.

Spike O'Donnell was often wounded

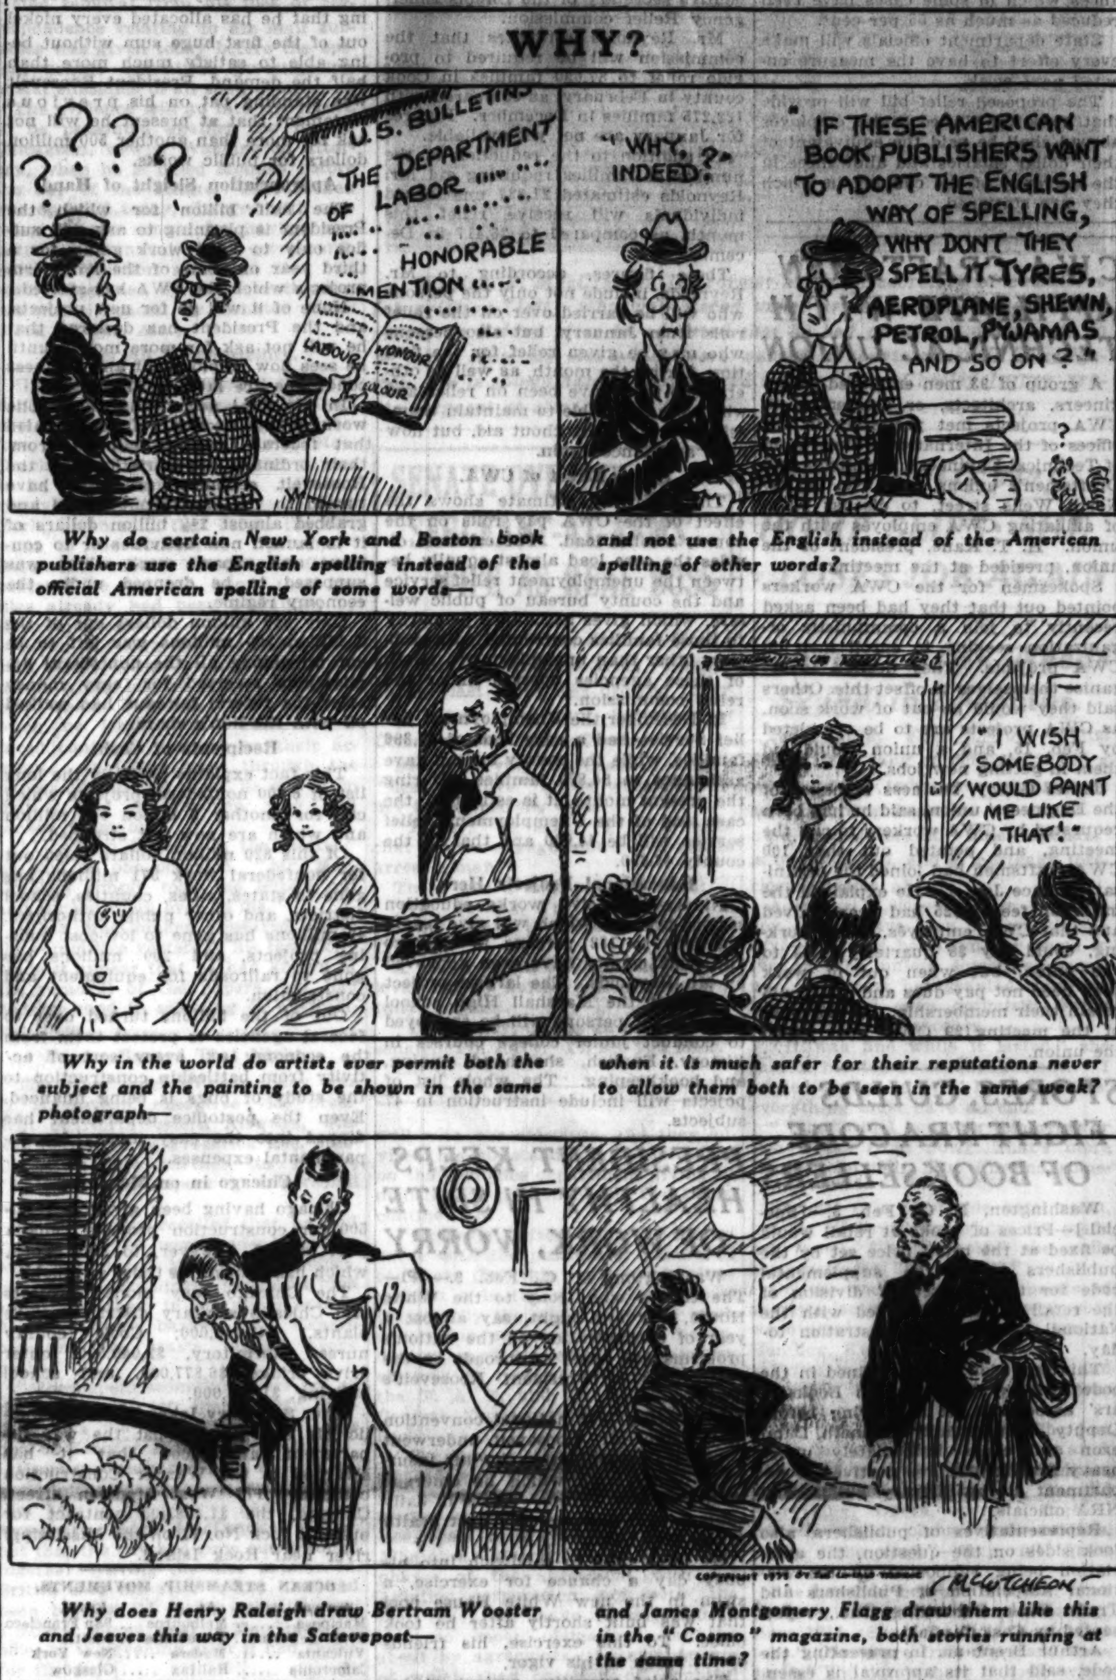
WHY?



Why do certain New York and Boston book publishers use the English spelling instead of the official American spelling of some words— and not use the English instead of the American spelling of other words?

Why in the world do artists ever permit both the subject and the painting to be shown in the same photograph— when it is much safer for their reputations never to allow them both to be seen in the same week?

Why does Henry Raleigh draw Bertram Wooster and Jeeves this way in the Satevepost— and James Montgomery Flagg draw them like this in the "Cosmo" magazine, both stories running at the same time?

New Chicago Milk License Plan Issued

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Launching the government's second effort to regulate the Chicago milk market, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace today promulgated a new federal milk license forcing all Chicago milk distributors to pay fixed prices to producers.

Unlike the unsuccessful license which Mr. Wallace was forced to terminate last Jan. 8, the new agreement makes no attempt to fix retail milk prices to the consumer. The theory upon which the agricultural administration is proceeding now, it was said, is that retail prices will be regulated in relation to farm prices by competition among distributing agencies.

The new license becomes effective at midnight tomorrow night and will be binding on every milk dealer in the Chicago area, regardless of his reluctance to abide by its provisions. Violators will be prosecuted vigorously by the AAA, it was declared.

Given Broad Powers.

Simultaneously with his promulgation of the license, Secretary Wallace announced the appointment of Frank C. Baker of the AAA licensing and enforcement staff as federal milk administrator for Chicago. Mr. Baker, it was said, will leave for Chicago tomorrow night and open offices there on Monday.

Under the provisions of the new license Mr. Baker will have broad powers over the Chicago milk market. His duties will include control over the elaborate "adjustment pool" set up in the license to equalize milk payments made to farmers by distributors.

Enforcement of the license will be in the hands of W. B. Connor of the AAA field investigation section, and W. C. McQueen, also of the investigation section, who was enforcement officer under the former Chicago milk pact.

Prices Under New License.

For class 1 milk, or milk distributed as fluid milk, $1.75 a hundred pounds [3.7 cents a quart]; for class 2 milk, or milk used to produce cream, $1.25 a hundred pounds [2.6 cents a quart]; and for class 3, or surplus milk, a price equal to three and a half times the average price per pound of 92 score butter at wholesale in the Chicago market.

Officials of the AAA said today that it was virtually impossible now to gauge the "blended" milk price, or the price which the producer will receive for the entire amount of milk he brings to market. It was estimated, however, that this price will range from $1.50 to $1.60 per hundred pounds [3.2 to 3.4 cents a quart].

The $1.75 price for fluid milk is 10 cents less than the $1.85 price [3.9 cents a quart] which was fixed in Chicago as a part of the agreement there that ended the recent farmers' milk strike.

The new Chicago license was the first to be applied to any milk shed since the AAA scrapped all existing milk marketing agreements and adopted a new policy governing the local pacts. Within a few days the license will be supplemented by a marketing agreement between producers, distributors and the government, it was said.

Hit-Run Auto Kills Woman; Driver Seized

An automobile driver who fled last night after striking and killing a woman and seriously injuring a man at Sheridan road and Briar place was pursued to his room in the Commonwealth hotel and arrested by a squad of policemen.

The victims of the arrested driver, Alfred Codman Jr., 31 years old, were Mrs. Bettie Freytag, 33 years old, 3145 Cambridge avenue, and her husband, Arthur, 34 years old. Freytag is in the John B. Murphy hospital, where his condition was described early today as critical.

Drives Over Sidewalk.

Witnesses said that the Freytags were standing on the sidewalk when the car swerved from the roadway, apparently out of control, and crashed into them. Without halting Codman twisted the steering wheel, slipped back into the boulevard and darted away.

He was pursued by another motorist, Irving Schulman, 3005 Blaine place, and forced to the curb a block away. He then leaped out, crying that he was going to see if the people he struck were badly hurt, and ran to his hotel.

Identified by Companions.

Left behind him in the car were Paul Norman, 6151 Winthrop avenue, and his wife, passengers. They told Lincoln Park Policeman Paul Winton his identity. At the hotel, which stands at Pine Grove avenue and Diversey parkway, Winton found that Codman had locked himself in. He refused to surrender. When Capt. John Duffy of the Sheffield avenue police arrived the hotel manager furnished a pass key and Codman was dragged out.

Codman is a son of Alfred C. Codman, wealthy New York and Boston stock broker, and Mrs. Oliver Turner of Bolton, Mass. He is a graduate of Harvard university and is said to be a member of several exclusive clubs, with access to a number of others including the Chicago Racquet club. Codman is now working as a salesman for a Chicago concern.

Widow, Youth Admit Killing Indiana Pastor

Wabash, Ind., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—The strange murder of the Rev. Gaylord V. Saunders, found shot to death in his car in Indianapolis Friday morning, was solved here tonight.

The minister was killed for a price of $10. His widow, Naomi, mother of two children, was the instigator, police charge. His friend, Theodore Mathers, 19 years old, was the actual slayer.

Indianapolis and Wabash police disclosed the details of the crime late tonight after obtaining confessions from the widow and the youth. Although there are hints that a "strange emotional background" prompted the slaying, the admitted motive was Mrs. Saunders' expressed fears of death at the hands of her husband, for which she desired him put out of the way. And for this, she admitted, she paid $10.

Declare Roe Procures Gun.

Besides the widow and young Mathers Masil Roe, 19 years old, of Coalton, Ind., and Mrs. Mabel Balke, 34 years old, a nurse of Wabash, also were taken into custody. It is charged that Roe procured the gun used in the slaying and was present when the clergyman was killed. Mrs. Balke's suspected connection, police say, lies in the belief that she had knowledge of the crime.

The Rev. Mr. Saunders was, until last Sunday, pastor of the Wabash Street Methodist Episcopal church here, a position he had popularly held for the last five years. His resignation was due to a desire to become an embalmer, it was explained. For the last two months he had been studying embalming in Indianapolis, and on his periodic visits there his roommate was young Mathers, also an embalming student.

It was about three weeks ago that the plot to murder the clergyman was hatched. At that time, Mathers said, he was approached by Mrs. Saunders.

Mathers Tells of Plot.

"It was arranged that the Rev. Mr. Saunders should be killed," related Mathers. "Mrs. Saunders said she wanted him put out of the way. She gave me $10 to have it done."

Instead of "hiring" a killer, Mathers decided to do the job himself, he confessed. He had his friend, Roe, purchase a new gun. Then Friday morning, he said, he and Roe drove the clergyman out to a rural spot where he, Mathers, shot him in the head and killed him. Then, he said, he and Roe drove the dead clergyman back to the city and abandoned him in the car.

Mrs. Saunders went to Indianapolis yesterday and claimed her husband's body. Early today she and Mathers returned here with it. Mathers said he gave Mrs. Saunders the gun used in the killing, a one carat diamond ring and a watch taken from her husband's body. The ring and watch were taken, he explained, to give the appearance of a robbery.

Hides Revolver in Nurse's Home.

Mrs. Saunders in her confession confirmed much of Mathers' confession, police said. She added that she took the watch, ring and revolver over to the home of her nurse, Mrs. Balke, and hid them in the basement. It was in this connection Mrs. Balke was seized. Mrs. Saunders said she became disturbed over the hidden evidence, and this afternoon sent Ross Kurtz, 19 years old, a neighbor, to the Balke basement with instructions to destroy the gun, ring and time piece.

Kurtz, not knowing the purpose of this errand, carried out Mrs. Saunders' orders. He smashed the gun with an ax, and also the watch. Police searching the Balke basement this evening found fragments of the gun and watch but no ring. Kurtz was exonerated of blame.

Widow Tells Her Story.

Mrs. Saunders when asked why she wanted to get rid of her husband, said:

"His mind had been acting strangely lately, he threatened me and I was in fear that he would kill me and the children. Ted [Mathers] killed him. I planned it and gave him $10."

Late tonight Mrs. Saunders, Mathers and Mrs. Balke were taken to Indianapolis, where the crime was committed. They will be held along with Roe for further action. The men who solved the crime were Lieuts. Michael Hines, Roy Pope and Earl Higgs and Chief Michael Morrissey of the Indianapolis police force, and Chief Harry Ridgway of Wabash.

Two Boats Locked in Ice All Day; Freed by Wind

Two fishing boats, each with a crew of four men, were locked in the ice off Waukegan harbor from 10 a. m. yesterday until last evening, when a shift of the wind released them.

It had been feared that the boats, the Seabird and the Helen B., would be crushed in the floes. The skippers, Carl Cuppleman and Arthur Bert, said that the craft probably would have been lost if the wind had continued from the south through last night.

SHIPS, PLANES, TRAINS IN RACE TO GRAB PROFIT

$35 Price Stirs Up Speculators.

Other news of developments in the monetary situation will be found on the financial pages.

SOUTHAMPTON, England, Feb. 3.—(AP)—The trans-Atlantic gold rush in the wake of American devaluation began today. Speculators are rushing the yellow metal to the United States to take advantage of the American government's offer of $35 an ounce for it.

The great liners Bremen and Berengaria sailed with strong rooms stacked with gold bars of an estimated value of more than $30,000,000.

By special train, airplanes and trucks the gold arrived at the port and was stacked in heavily guarded cases until safely aboard the ships.

The Bremen and Berengaria shared a total weight of five and three-quarters tons of gold. The Berengaria carried about $20,000,000 worth and picked up another $5,000,000 worth at Cherbourg tonight, while the Bremen had $7,500,000 worth in its strong rooms.

$50,000 in Each Box.

Their precious cargoes consisted of gold bars weighing about 60 pounds each. The bars were packed two to a box and each box was worth roughly $50,000.

The Bremen's gold was stacked on the docks until the ship arrived this morning. A heavy police guard surrounded it. A shipment of 25 of the boxes of gold from Amsterdam barely caught the Berengaria. It arrived by seaplane at 6:30 a. m. at Hamble, and was rushed to the dock, with bar gold valued at a million pounds sterling.

The Berengaria carried 386 boxes from Southampton, and the Cherbourg assignment will amount to 100 boxes more. The Bremen's cargo was made up of 156 boxes.

"Thar's gold in them hulls," said the old sailormen on the docks as the liners edged away.

Dollar Drops in London.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—(AP)—The American dollar showed a net loss of 3 cents to the pound today during a half day exchange market session in which the United States currency had an unsteady course, compared to Friday's firm tone.

Offerings from speculators who wanted to take profits weakened the rate in early trading, but a renewed demand later for trade and other purposes caused an appreciation of 2 cents from the day's weakest point. It closed at $4.93¼ to the pound.

[In Paris the dollar gained 5 centimes and finished at 15.72 francs (6.36 cents to the franc). The American monetary unit was quoted in Berlin at 2.60 marks, compared to 2.55 marks yesterday (38.46 and 39.21 cents to the mark).]

Gold Falls in London.

The price of gold, however, failed to maintain its recent rise, and was fixed at one shilling, three pence a fine ounce lower than yesterday's quotation. One reason for the decline was said to be the lack of ships in the next few days of a character suitable for gold transport. On the outside market it was said, however, that the lower rate attracted buyers, with the result that a higher basis was arranged.

FIGHTS 59 CENT DOLLAR

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 3.—The gold war is on again.

This time the precious metal is not so much loot for which the embattled treasuries are trying to cut each others' throats, but simply ammunition. Gold is like balloon ballast—when the currency begins to drop you drop gold to hold it and if you want the currency to fall you increase your gold reserves by outside purchases. That is what the American authorities are doing in order to make the revalued dollar settle down to the newly fixed value of 59 cents.

But England, which does not want competitive American trade to benefit from having a more depreciated currency than sterling, is tipping the scale, and the dollar, like a rubber balloon, stubbornly refuses to come down to the legal parity.

London denies this and New York may not understand it, but Paris knows. Paris knows in the same way as the man whose house is being bombarded from two directions knows that a war is on. In the duel between the pound and the dollar the franc is playing the rôle of innocent bystander and is taking the punishment.

On one hand the metallic coverage of the franc is menaced by speculators who are rushing to convert francs into gold to ship to America for resale at $35 an ounce, the price which the American treasury fixed. On the other hand, the British authorities, by trying to force up the dollar rate prevent the gold flux from reaching its natural balance. Furthermore, wild rumors regarding the intentions of the Bank of France continue to weaken the franc.

Today a near panic broke out at the Paris bourse on the strength of unfounded reports that the Bank of France was going to declare an embargo on gold shipments to America. A dizzy drop in government securities and a greater premium on the dollar were the results of this rumor.

Traced to British Press.

The rumors spread all over the world in the last few days, causing Bank of France authorities real concern. They know better than any one that application of any kind of embargo would automatically shake confidence in the franc and start a run which would necessitate suspension of the gold standard within a few hours. As far as the rumor can be traced, it originated in the British press.

What worries French financial authorities most is the steady rise in the dollar premium over francs represented by the exchange value of the dollar. At yesterday's close this exchange value stood at 15 francs 67 centimes—60 centimes above par—and at today's close was 15 francs 72 centimes. At this rate the gold drainage is likely to continue a long time.

COLD WAVE HITS FRANCE; STORMS POUND ALGERIA

PARIS, Feb. 3.—(AP)—France was gripped by cold wave today that brought freezing temperatures even to the southern sections of the country.

North African Air Lines were halted by violent storms along the Algerian coast. A large part of a new Algiers pier was wrecked, with damage aggregating $192,000. At Tarbes, France, a slight earthquake early today drove shivering hundreds into the streets, but did no damage. Deep snow covered the plains areas.

Snow Halts Trains in Spain.

MADRID, Feb. 3.—(AP)—Trains in northern Spain were halted by deep snow today as the entire country experienced a wave of intense cold.

GAS TAX STRIKE EMPTIES PARIS OF ALL TAXICABS

PARIS, Feb. 3.—(AP)—This usually bustling capital was like a slow and empty village today as a strike of taxi drivers against a new gasoline tax became complete.

Pickets prevented would-be strikebreakers from leaving garages, strikers watched all streets, flying squads of police quelled a few minor disturbances, and the broad Paris boulevards were empty of taxis. Street cars, buses, and subways ran extras.

The strikers demand social insurance, better working conditions, and removal of a 12½ cent gasoline tax which brings the gallon cost to 40 cents.

5 CWA Workers Arrested After Threatening Foreman

Five civil works administration workers were arrested yesterday by the county highway police of the Homewood station on charges of disorderly conduct brought by their foreman, John Sullivan, 9969 Throop street. Sullivan said the men, whom he described as communist agitators, threatened to stab him when he announced they were being laid off. The men were employed in a road building project at Riverdale. They are Ray Sarocco, 30 years old, 120 West 116th street; Alaska Fain, colored, 45, 5720 Calumet avenue; Henry Valentini, 53, 9038 Lowe avenue; John Nova, 54, 124th street and Kensington avenue, and John Nemoff, 39, 12320 Emerald avenue.

Balkan Nations Agree to Sign 10 Year Peace Pact

ATHENS, Greece, Feb. 3.—(AP)—Dispatches from Belgrade, Czechoslovakia, reported today that final agreement had been reached on a 10 year Balkan nonaggression pact which will be initialed tomorrow. The document will be formally signed at Athens. It provides for admission of Bulgaria to the signatories at any time. The pact was understood to provide for maintenance of the present Balkan frontiers. Turkey, Greece, Serbia, Rumania, and possibly Bulgaria were prepared to sign.

All Blue Island Gambling Banned by Mayor Kasten

All forms of gambling in Blue Island were ordered stopped yesterday by Mayor Frank Kasten. Among those reported hit by the closing order were James Blouin, former champion bowler, and Frank Carney, associates of James Hackett, wealthy gambler whose testimony was instrumental in sending Gail Swolley and Frank Souder to the penitentiary for life.

2 BILLION FUND BELIEVED TO BE AIDING FRANCE

Dollar Turns Weaker on Foreign Exchanges.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—With the American dollar turned suddenly weak and saggy on foreign exchanges today, indications here were that the treasury department has hurled its huge 2 billion dollar stabilization fund into the world money centers in an effort to protect France against being driven off the gold standard.

Unless the United States continues to protect France against huge gold drains, the franc will soon be pushed off the gold standard, a world gold embargo effected, and the dollar plunged into a money chaos along with all other currencies, experts conceded here today.

Officials Are Silent.

For this reason speculation has sprung up over whether America's first international money agreement may not be with France instead of with Great Britain. Discussions with the central banks of both of these countries are reputedly now under way, although officials continue to refuse to discuss this possibility. The White House wishes to keep international money developments secret.

While the dollar was sinking in value abroad the committee for the nation, a private organization which sponsored the dollar devaluation plan eventually adopted by President Roosevelt made public a telegram to Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr., in which they said that to insure prosperity the President must cut the value of the dollar far under 50 cents, the present legal limit.

Seek Still Lower Dollar.

The dollar, the committee wired Secretary Morgenthau, still has an excess purchasing power of 34 per cent compared with the 1926 dollar. The committee protested against reported stabilization agreements with Great Britain, saying that unless the English pound, which today was worth slightly less than $5, is driven up to $6.08 national prosperity in this country will be impossible.

While the recent trends in world money markets were being dramatically reversed today by entrance of the American stabilization fund or some other cause, the treasury department was showing itself with a surplus for the first time in the fiscal year as a result of the dollar devaluation.

Publishing its condition statement for Feb. 1, the first day of the 59 cent dollar, the treasury showed that its gold holding had jumped in value by 2 billion 806 million dollars as a result of the dollar devaluation.

Surplus Soon Wiped Out.

This "profit," which the treasury listed as a receipt, wiped out the entire treasury deficit of 1 billion 900 million dollars which had existed on Jan. 31, leaving instead a 974 million dollar surplus, the first surplus the New Deal treasury has ever shown. This surplus, however, has already been wiped out, because 2 billion dollars' worth of the gold "profit" was to go for the creation of the stabilization fund.

Although the stabilization fund had not been set up yesterday, it was believed to have been launched this morning in an effort to fight back against forces, mainly of British origin, which were fast forcing France toward departure from gold.

The dollar lost in value as compared with all major foreign currencies today, a development which will do much to ease the pressure on the franc. Previously the dollar has been strong ever since President Roosevelt issued his devaluation order, a trend which not only upset the New Deal money theories temporarily, but threatened to drive all countries still on the gold standard off it.

Franc Forced Down.

The franc was being forced down in value in comparison with a dollar to a point at which exchange speculators would have found it profitable to ship gold from France to this country. At the same time the English pound was dropping in comparison with the dollar and franc, creating a strain in that quarter.

Today's developments, however, reversed both these trends. The pound went up, and the dollar retreated away from the vital "gold export point." Thus France was given a tem-impossible now to gauge the "blended

Unless the United States helps France to stay on the gold standard, a virtual world gold embargo will be brought about because France is the only major country from which gold is now flowing. Such a world embargo would cripple the American monetary plans, because the President's whole program depends on controling the world gold price. Under an embargo, the price, if quoted at all, would be meaningless, experts say.

FRAME RELIEF BILL FOR U. S. EMPLOYES IN FOREIGN SERVICE

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—(AP)—Secretary Hull sent messages today to American embassies and consulates informing them that efforts were being made to relieve their plight brought about by the fall of the dollar in foreign exchange.

Meanwhile, Assistant Secretary of State Wilbur J. Carr was coöperating with officials of other departments that also have employés abroad in framing a relief bill which probably will be sent to the house foreign affairs committee Monday.

The danger of demoralization in the foreign service has been described as great because of the inability of the personnel to live on salaries and allowances which in some cases have been reduced as much as 55 per cent.

State department officials will make every effort to have the measure enacted next week.

The proposed relief bill will provide that hereafter United States employés abroad shall be paid the equivalent of their dollar salaries and allowances in the currency of the country in which they are stationed.

CWA CRAFTSMEN AFFILIATE WITH TECHNICAL UNION

A group of 93 men employed as engineers, architects, or draftsmen on CWA projects met yesterday in the offices of the International Federation of Technical Engineers, Architects and Draftsmen's unions, local No. 14, 180 North Wells street, to discuss plans of affiliating CWA employés with the union. H. T. Kane, president of the union, presided at the meeting.

Spokesmen for the CWA workers pointed out that they had been asked recently to join a communistic organization seeking to enroll men on CWA projects. They desired to organize themselves to offset this. Others said they would be out of work soon, as CWA projects are to be completed by Feb. 15, and a union would aid them in getting new jobs.

James Gilboy, business manager of the Engineers' union, said he had been requested by CWA workers to call the meeting, and pointed out that 100 CWA craftsmen had joined the organization since Jan. 1. He explained the initiation fee of $25 had been waived and that CWA employés, when working, could pay $8 quarterly dues to the union, but when out of work they need not pay dues and still could retain their membership. At the close of the meeting 29 CWA men joined the union.

STORES, GUILDS FIGHT NRA CODE OF BOOKSELLERS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Prices of books at retail would be fixed at the retail price set by the publishers under the supplemental code for the booksellers' division of the retail trade group filed with the National Recovery administration today.

This provision was contained in the code filed by the American Booksellers' association at a hearing before Deputy Administrator Kenneth Dameron and came immediately under heavy fire from representatives of department stores, literary guilds, and NRA officials.

Representatives of publishers also took sides on the question, the association being supported by the National Association of Publishers and Trade Book Publishing, Inc., represented by Cass Canfield.

Arthur Brentano, in presenting the code, said that its approval is essential, if prevailing "unfair competition, unsound conditions, and unethical practices" are to be abolished.

E. S. McCawley, president of the Philadelphia Booksellers' association, called for adoption of the code, but suggested an amendment which would eliminate mail order subscription houses from its operation.

THOUSANDS ARE TAKEN OFF RELIEF BY CWA WAGES

Commission Official Gives Estimate for February.

Civil Works administration pay rolls have brought a sharp reduction in the number of persons on the relief rolls in the state. This was announced yesterday by Wilfred S. Reynolds, executive secretary of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission.

Mr. Reynolds estimates that the commission will be required to provide relief to 87,690 families in Cook county in February, as compared with 122,275 families in December. Figures for January are not yet available.

In addition to the reduction in the number of families requiring aid Mr. Reynolds estimated 21,337 unattached individuals will receive relief this month, as compared to 26,417 in December.

These figures, according to Mr. Reynolds, include not only the persons who will be carried over on the relief rolls from January, but also persons who may be given relief for the first time during the month, as well as others who may have been on relief and who were later able to maintain themselves for a time without aid, but now need assistance again.

Shows Effect of CWA.

The February estimate shows the effect of the CWA pay rolls on the county's relief load. The estimate divides the case load almost equally between the unemployment relief service and the county bureau of public welfare, which gives assistance primarily to those families confronted with problems other than unemployment. Both of these agencies operate under the relief commission.

In December the Unemployment Relief Service had a case load of 67,396 families, while the county bureau gave assistance to 54,879 families. During the present month, it is estimated, the case load of the Unemployment Relief service will be 44,000 and that of the county 43,690.

Educational Projects Here.

Ninety-eight civil works education service projects which will give teaching jobs to 182 persons in Chicago and Cook county have been approved by Mr. Reynolds. The largest project will be at the Marshall High school where eight persons will be employed to conduct junior college courses in history, English, shorthand, typing, and bookkeeping. The whole list of pojects will include instruction in 47 subjects.

PRESIDENT KEEPS HEALTHY IN SPITE OF WORK, WORRY

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—(AP)—The callers who troop to the White House, day and night, say almost a year of concentration on the nation's problems has made no inroads on the ruggedness of President Roosevelt's health.

Before the 1932 national convention in Chicago, Mr. Roosevelt underwent a physical examination for an insurance policy from which he emerged with a class A rating. Those in daily contact with him now say that health rating still holds.

He finds time to sandwich into his busy day a chance for exercise, a swim in the new White House pool that was built shortly after he took office. To this exercise, his friends credit much of his vigor.

The chief executive arrives at his office early in the morning. Recent vistors have found him in his study long after midnight, working.

EASY MONEY ALL GONE, BUT 6,400 PROJECTS WAIT

Federal Agencies Nab Lion's Share.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—All the 3 billion 300 million dollars of public works easy money is gone and there are still 6,400 projects clamoring for another 2 billion 900 million dollars.

That is the gist of the final report on the federal easy money fund which Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes, as public works administrator, turned in today.

While Secretary Ickes was revealing that he has allocated every nickel out of the first huge sum without being able to satisfy much more than half the demand, President Roosevelt was standing pat on his previous statement that at present he will not ask for more than another 500 million dollars for public works.

Appropriation Sleight of Hand.

The half billion for which the President is planning to ask will suffice only to keep work going for a third year on some of the long term projects which the PWA has started.

None of it will go for new projects, and the President has declared that he will not ask for more money until he sees how employment and business conditions are later in the year.

In his final accounting for public works money Secretary Ickes revealed that federal agencies, cut off from their ordinary appropriations by the Roosevelt economy program, have turned to the easy money fund and grabbed almost 2⅓ billion dollars of it to launch new activities or to continue and expand work which was supposed to be dropped under the economy régime.

Only 820 million dollars out of the 3 billion 300 millions was left to be cut up among all the nonfederal applications received for easy money after the federal bureaus had walked off with the lion's share.

Recipients of Cash.

This fact explains partially the long list of 6,400 nonfederal projects which call for another 2 billion 900 million and which are now left stranded.

Of this 820 million dollars doled out for nonfederal work 571 millions has gone to states, cities, counties, school districts, and other public authorities, 49 millions has gone to low-cost housing projects, and 200 millions has gone to railroads for equipment and construction.

Out of the billions turned over to federal agencies to protect them from the economy ax, every sort of activity from battleship construction to the study of bugs is being financed. Even the postoffice department has dipped into the easy money for departmental expenses.

Chicago in on Money.

Chicago having been given $52,191,500 for construction projects runs a poor second, however, to New York, which has almost five times as much.

The Chicago easy money projects are: Chicago sanitary district sewage plants, $41,948,000; Cook county nurses' dormitory, $2,040,500; outer drive bridge, $6,877,000, and school building, $1,326,000.

After Secretary Ickes had made public his easy money list the war department announced that it has awarded to the Warner Construction company, 173 West Madison street, Chicago, the $1,433,000 contract for building lock No. 11 on the Mississippi river near Rock Island.

FRENCH PREMIER FIRES CHIAPPE; 3 MINISTERS QUIT

Police Prefect's Ouster Stirs New Cabinet Crisis.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 3.—Defying the entire right wing of parliament and forcing three nationalist ministers to resign from his newly formed cabinet in the process, Premier Edouard Daladier today carried out the most drastic administrative housecleaning the third republic has known. The ousted cabinet men are Minister of War Jean Fabry, Minister of Finance Francois Pietri, and Gustave Doussain, undersecretary of technical instruction.

The shakeup first caught Jean Chiappe, powerful Corsican prefect of Paris police, who is popularly known as the "Little Napoleon." Daladier summarily removed him from office.

The premier took no chances with the famous Chiappe, whom the right regards as a bulwark against a left dictatorship and the left regards as the most dangerous enemy of the republic.

Deprived of Police Force.

Daladier offered him a fat job as resident general of Morocco. Before Chiappe had time to strike back, the government deprived him of his most powerful weapon—the police force—by installing Adrian Bonnefoy-Sibour, chief of the Versailles police, at the prefecture.

But later in the day Chiappe did strike back by refusing to accept the Morocco post. The fighting Corsican, who is ill abed, resents the stigma of having it appear that he was involved in the $60,000,000 Stavisky bond swindle.

Chiappe has been criticised for his failure to act more promptly in the Bayonne pawnshop scandal and to arrest Serge Stavisky, its founder, who committed suicide when finally cornered near the Swiss frontier.

The ousted prefect of police tonight insisted he was one of the most energetic prosecutors of Stavisky.

Why French Fear Chiappe.

The reason Chiappe was so feared by his opponents was not so much because of his well disciplined and well armed force of 13,000 men but because of the much more deadly weapon he possessed in the police files—secret reports turned in by police spies on every prominent man and woman in France. The haste with which Bonnefoy-Sibour occupied the prefecture may have something to do with those files.

The three cabinet members went into the discard when they protested Chiappe's displacement. They announced their intention to resign at once and Daladier unhesitatingly took steps to replace them.

Daladier's cleanup also shifted from their jobs Director Thome of the famed Surete Generale, or secret police, and Georges Pressard, brother-in-law of former Premier Camille Chautemps. Pressard, who as the chief attorney general, was held technically responsible for the 19 adjournments in the Stavisky case.

He changes places with M. Pailhe, counsellor of the French Supreme court. Calixte Jeay, director of personnel at the ministry of interior, becomes chief of the Surete Generale. Thome was transferred to the directorship of the state Comedie Francaise theater.

The drastic shakeup may be packed with dynamite.

Politically the situation means that Daladier, who originally was of the extreme left, but who had been flirting with the right, has renounced the support of the conservatives and centrists, whom he solicited when he formed the cabinet. Now he is falling back into the arms of the Socialists who have been attacking him.

This sets a picturesque precedent since the four day old Daladier cabinet has not even drafted its ministerial declaration, nor has appeared before the chamber of deputies to obtain a vote of confidence. Right wing politicians are accusing Daladier of wishing to set up a left dictatorship. They hint darkly at a civil war.

Police Ready for Trouble.

So tense was the situation tonight that Bonnefoy-Sibour was ordered to telephone Daladier every half hour to inform him if any trouble had started. Detachments of motorized police were held in readiness in case of disorders.

Some political observers believe Daladier has strengthened his position by the departure of Fabry and Pietri—Pietri especially, since Joseph Paul-Boncour, whom the Socialists trust, is reported to have agreed to enter the cabinet. He was foreign minister in the Chautemps government.

An extraordinary session of the cabinet was called for 10 a. m. tomorrow when the revamped ministry will be presented to President Albert Lebrun.

FOUR INSURANCE CHIEFS GUILTY; LEE ACQUITTED

Machir Dorsey Faces Term in Penitentiary.

Machir J. Dorsey, once wealthy promoter of life insurance companies, and three co-defendants were found guilty by a jury yesterday of conspiracy to loot the treasuries of the Security Life Insurance company of Chicago and the Northern States Life Insurance company of Hammond.

Two other defendants were acquitted by the jury. They are Attorney John H. S. Lee, associate in the law firm of former Senator Charles S. Deneen, and Bertram Day of Indianapolis, president of the Northern States Life Insurance company.

The jury fixed the punishment of Dorsey and another of the convicted defendants at the maximum, one to five years in the penitentiary. The jury made no recommendation, however, on the penalties to be imposed on the other two convicted defendants. These penalties will be fixed by Judge Benjamin Epstein, before whom the case was tried.

Lee Is Congratulated.

Attorney Lee, one of the prominent members of the Chicago Bar association, was congratulated on his acquittal by brother lawyers and members of his family, who were in court to hear the verdict, which was reached after an all night deliberation.

The defendants found guilty and the punishments inflicted by the jury are as follows:

MACHIR DORSEY, chairman of the board of the Northern States company and president of the Security Life company, was found guilty on all 18 counts in the indictment. His punishment was fixed at 1 to 5 years in the penitentiary and a fine of $1,000, the maximum for conspiracy. He is 59 years old.

EDWIN HULT, head of Edwin Hult & Co. of Hammond, was found guilty on all 18 counts and given the same sentence as Dorsey. His mortgage company is in the hands of a receiver. He is 62 years old, and for years was in the mortgage business in Des Moines.

C. EDWIN JOHNSON, vice president of the Security Life Insurance company, found guilty on all 18 counts. The jury did not order him sent to the penitentiary. Under the law, therefore, the judge will fix the punishment in his case, not to exceed one year in the county jail or a fine not to exceed $2,000, or any part of either or both. Johnson is 49 years old and formerly was in the insurance business in Moline.

HARRY W. HUTTIG, manufacturer of Muscatine, Ia., found guilty of all 18 counts under the same kind of a verdict as Johnson received. He is 65 years old.

Judge Epstein announced he would rule on new trial motions next Saturday and would then impose sentence if he sustains the findings of the jury. A question was raised by the defense attorneys as to the power of the judge to sentence the defendants under the findings of the jury. A Supreme court decision was cited to show that in a misdemeanor case—and conspiracy is a misdemeanor—a judge can impose a separate sentence on each of the counts on which the defendants were found guilty. This was done in a prohibition case, where separate sentences were imposed by a judge on all 70 counts.

Float Excessive Mortgages.

Dorsey and his co-defendants were charged with floating excessive mortgages on a tract of land near Waukegan which was known as the Manufacturers' Terminal corporation. These mortgages, which had a face value of approximately $1,700,000, were dumped into the treasuries of the Security Life Insurance company and its affiliate, the Northern States Life Insurance company, both of which the defendants controled. Machir and his aids then extracted $1,700,000 in good securities from the insurance companies which are now in receivership.

The Terminal company, according to the prosecutors, was never worth more than $500,000.

Buys Insurance Companies.

Before the depression Dorsey set out to gain control of several insurance companies which had a total of $1,800,000,000 of insurance in force. In order to do this, the state showed that Dorsey organized the Keystone Holding company with $1,000,000 which he borrowed in New York. His first insurance company was the Northern States which later absorbed the others.

Assistant State's Attorneys Robert Wright and Vernon Thompson, who presented the state's case, declared that the mortgages were floated on the treminal company so that Dorsey could pay off his $1,000,000 loan with good securities taken from the insurance companies. The Hult Mortgage company was organized to handle this transaction, the state charged.

Under the insurance laws the Northern States company could not take up the entire $1,700,000 mortgage issue, so Dorsey, through his Keystone Holding company, got control of the Security Life Insurance company. The mortgages were then split between both companies.

Gains Control of Property.

Huttig, the Iowa manufacturer, had obtained control of the Waukegan property, through financing a law suit brought by James H. Benjamin to obtain title to the property. Attorney Lee took a 25 per cent interest in the property as a fee for legal services in behalf of Hutig and Benjamin.

The evidence, however, showed that Attorney Lee had sold out his interest to Huttig before the mortgage transactions were completed with the insurance companies. It was also shown in his behalf that Lee had, as a minority stockholder, opposed sale of the mortgages to the insurance companies. He was voted down and his interest was bought out. The property was then placed in a dummy ownership in the name of Charles R. Surface, who was a state's witness.

"I am naturally pleased with my acquittal," said Attorney Lee. "I conclusively proved myself innocent during the trial."

The jurors said they acquitted Lee on the first ballot. They said they acquitted Day because they believed his testimony that he was only a "figurehead president" of the insurance company. He said he signed hundreds of checks in blank and was never given an accounting of what was done with the money.

Frees Lee on 10 Counts.

The trial began on Jan. 2. On Jan. 23 Judge Epstein ordered a directed verdict of not guilty in behalf of Attorney Lee on ten of the eighteen counts of the indictment.

"There is not a scintilla of evidence to connect Mr. Lee with the counts regarding the Security Life or the counts alleging that the officers and agents of this company and its affiliates bought and sold securities to these companies," said Judge Epstein in explaining his ruling.

The judge also indicated that he would, if he were a juror, vote to acq :t Mr. Lee on all the counts of the indictment. He added, however, that it was the jury's province, and not the judge's, to decide on matters of controversial fact.

Asks Bar to Investigate 'Ambulance Chasing' Case

The Chicago Bar association was asked yesterday by Judge Frank M. Padden in the Stockyards court to investigate the case of Samuel Adams, 3651 Grenshaw street, who is accused of "ambulance chasing." A formal charge of disorderly conduct was continued until Feb. 23. Adams was arrested Friday when he tried to use a fraudulent newspaper reporter's pass to interview an accident victim at the county hospital. Last week Herman Stenn was arrested in a south side police station on a similar charge.

TWO OFFICERS, 2 BANDITS DIE IN GUN BATTLE

One Shot; Oklahoma Troops Called.

Sapulpa, Okla., Feb. 3.—(AP)—Two Sapulpa police officers and two outlaws were killed in a gun battle at a farm home near here tonight. The owner of the farm and two of the bandits were captured.

Fear of mob violence prompted Gov. W. H. Murray to order a company of national guardsmen here from Tulsa when a crowd began to form in the vicinity of the jail where the three men are prisoners.

Rifle and pistol fire started as Sheriff Willis Strange of Creek county directed a raid on the farm home of Lee Davis, where, officers said, they were tipped that "some fellows that have been hijacking filling stations around here could be found."

Slain Entering House.

Police Chief Tom Brumley was shot to death entering the house, the signal for general firing which left three other men dead and one severely wounded.

Aussie Elliott, fugitive jail breaker under a fifty year sentence for armed robbery, was next to die.

Patrolman C. P. Lloyd and Raymond Moore, a confederate of Elliott, killed each other in a duel after the latter fled from the house.

Eldon Wilson, also under a fifty year sentence for armed robbery, was wounded.

Davis, the farmer, was arrested.

A half dozen officers accompanied Sheriff Strange to the Davis home. They did not know the identity of the suspects.

Brumley went to the back door, Strange and another officer to the front door, and others took their posts at windows.

Duel to Death in Weed Patch.

A moment later Moore, inside the house, saw Brumley entering the back door and fired, killing him. The shot caused general firing by both the officers and the outlaws. In a moment Elliott was dead and Wilson was wounded.

Moore escaped. Ten minutes later a farmer, W. D. Gambrill, told officers he had seen Moore hiding in a weed patch.

The group reassembled and surrounded the place. Lloyd crawled toward the weeds in a ravine. At the same time Moore lifted his head above the weeds. Both fired and both fell, dying in a few moments from head wounds.

Elliott and Wilson, both known as dangerous men, were wanted in Osage county for highway robbery.

ASSURES SENATE MacCRACKEN HAD FILES REMOVED

Official's Story Conflicts with Ex-Air Chief.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Evidence that William P. MacCracken, former assistant secretary of commerce for aviation, personally directed removal from his files of correspondence relating to air mail subsidies was given today before the special senate committee investigating postal subsidies to air mail companies.

The evidence will go into the record to be presented against the former Chicagoan, now a Washington attorney, when he is haled Monday before the bar of the senate. MacCracken was on bond today, charged with contempt of the senate for having permitted the removal of the correspondence in question after his files had been subpœnaed by the investigating committee headed by Senator Hugo Black [Dem., Ala.].

Denies All Responsibility.

Gilbert L. Given, assistant to President Harris M. Hanshue of Western Air Express, testified repeatedly before the committee that it was MacCracken who had selected the papers to be taken from the files. He had received word from Hanshue in New York, Given said, that before the files went to the committee "personal" documents were to be removed. Given asserted he did not know that the files already had been demanded by the committee.

Given had with him the half a hundred letters, telegrams, and other documents which he had sent to Hanshue, but which Hanshue had returned when he learned that MacCracken faced contempt charges on their account. As Given went through the papers, identifying them, he said often that it was MacCracken who had picked them out.

"I had no decision in the matter," he said on one occasion. "Mr. MacCracken simply took the letters out and turned them over to me."

When MacCracken appeared before the committee yesterday his testimony made it appear that he had known of the removal of the papers, but had had no hand in selecting or abstracting them.

Papers Burned That Night.

The other chief witness today was L. H. Brittin, executive vice president of Northwestern Airways, who was permitted by Frederick Lee, MacCracken's law partner, to remove "half a dozen papers o: a personal nature."

Brittin finally recalled that he had known the files were under subpœna when he visited MacCracken's office, but that he tore up the papers he took and threw them in his waste basket. And the waste baskets are cleared out and the waste burned every night."

"The papers seemingly were not so personal if you left them in Mr. MacCracken's file for six months," was one of Senator Black's comments.

From the testimony of J. A. Bradley, a postoffice inspector, it was learned that he and his partner had been assigned to watch MacCracken's files, but that the two had gone out to lunch together, leaving the files unguarded. Brittin said his visit to the files had been between 11 in the morning and 3 o'clock. Given went to MacCracken's office in the evening after it had closed for the day.

See Evidence of Coercion.

From the papers brought in by Given it appeared that the "personal" documents consisted principally of letters and telegrams relating to air mail contracts and subsidies and questions regarding routes.

Most significant, according to Senator Black, was a memorandum from Hanshu. to MacCracken and J. J. Frye, vice president of Western Air Express. The senator contended that it tended to prove the theory on which the committee is operating, that is, that Walter F. Brown, postmaster general under President Hoover, had given mail subsidies to favored companies, disregarding the law as to competitive bids, and had dominated certain companies, forcing them into mergers against their will.

"The deal for the Aero corporation was hardly completed," the memorandum says, "when we were advised by the postmaster general that we must sell the Standard Air line to Aviation corporation and combine our Kansas City and San Francisco division with T. A. T. This did not set well with our didectors, and they advised me to stand 'pat' and insist on the postoffice department giving us mail on our portion of the two transcontinentals.

"However, after several conferences with the postmaster general I could see that this could not be done without a battle, which might upset temporarily the whole plan and work a hardship on every one in the industry, so I consented to make an attempt to merge the properties of the T. A. T. and W. A. E. on the Central Transcontinental on a 50-50 basis.

"To sum up, the directors are not pleased with the deal given them by the postmaster general; nor with the merger with T. A. T., whereby they lose their most valuable asset, the Alhambra airport; nor with two phases of the agreement with the Aviation corporation; nor with the fact that they have to negotiate a loan to meet obligations brought about by agreemnts, the emoluments of which they consider of doubtful value."

PLACED UNDER SENATE ARREST

MacCracken Jr., former assistant secretary of commerce for aviation (left), who was placed under arrest by the United States senate on Friday after he admitted that he had permitted documents to be taken from his files which were wanted in senate air mail investigation. SENATE OVERRULES SERGEANT-AT-ARMS' WIFE AS REAL BOSS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 4.—[U. P.]—Senate Sergeant-at-Arms Chesley Jurney last night was ordered to arrest former Assistant Secretary of Commerce W. P. MacCracken Jr.

Before serving MacCracken with a "dead or alive" arrest warrant, Jurney telephoned his wife.

"Honey," he said, "I can't make that dinner engagement. I've got to arrest a man."

There was a long pause. Then:

"No, darling, I'm not joking, I'm on my way to arrest Bill MacCracken."

A longer pause ensued. The usually jovial Jurney waited, patiently, mournfully. Again:

"But, honey, this is an order of the senate. I'm sorry. I'll see you later."

FRITZI SCHEFF'S HOME SLIPS; SHE LOSES JOB AGAIN

Eclipsed Star Needs $2,000 in 2 Months.

New York, Feb. 3.—(AP)—Fritzi Scheff, who sang of yore for $2,000 a week, ended today her engagement as a tap room hostess.

So Fritzi, once of "Mlle. Modiste," is out of a job, and a mortgage foreclosure looms ahead.

A minus $2,000—what, in her heyday, would have been one week's salary!—will part her from her home in two months unless something turns up. The court has granted three extensions, and even optimistic Fritzi doesn't hope for another.

"It was fine while it lasted," she said of her tap room engagement. "I earned enough to live. But, of course, everything must have an end.

"What will I be doing tomorrow or two weeks from now? That's more than I can tell. But I'll find something."

She sat in a west side hotel room, not far off Broadway where she made her fame. "A foothold," she calls the room—"a little square."

On the walls were some prints of operetta scenes, and in flower pots some plants she won at Coney Island. Her dog, Ko-Ko, lay at her feet.

Fritzi tossed her titian bob and shrugged her shoulders. "I never lie down and die," she said.

Not that Fritzi has aged. She just began young. She was singing at 5, and at 18 was with the Metropolitan. "Flexible," she calls herself. She did everything. Opera, operetta, musical comedy—night clubs, park casinos, radio, "the road"—they all knew Fritzi Scheff.

She has had her home, a four acre place on a Connecticut mountain top, since 1917. She calls it "Melodie Cottage." There are fruit trees and flowers. "You know how it feels when you've planted them," said Fritzi.

4 AMERICANS WIN PARDON; PALMA DELAYS RELEASE

Awaits Official Notice of High Court's Decision.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PALMA, Mallorca, Feb. 3.—In the freezing atmosphere of the county jail, Mrs. Caroline Lockwood and her three American companions in trouble heard today that the governing commission of the Supreme court in Madrid, which is composed of the six highest judges in the land, had pardoned them. The quartet has been in difficulties with the Spanish authorities since they became involved in a clash with a civil guard here last June.

The four Americans are Mrs. Lockwood, her husband, Clinton B. Lockwood of West Springfield, Mass.; Roderick F. Mead of New York City, and Edmund W. Blodgett of Stamford, Conn. A fifth American, Rutherford Fullerton of Columbus, O., was released earlier.

Ordered Out of Mallorca.

The four Americans also heard that the Spanish law has not yet finished with them and that one of the conditions of their release is that they must leave the island of Mallorca.

Although the Madrid authorities, urged on by United States Ambassador Claude G. Bowers, took the trouble to telephone the court decision to Palma in order that the prisoners could be set at liberty, the local officials took this last chance to show their lack of gallantry. They sat back to await official notification of the release through the usual channels. The governor of the prison said:

"I received the news of the pardon by telephone this afternoon, but I need an official telegram authorizing the release before I can do anything. I imagine the prisoners will be set free Monday or Tuesday."

Mrs. Lockwood Lonely.

It is explained in legal circles that the Supreme court's order prohibiting the unlucky Americans from residing in Palma is the general rule applied in the case of all pardons.

Mrs. Lockwood complains most of loneliness. She is the only prisoner in the women's section of the Palma jail, where she has spent the last fortnight. Despite the stove in her cell, she finds it necessary to spend most of her time in bed to keep warm.

Mead hopes to leave at once for Paris on his release for his much delayed wedding. He and his bride-to-be, Jarvis Kerr, had hoped to return to Polma to live. Mr. and Mrs. Lockwood also had planned to continue their residence on the island.

TRAYLOR'S DAY IS BEST SINCE ILLNESS BEGAN

Melvin A. Traylor, president of the First National bank, yesterday experienced his "best day" since he was stricken with pneumonia twenty-two days ago.

"Mr. Traylor's condition is good," said Dr. William R. Cubbins, chief attending physician, last night. "His color is good, his temperature is 99.5, his pulse 104, and his respiration 16 to 18. These are all favorable signs."

Another encouraging sign, Dr. Cubbins said, was that no setbacks occurred yesterday. Since Mr. Traylor's illness became serious he has suffered these setbacks in 48 hour cycles. One of those periodic relapses was looked for yesterday. It did not develop.

Because of the improvement in the banker's condition he was removed yesterday for half hour periods from the oxygen tent in which he has been kept for the last thirteen days.

INDIANA WOMEN VIEW HOOSIER SALON

Women from nearly 100 Indiana cities and towns viewed the Hoosier salon in the Marshall Field galleries yesterday in celebration of Tri Kappa-Indiana day. Coming to Festival

Plans for bringing hundreds of Indiana musicians to Chicago next August for the fifth Chicagoland Music Festival, sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and associated newspapers in the middle west, were discussed yesterday at the annual Indiana day Hoosier salon luncheon in the Wedgwood room of Marshall Field's. The luncheon was attended by 250 delegates of Tri Kappa sorority.

"We are proud of the help we have given artists of Indiana in coöperation with the Hoosier salon and we may find it possible to help Indiana musicians," said Mrs. Chalmer Schafer of Fort Wayne, grand president of Tri Kappa.

Mrs. Charles Reagan, president of the Tri Kappa associate chapter of Chicago, commended the plan of taking part in the music festival.

TRIO CAPTURED IN THEFT AFTER BATTLING POLICE

Three men, one a former policeman, who were captured early yesterday after a running gun battle with a police squad in the Garfield park district, were held at the detective bureau charged with the robbery of the G. Peterson cigar store at 492 Milwaukee avenue. The seized men are Edward Ryan, 35 years old, 5730 South Ashland avenue, who until a year ago was a city policeman for five years; John Conroy, 34 years old, 5520 South Marshfield avenue, a clerk, and James Murphy, 37 years old, 5506 Lake Park avenue, a druggist.

The trio was captured after a squad, commanded by Sergt. John Hanrahan, sighted their car at Halsted street and Austin avenue. In the ensuing chase the police fired twenty shotgun charges and were fired on a dozen times.

GREEK DOCTORS NOW DISAGREE ON INSULL'S HEALTH

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ATHENS, Feb. 3.—A third medical examination to determine whether Samuel Insull, fugitive Chicago utilities promoter, is able to take a boat or train out of Greece was completed at his bedside today. The reports of the two new specialists chosen by the government now are being drawn up and by Monday should be in the hands of the cabinet.

It was learned on good authority tonight that the two doctors differ. Prof. Spyro Livieratos found Insull to be a tired old man, but able to travel. Livieratos late today expressed fear that his associate in the diagnosis, Prof. Vladimir Bensis, will not agree.

The pair will meet tomorrow morning to discuss their separate findings. If they are able to make an unanimous report they will sign the same document, which will be sent to Minister of Interior John Moundjourides. If they cannot, individual reports will be returned.

ROBBERS GET EXPERIENCE.

Three men who robbed the John Landon Teaming company office at 16 South Desplaines street yesterday got nothing but experience. They found the company's safe open, but there was no money in it.

'STOP KELLY' IS FARLEY THEME IN BOSS FIGHT

Seeks to Seat "Friend" of White House.

New York, Feb. 3.—[Special.]—The fight for the Democratic leadership of Brooklyn, which has been in progress since the death of John H. McCooey, reached an acute stage today with the arrival of Postmaster General James A Farley, state and national chairman.

Mr. Farley, it was learned, has no intention of accepting Frank V. Kelly, leader of the fourth assembly district, who is believed at present to have the support of a majority of the executive committee. The election of Mr. Kelly in opposition to the wish of the Roosevelt administration, will undoubtedly result in a primary fight in virtually every Brooklyn assembly district next September.

Favors Postmaster.

Postmaster Frances J. Sinnott, leader of the twenty-second district, who was one of the five district leaders to support Joseph V. McKee, recovery party candidate for mayor, is believed to be Mr. Farley's first choice for the county leadership. Mr. Farley, however, never has said definitely that he would accept no other candidate and there is a possibility that he might accept Sheriff Frank J. Quayle of the first district, who was one of the recovery party group, or even some other district leader not too closely identified with the McCooey leadership.

Under the rules of the Kings county Democratic committee, the chairman of the executive committee, who is the county leader, must be a member of the Democratic state committee. That has prevented consideration of an outsider for the leadership, the rules of the Kings county organization differing from those of Tammany which have no such restriction.

See Agreement Next Week.

Mr. Farley will confer tomorrow with some of the Brooklyn district leaders before his return to Washington in the hope of reaching an agreement so that a new leader may be elected next week.

While it is admitted that Mr. Kelly on the face of it appears to have a majority of the executive committee, there is reason to believe that some of those supporting Mr. Kelly might be weaned away from him by the promise of federal patronage. The important offices of United States attorney and United States marshal for the eastern New York district are yet to be filled and there is a host of smaller jobs, many more than even the well informed politicians realize, to be parceled out.

BYRD PARTY LANDS 450 TONS OF SUPPLIES; HAULS THEM TO CAMP

BAY OF WHALES, Antarctica, Feb. 3.—(AP)—[Via Mackay Radio.]—Scattered odds and ends and personal gear, together with 250 tons of coal and 75 tons of lumber from the supply ship Bear of Oakland, was all that remained today to be unloaded, completing a Herculean two weeks' task for the second Byrd Antarctic expedition.

Deck officers of Admiral Byrd's flagship reported that the last of 450 tons of stores and scientific equipment had been unloaded after the strenuous battle with crumbling ice which threatened to delay the process interminably. Admiral Byrd mobilized the crew of the flagship and that of the Bear of Oakland into the remaining task of moving supplies from caches into the main camp.

The process of moving the supplies is a picturesque interlude in the sub-Arctic wastes. Relay teams and tractors crawl over temporary bridges crossing deep crevices in the ice.

The weather continues astonishingly calm, but the thermometer is dropping steadily. The last three night shifts have had to work in temperatures of 10 to 15 degrees below zero. Last night a number of men were slightly frost-bitten.

LEAVES GAME AND KILLS SELF.

Leaving two friends with whom he had been playing cards Rudolph Schaffel, 48 years old, a CWA worker, 2434 South East avenue, Berwyn, last night killed himself with a revolver. Joseph Teska, 2427 South East avenue, and Joseph Holholka, 2443 South East avenue, found Schaffel's body in the basement.

THRONGS ATTEND WEDDINGS OF 3 SOCIETY GIRLS

Ceremonies Are Held in Churches.

BY JUDITH CASS.

Three large-church weddings held the spotlight yesterday afternoon for several hundred society folk in Chicago and on the north shore.

Miss Florence Otis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph C. Otis, exchanged her wedding vows with Wade Fetzer Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Wade Fetzer of Hinsdale, at 4:30 o'clock in the Fourth Presbyterian church.

At the same hour Miss Sarah May Morey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Henry Morey of Evanston, became the bride of Daniel Leonard, son of John R. Leonard of Winnetka, in Christ church, Winnetka. In still another 4:30 o'clock wedding Miss Dorothy Nunn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert W. Nunn of Highland Park, was married to Thomas S. Harrison Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas S. Harrison of Encinitas, Cal., in Trinity Episcopal church in Highland Park.

Marriage Service at Church.

Dr. Harrison Ray Anderson, pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church, read the marriage service for Mr. Fetzer and his bride before an altar decorated with palms and calla lilies and lighted by dozens of slim white tapers.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in shimmering white satin fashioned with a court train trimmed with rose point lace that is an heirloom in the Otis family. Over the train floated a delicate tulle veil. The bride carried a muff of white orchids and valley lilies. Preceding her to the altar were her sister, Mrs. Robert S. Burns, as matron of honor; Miss Jeanette Hyde of Hartford, Conn., as maid of honor, and eight bridesmaids.

The bridesmaids included Miss Helen La Chance, Miss Betty Kellogg, Miss Dorothy Senn, Mrs. George Curtis Bird, Mrs. John Sherman, Miss Mary Jane Fetzer, Mrs. James Otis, and Mrs. Ralph C. Otis Jr. John Fetzer was best man.

A reception was held at the Fortnightly club after the wedding service. A guest at both the wedding and reception was Mrs. William H. Fetzer, the 92 year old grandmother of the bridegroom.

Mr. Fetzer and his bride left last night on a wedding trip that will take them to Honolulu for a month. On their return to Chicago they will make their home on the near north side.

Bride Escorted by Father.

Christ church in Winnetka was filled for the wedding of Miss Morey and Mr. Leonard. The service was read by the Rev. E. Ashley Gerhard, rector. The bride, who walked down the aisle with her father, wore a gown of ivory satin designed on simple lines. At the neckline were caught two Alençon lace butterflies that the bridegroom's mother, the late Mrs. Leonard, wore on her wedding gown. In the bride's tulle veil was some of the old lace that had belonged to Mrs. Hibbard Casselberry, a sister of the bridegroom.

The bride was attended by her mother as matron of honor, while the senior Mr. Leonard was best man. Miss Genevieve Koester was the maid of honor, and Mrs. Casselberry, Miss Deborah Leonard, Miss Marcelle Mueller, and Mrs. Thomas Hendricks of Washington, D. C., were bridesmaids.

After the service there was a reception at the Leonard home, Wildacre, in Winnetka. And after this Mr. Leonard and his bride left for a month's holiday in the southwest. They will make their home on the north shore.

Marriage in Highland Park.

Dr. Hubert Carleton, rector of St. Augustine's church in Wilmette, read the marriage service for Miss Nunn and Mr. Harrison at Trinity Episcopal church in Highland Park.

A long court train finished the bride's lace gown and from a tiny lace cap fell her long tulle veil.

Mrs. Herbert E. Nunn Jr. was matron of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Shirley McKay, Miss Ann Scharer of New York, Miss Eleanor Keller of Toledo, and Miss Florence Hastings of Philadelphia. Harry Johanson of St. Louis was best man for Mr. Harrison.

After a reception at the Nunn home Mr. Harrison and his bride left for a motor trip in the east. They are to make their home in Cleveland.

DOROTHY NUNN, FLORENCE OTIS, AND SARAH MAY MOREY BECOME BRIDES

NORMAN THOMAS' SON IS MARRIED IN CHURCH BUILT 275 YEARS AGO

New York, Feb. 3.—(AP)—A church that served as a barracks for British soldiers in the revolutionary war was the scene today of a brilliant wedding.

William Stewart Thomas, the son of Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President of the United States in 1932, and Mary Gabrielle Campbell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Allen Campbell of East Norwich, chose the edifice—the old First church at Huntington, L. I.—for their wedding.

The church is 275 years old.

CHINESE GIRL, 6, STARTS TRIP TO HONOLULU ALONE

With only American dolls for company a six year old Chinese miss, Chicago born, started last night on a journey to Honolulu. Her name is Dagmar Chu and she will live with her father, Ngu Fook Chu, a dentist, and attend school. She has made her home here with her mother, Mrs. Gwendolyn Chu, at 1503 West 112th place, who expects to join her later.

Lugging a small suitcase Dagmar resolutely boarded the Overland limited of the Chicago and North Western railway. Upon her arrival in San Francisco a steamship representative will put her aboard the S. S. Monterey, which will carry her to Honolulu.

Earlier in the afternoon Dagmar, with slight concern over her prospective ocean voyage, dressed her dolls for the trip. She observed that the meat sandwiches she was to take along had not been made, and wondered if her pretty blue bead bag had been packed. Asked if she had taken any long journeys before she replied, casually: "O, yes, I was at Niagara Falls and in Canada and in New York when I took a boat ride to see the Statue of Liberty."

U. S. ORDERS CHICAGO TO CHANGE BRIDGES OVER CALUMET RIVER

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—(AP)—The war department today issued orders requiring the alteration of bridges over Calumet river near Chicago to allow vessels to use the waterway as far upstream as turning basin No. 5, where lake vessels turn around after entering the river.

The city of Chicago has been directed to alter its bridge across the river at Torrence avenue so as to provide a minimum vertical clearance above Chicago datum of twenty-one feet, when closed and 125 feet when opened. It is specified the alterations should be completed within two years.

The war department also issued notice to the New York, Chicago and St. Louis railway company to alter the pier protection at its bridge near turning basin No. 5, by changing the direction of the pier so that the west end will be 10 feet south and the east end 10 feet north of the ends of the existing pier protection. The purpose of this change is to more nearly align the pier protection with the direction of the channel. One year is to be allowed to complete the alteration.

Ex-Pugilist Turns Out to Be Poor Holdup Victim

If there is anything William Hall, a former pugilist, resents it is to find holdup men in his room. Mr. Hall, who lives in the Strand hotel, 6323 Cottage Grove avenue, was awakened yesterday morning by a rough voice commanding him to be still while he was held up. Instead of obeying, he leaped from his bed, swung a haymaker and knocked out the intruder. The latter, who was armed only with a toy pistol, is Jack McManus, 26 years old, 5516 Drexel avenue. He has been identified as the perpetrator of four other robberies.

Sergeant Recovers Own Goods Stolen by Neighbor

Sergt. Walter Viscount of the Hyde Park police yesterday recovered some of the loot taken from his apartment by a burglar who lived in another apartment in the same building, 5516 Drexel boulevard. Woodlawn police Friday night seized William Keane, 26 years old, the alleged burglar, as he was prowling in a hotel at 6327 Cottage Grove avenue. Sergt. Viscount searched the suspect's rooms and found his wife's wrist watch and a vacuum cleaner.

NAVY PLANS CAMP FOR 200 SAILORS AT THE '34 FAIR

Visitors to the World's Fair this year may see some of Uncle Sam's sailors there. It was learned yesterday that the navy department has under consideration a plan to place a camp of about 200 bluejackets in the Exposition grounds. Though arrangements have not yet been completed with the chief of naval operations in Washington, Admiral Wat T. Cluverius, commandant of the 9th naval district, said that negotiations for such an exhibit are under way.

The plan being discussed is to assemble a provisional battalion of sailors from various ships of the United States fleet upon its arrival in the Atlantic ocean and bring the detail and its equipment to the Fair about the latter part of June. The men would have to return to the Atlantic coast before the fleet leaves New York on Sept. 17 for the Pacific.

If there is enough room on Northerly Island for two camps the bluejackets probably will pitch their tents there, near the army troops which last year were quartered at Camp Whistler at the south end of the Exposition grounds.

IDENTIFY FINGERPRINTS.

Curran, held for questioning in connection with a $14,000 bank robbery and slaying in Needham yesterday, corresponded with fingerprints of a "James F. Curran," wanted for bank robberies in Washington and Philadelphia.

OIL WAR ENDED BY NEW ZEALAND; FIXES GAS PRICES

Enters Business on Plea of Auto Owners.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

AUCKLAND, N. Z., Feb. 3.—By stepping into the trading arena and taking the power to fix the price of gasoline, the New Zealand government has ended one of the most spectacular oil wars in the Pacific.

Adversaries in the battle were American and British oil companies, which in this case presented a solid front, and Associated Motorists Petrol, Ltd. Associated Motorists is a large New Zealand company which began importing oil from the Russian wells on the Caspian sea a year ago.

The New Zealand corporation chartered tankers to bring Russian oil to New Zealand. The formation of the corporation was the outcome of the fact that gasoline in this country is probably more expensive than anywhere in the world. First grade gasoline sells for a minimum of 44 cents and ranges as high as 56 cents a gallon in far-inland towns where it has to be carried by railroads. Distribution charges are enormous as practically no oil is produced in New Zealand. The oil supply is brought here by tankers, stored and distributed by railway. The Shell Oil of Australasia alone has more than $10,000,000 invested in distributional plants.

16 Cents a Gallon Tax.

These factors caused the price of gasoline to skyrocket in New Zealand. The government helped to raise the price by taxing it at the rate of 16 cents a gallon. The Associated Motorists, Ltd., was created to combat the rising prices.

For years motorists fretted about the steadily increasing cost of running their automobiles. They were powerful because in 1928 one man in every five owned an auto. Associated Motorists organized themselves on the basis of an appeal to self-interest.

"Take shares in our corporation," they said to the motorists, "and we will guarantee you a rebate of at least 4 cents on the market price when our gasoline is landed here."

This appeal worked well, especially in the ranks of the service station operators. Associated Motorists thus carried the coöperative principle into the field of oil. It had captured one-fifth of the total trade.

Rivals Reduce Prices.

But Associated Motorists calculated without full knowledge of the competitive ability of the other oil companies. On the very day the first tanker from the Black sea sailed into the harbor the American and British companies cut their prices four cents a gallon. Then they began a campaign of steadily reducing regional prices until these were lowered on an average of 12 cents a gallon. Associated Motorists was in a tough spot. It had promised its stockholders supplies of gasoline at four cents under the market price. Its financial structure had not been built on the anticipation of having to supply gasoline at 16 cents under the ruling prices. For a year Associated Motorists fought a losing battle. Then it appealed to parliament.

The conflict was referred to a committee of the house of representatives in December. The committee reported that the progressive fall in prices was due to the operations of Associated Motorists and the prices were likely to destroy competition among retailers. The committee added the destruction of competition would result in a monopoly with increased prices. It referred the matter to the government with the recommendation that special legislation should be passed to control prices.

Import Costs Rise.

As evidence of the fact the decline in price had been directed against Associated Motorists, the committee pointed out that in a year's time the cost of importing oil had risen by almost 5 cents as the result of higher exchange charges and other causes. The committee said the American and British companies' reduction of 12 cents a gallon represented a concession of 17 cents to the retailers. In a few months' operation Associated Motorists had saved the country over $11,000,000 in reduced prices for gasoline, the committee discovered.

It was on this report that the government acted. A bill was passed providing for the fixing of "fair and reasonable prices" for the sale of gasoline.

This decision represents an interesting departure from peace time procedure in this country. The only previous occasion in which the government assumed p wer to fix prices was during the world war.

TRACES ADVANCE OF TURKEY UNDER DICTATOR KEMAL

Foreign Relations Council Hears Dr. Kohn.

The world-wide movement toward nationalistic self-sufficiency, particularly in the east, has been a contributing factor to depressed world economic conditions, Dr. Hans Kohn told the Chicago council on foreign relations yesterday at the Palmer house. Eastern markets, formerly wide open to western goods, have been narrowed under this individualistic influence, he said, leading to curtailed production and idleness in the industrial nations of the west.

Dr. Kohn, political science lecturer at the Workmen's seminary in Palestine and a student of near east national movements, discussed the new Turkey under the dictatorship of Mustapha Kemal Pasha.

Cites National Transition.

A peaceful revolution, breaking completely with the traditions of the past, is sweeping Turkey's cultural, economic, and political background into oblivion, he said. A new language has been created, a purely secular state established, and mass education instituted. Islam has been uprooted, Dr. Kohn declared, and an intense nationalism substituted.

All Turkey has become a school for modernization along European lines, he said. This schooling includes the industries, agricultural pursuits, business, and home life. The emancipation of women, whose former home life Dr. Kohn described as "sweet and nice," has progressed to the point where even policemen's jobs are filled by women.

Points Similarity to Russia.

Dr. Kohn likened Turkey's revolution to the transition evidenced in soviet Russia. In both countries, he pointed out, education was at a low level; many persons could neither read nor write. Accordingly, it has been comparatively easy to introduce a new Turkish language, and teach a new nationalism. New school buildings have sprung up in widespread areas, he said.

Turkey, under Kemal, intends to be outdistanced by no nation, said Dr. Kohn, and is relying on help from the United States and Russia in solution of its major problem, that of industrialization.

The youth of Turkey is solidly supporting Kemal, he asserted. He contrasted the dictator with the young Turks of a few years ago and said that the Kemal revolution reaches down to the lowest classes.

"Miss McDowell has encouraged the colored people in all fields of endeavor and has always been their friend," Albert B. George, former municipal judge and former member of the parole board, said:

M. P. Webster, Chicago district president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, recalled that when Negro labor first tried to organize Miss McDowell took a stand in their behalf.

Alfred K. Stern, secretary of the Julius Rosenwald fund and chairman of the Illinois state housing commission, also spoke.

ANIMALS CAUGHT IN GUATEMALA REACH CHICAGO

A shipment of live animals and reptiles collected by the Leon Mandel Gautemala expedition of the Field museum arrived in Chicago last night from New Orleans on an Illinois Central train. The collection was unloaded by attachés of the Field museum under the direction of Mr. Mandel.

Among the animals in the shipment were three specimens of fer de lance, one of the most dangerous serpents of Central America; three boa constrictors, and tree snakes, iguanas, and two specimens of agouti, a hoofed rodent which in some ways resembles a small deer.

The animals were loaded in trucks and taken to the Chicago Zoological society's zoo at Brookfield, where they will be placed upon display. When they die the specimens will be mounted and returned to the museum for addition to the department of zoology.

TIFFANY HOME RUINED BY FIRE; DAMAGE $100,000

New York, Feb. 3.—[Special.]—The home of Charles L. Tiffany, vice president of Tiffany & Co., jewelers, was wrecked today by fire. Furnishings worth more than $100,000 were ruined.

The building, a six story structure is owned by Mr. Tiffany and Samuel J. Fuller, a banker, who until a short time ago occupied the upper three floors of the building. Mr. Fuller recently sublet his portion of the house to Archibald Douglas, lawyer and a trustee of Columbia university.

Rare tapestries, rugs, and object d'art in the Tiffany home were virtually ruined by smoke and water and the front part of the building was so badly weakened by the fire that as a precaution firemen ripped up the floorings.

Several valuable sixteenth and seventeenth century paintings owned by Mr. Fuller, which were in the Douglas' part of the house, were also severly damaged.

BRITON URGES YANKS TO FINANCE TURKEY'S FIVE YEAR SCHEME

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 3.—"Any American millionaire with $60,000,000 to spare on the best scheme in the world could today grab up the Turkish five year plan." This statement was made today by Lieut. Col. Arthur John Barry, head of the firm A. J. Barry and Partners, Dartmouth house, and a partner in the world famous house of Sir John Wolfe Barry company, civil engineers.

Col. Barry recently returned from a business trip to Turkey. During the visit here of the coal commission of the Turkish trade delegation he was in constant touch with its members. The colonel deplored the attitude of the financial section of London which drove away their business. He added that Turkey never in all its long diplomatic history with European powers had been known to default. Each régime swiftly succeeding its predecessor during 25 years of revolution had honored the state's signature.

Unfortunately, Barry said, European powers in dealing with Turkey on purely commercial matters always introduced extraneous subjects. In this connection, he said, America has the pull. She has no Ottoman debt complex, no Mosul oil fields bitterness, and no Franco-Turkish frontier problem to contend with. If there were no crisis in America, it is the firm conviction of the Turks that America could handle their plan.

Col. Barry declared he is convinced by his recent experiences in Turkey that the Kemalists would not borrow money from any European power. They asked that credits be secured on government bills. They would like to deal with British firms though they paid a higher price. They have, however, been rebuffed.

MEXICO OFFERS U. S. MARKET FOR LARD AND AUTOS

Proposes Barter Scheme to Washington.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 3.—Mexico is prepared to sign a trade agreement which will add many millions of dollars worth of United States exports of lard, machinery, and autos to this country in return for lower duties on shipments of thin cattle and fresh vegetables to the northern market. This is the entering wedge for a more general agreement.

Memoranda of preliminary proposals which have gone forward to Washington from her were made available to THE TRIBUNE today. Indications are that concrete action is possible at once with a minimum of economic disturbance to the domestic enterprise of either country.

Praise Tribune Campaign.

Friendly interest is shown everywhere here to THE TRIBUNE's wider market drive, and the present is considered the greatest opportunity that has existed in a century for the establishment of reciprocal tariffs between Mexico and the United States.

The London and Montevideo economic conferences developed the right spirit of friendly coöperation, but it must be translated into quick action. Germany and Great Britain are increasing their trade here as a result of resentment aroused by the 1930 United States tariff.

The question of reducing duties on fresh tomatoes and green peas produced in the Mexican states of Sonora and Sinaloa from December to April is of interest to producers in Mexico, many of whom are Americans. Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles, Mexico's real leader in an economic way, is concerned in this as a natural development of the great west coast delta, where he has established coöperatives and seeks to raise the standard of living of laborers on their own lands. His son, Rodolfo Calles, is governor of Sonora, which he has built into one of the strongest states.

Memorandum Is Quoted.

The memorandum on this subject follows:

"These vegetables [tomatoes and peas] come in at a time when there is little competition in the United States, except for a small period on peas from California and for a somewhat greater period on tomatoes from Florida. The three principal sources of fresh tomatoes during the winter months are Cuba, Mexico, and Florida. [The British Bahamas also supply them, but they buy nothing from the United States.]"

Until the passage of the Smoot-Hawley tariff law, it is pointed out, these vegetables entered practically free into the United States. After the tariff was passed a duty of ½ cent a pound was placed on them. This later was increased to 3 cents a pound on fresh tomatoes and 3.9 cents on fresh peas. This means about $630 on a carload of tomatoes and $700 on a carload of peas.

Exports Show Decrease.

In 1927 8,000 carloads were exported. In 1933 this decreased to 2,500 carloads, on which $1,500,000 was paid in duties to the United States. Between 75 and 80 per cent of the sale price at the destination for these vegetables was spent in the United States for duties, transportation, sales costs, seeds, and other expenses, and for merchandise, automobiles, agricultural machinery, and chemicals for pest control used in connection with production.

"What we desire is that these duties be eliminated and, if that be considered not advisable, that they be reduced not less than 50 per cent," the memorandum says. "If this is done we will continue to function. These vegetables move at a time when traffic is light on the railroads and help to give work to a great many of our people."

In return for this Mexico might reduce the lard and pork products tariff and, if the American quota of thin cattle is increased to, say, 200,000 head, which is also just about what Canada is asking from the United States, Mexico also will let in automobiles, farm machinery and tractors, and might be inclined to buy rails from the United States instead of from Belgium.

What the lard bargain alone would mean for the United States is shown in the figures for 1930, when Mexico bought $8,425,000 worth. For the first four months of 1933 this business was only $625,000. In 1930 the United States bought 170,959 head of cattle from Mexico to the value of $4,539,847. In the first four months in 1933 the figure was 30,739 head. The United States tariff of 1930 raised the duty on live cattle to 2½ cents per pound on animals under 700 pounds and 3 cents per pound over that weight.

The memorandum on this subject states that for the years 1828, 1929, and 1930 the United States sold to Mexico $25,000,000 worth of lard and pork, and bought $15,000,000 worth of Mexican cattle.

"American farmers are clamoring for a larger export market for hogs and hog products," the memorandum continues. "If the export market for lard is broadened there will be a great benefit to the hog market, which will react favorably on the cattle market."

Asks Reciprocal Tariff Cut.

"Our proposal is that Mexico reduce the lard and pork products tariff, and at the same time the United States eliminate or reduce the feeder cattle tariff. This will help decrease the surplus of American pasturage and live stock feeds, to the benefit of the American farmers. Many more people will be benefited, for the present tariff on cattle benefits only the actual producer, or relatively few individuals with large herds in the western range states."

It is stated that at the most Mexico would only send 2 per cent of the cattle slaughtered annually in the United States, and this detrimental effect would be outweighed by the strengthening effect on the grain and grass markets of middle west farmers and would help the railroads.

The village of Lansing was ordered yesterday to pay $1,000 damages to John R. Robertson & Co., real estate subdividers, for dumping untreated sewage into the Little Calumet river and thereby depreciating the values of property owned by the company. A suit against the village, heard by a jury before Judge Charles A. Williams in the Superior court, had sought a $100,000 judgment.

Several months ago Chicago Heights was ordered by a court to pay the Robertson company $7,500 in a similar case. Other suits are pending against Hammond in the federal court here, and against Calumet City in the Superior court. An injunction was issued two years ago in the Superior court to restrain the villages from polluting the river, but, according to legal action, none of them has halted the practice.

Jacob De Young, a resident of Lansing, testified at the trial that before the village started dumping its sewage in the Little Calumet, he had caught fish weighing seven or eight pounds there. Now, he said, there are no fish, but the scum on the river is so thick that rats can scurry across.

GANGS BROKEN, KEEP UP FIGHT! LOESCH URGES

History of Gunmen's Fall Is Recounted.

by Capone gunners, and three of his brothers were slain by enemy bullets, but he managed to make himself a fortune. He still lives. Klondike O'Donnell also lives. His history was less colorful because he never bucked Capone.

Slaying of Dean O'Banion.

Dean O'Banion and Ted Newberry, in order, ran gang activities on the north side. O'Banion was slain at the height of his power by supposed friends who shook his gun hand and pumped lead into him at the same time. Newberry was killed in 1933, a victim of a gang "ride." George [Bugs] Moran, who made a truce with Capone, still lives, but he says he has retired and now is a farmer.

George [Red] Barker and William [Three Fingered Jack] White at the age of 13 began crime careers which ended when they were slain. They developed into labor sluggers, then bank robbers, and got into the "big money" as labor racketeers. Barker came into prominence as Capone faded. He muscled into the Coal Teamsters' union and exacted heavy tribute from the members. He controled 40 unions when a machine gunner killed him on June 17, 1932.

White Shot to Death.

White had followed Barker. After Barker was killed White was king pin of their gang until he was slain on Jan. 23 by two gangsters who drank with him in his Oak Park apartment.

Meanwhile the Touhys, Tommy and Roger, had quietly brewed and sold beer in the northwestern suburbs. In 1930 they tried to push their beer into Chicago. There were gunfights with Capone men. The repeal of the 18th amendment ended this source of income and they turned to kidnaping and bank robbery. Roger and three companions, accused of abducting William Hamm Jr. of St. Paul, were acquitted in federal court there. Roger and several of his pals were tried in Chicago for kidnaping John Factor, stock speculator. The case ended on Friday in a mistrial but the state plans to start the Touhy gangsters' second trial on Feb. 13.

Klutas Gang Broken Up.

In central Illinois Theodore [Handsome Jack] Klutas, a former University of Illinois student, hijacked liquor trucks and gathered as his gangsters Gale Swolley, Frank B. Souder, and Julius [Babe] Jones.

The quartet branched into bank robbery and then they became kidnapers. Swolley, Souder, and Jones were captured. The first two were sentenced to life imprisonment for kidnaping James Hackett, Blue Island gambler, and Jones, who testified against his companions, is awaiting sentence. Klutas was slain in Bellwood by state's attorney's detectives.

Verne Sankey and Gordon Alcorn, South Dakota ranchers, read of kidnaping, and then tried it themselves. They kidnaped Haskell Bohn of St. Paul in 1932 and Charles Boettcher II., Denver broker, early last year, collecting $72,000 in ransom. Sankey was captured in Chicago on last Tuesday and Alcorn was caught here on Friday. Both are now awaiting trial in a federal court in South Dakota.

Engineers Prison Escape.

John Dillinger, an Indianan, became friendly with several men while serving sentence in the Michigan City penitentiary. He engineered their escape last Sept. 25, but was later arrested for bank robbery. His pals invaded the Lima, O., jail, where he was held, slew Sheriff Jess Sarber, and freed Dillinger. Coming to Chicago the gang committed half a dozen bank robberies and amassed $10,000 apiece. Various members shot their way out police traps and one, John Hamilton, killed Police Sergeant William Shanley.

In a bank robbery at East Chicago, Ind., Policeman William O'Malley was slain. On Jan. 25, four members of the gang, including Dillinger, were captured at Tucson, Ariz. Dillinger was returned to stand trial for Policeman O'Malley's murder. The other three were returned to the penitentiary at Michigan City to be turned over to Lima authorities for trial for the killing of Sheriff Sarber

There are now no known gangs of importance operating in the middle west.

HIGHWAY POLICEMAN SUSPENDED FOR VISIT TO SLAIN JACK WHITE

Oliver Kempster, sergeant of the state highway police, has been suspended, according to an announcement made yesterday at the headquarters of the organization in Springfield.

Kempster, Chicago police divulged, was one of two men who visited William [Three Fingered Jack] White in his Oak Park apartment a few hours before the gangster was killed. Kempster's companion on the visit was James Hartin, a federal agent. Both asserted they had gone to the White flat to gather information for the department of justice, and this was confirmed by Melvin H. Purvis, Chicago chief of the bureau of investigation of the department.

The highway police office announced that the suspension of Kempster would remain in effect until an investigation of his conduct had been completed.

Hartin was vindicated by his chief, Purvis.

ERNEST ROSSI, PUBLIC ENEMY, SHOT TO DEATH

Slayers Wait at Home for His Arrival.

Ernest J. Rossi, 35 years old, alias Ernie Ross, one of the originally listed public enemies, was shot to death early today as he was going up the back stairs of his home at 5529 Flournoy street. He was a brother-in-law of "Dago" Lawrence Mangano, Capone henchman and hoodlum, who lives at the same address.

The murder of Rossi was committed with typical gangland skill. The killer or killers—it is believed there were two—waited under the back porch for the hoodlum's arrival. Several cigaret stubs mutely revealed the vigil.

Slain as He Ascends Stairs.

As Rossi mounted the rear stairs the killers emerged. He was half way up to the second floor when the assassins poked shotguns under the railing and fired. Three blasts went off. Rossi's face and the back of his head were blown away. He was killed instantly. Neighbors took him to the Frances Willard hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

The fatal shots were heard by Rossi's sister, Mrs. Lucille Labriola Mangano, wife of Lawrence, and her son, Paul Labriola, and another sister, Mrs. Anna Paldo. Mangano, it was said, was not at home. Young Labriola, son of Mrs. Mangano by a former marriage, said he had returned home only five minutes earlier, had used the rear stairway, and had seen no one.

Called Old Timer in Rackets.

Rossi was considered by police as an old timer in the rackets. At the time of his death he was fighting extradition to Holland, Mich., where he was wanted for the robbery of the First State bank. His name was mentioned, but never successfully linked, with the kidnaping racket, and at one time he was alleged to be a pal of the slain Jack Klutas, central Illinois kidnap chief. Only last week Rossi was arrested by the state's attorney's office on a vagrancy charge. He beat the case.

SANKEY AND PAL, ALCORN, HELD ON $100,000 BOND

Sioux Falls, S. D., Feb. 3.—(AP)—Held under $100,000 bond and guarded day and night, Verne Sankey and Gordon Alcorn, confessed kidnapers of Charles Boettcher II. of Denver, occupied separate cells in solitary confinement at the state prison here tonight while federal officials laid plans for quick disposition of their case.

While Sankey and Alcorn, were in the state prison for safekeeping, Mrs. Fern Sankey, 39, the former's wife, remained in the county jail, a mile away, in default of $25,000 bond. She also is charged with the same offense as her husband and Alcorn.

RELEASE ALCORN'S WIFE.

Birdie Christopherson Alcorn, who was arrested Thursday with her husband, Gordon Alcorn, alleged kidnaper of Charles Boettcher II., wealthy Denver broker, was released yesterday by department of justice agents.

The agents also released Helen Mattern, 28 years old, who was arrested with Alcorn's chief, Verne Sankey, in an apartment at 4062 North Kedzie avenue.

ENGLAND ASKS GOVERNMENT TO ARREST FACTOR

Diplomatic Obstacles in Way of 2d Touhy Trial.

Problems of diplomacy involving the state department of the United States and the department of foreign affairs of England began to loom yesterday as possible obstacles to a new trial of three Touhy gangsters for the kidnaping of John Factor, wealthy speculator.

Factor is the state's chief witness against the Touhy gang. At the first trial in Judge Michael Feinberg's Criminal court, which ended Friday in a jury disagreement, Factor identified the three defendants as members of the gang that kidnaped him and collected a $70,000 ransom. His appearance at the second trial, however, is complicated by the fact that the federal court has ordered him to surrender to department of state officials for extradition to England, where he will face trial for an alleged $7,000,000 stock swindle.

Demands Factor Surrender.

A motion by Franklin R. Overmyer, counsel for the British crown, that Factor surrender at once to federal marshals was made in Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan's court last week. Hearing on this motion was continued until yesterday when Overmyer renewed his demand that Factor be taken into custody.

Judge Sullivan continued the hearing until next Tuesday, when, it was indicated, Factor will give up. He is to be lodged in the Sycamore jail, according to reports, to await formal signing of the extradition warrant by Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

The Touhy prosecutors said they did not believe Great Britain would demand Factor's removal at once, but that it would insist that he remain in federal custody pending completion of the second trial. They pointed out the handicap to the prosecution of having a federal prisoner as their chief witness.

Courtney to Make Appeal.

State's Attorney Courtney is expected to make the formal request for another delay of Factor's extradition this week when he opens negotiations with Secretary of State Hull and United States Attorney General Homer Cummings.

United States Attorney Dwight H. Green and Joseph B. Keenan, assistant United States attorney general in charge of the criminal division, refused to comment upon their future action.

No statements emanated from the state department at Washington as to Factor's immediate future. It was understood, however, that Mr. Keenan furnished Attorney General Cummings with a full report of the case. Mr. Cummings' recommendation is expected to be made tomorrow.

First Assistant State's Attorney Wilbert Crowley yesterday said that his office is making "every effort" to begin the new trial on schedule.

5 BOYS SEIZED FOR STEALING A 400 POUND SAFE

Five boys who carried a 400 pound safe from the office of Dr. S. A. Arnold, a dentist at 1153 East 63d street, and looted it of $30, gold valued at $25, and a $5,000 stock certificate, were arrested yesterday by the Woodlawn police. The money and the gold has been recovered, but the certificate, which the boys asserted they lost, is still missing.

The lads are Edward Blanchard, 15 years old, 6513 Ellis avenue; Henry Soliday, 13 years old, 6526 Ellis avenue; Donald Walker, 16 years old, 6052 Kenwood avenue; Charles Dewel, 12 years old, 6517 Ellis avenue, and George C. Bean, 15 years old, 6307 Woodlawn avenue.

BREMER'S FATHER APPEALS THIRD TIME FOR RETURN OF SON

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 3.—(AP)—An aged father, eyes brimmed with tears, voice a trembling appeal tonight for the return of his son, Edward G. Bremer, St. Paul banker, seized for $200,000 ransom more than two weeks ago.

"Please—give this—all—the prominence you can," Adolph Bremer, principal owner of the Jacob Schmidt Brewing company, begged.

In the living room of his rambling home the elder Bremer stood with head bowed and issued his third public appeal for the immediate return of the 37 year old owner and president of the Commercial State bank.

"I realize that I cannot publish my choice in making this contact," Mr. Bremer's statement said. "To convince you that there is no catch in this effort of mine, I can see but one way to work out our negotiations.

"Edward will have to select someone regardless of where he may be located in the United States. Have Edward write this party a letter in his own handwriting referring to this notice in the press so that I will know he has read it. Enclose with Edward's letter your instructions to the party that Edward selects but be sure to give sufficient time for the instructions to be carried out."

MAPS FIGHT ON HABEAS CORPUS WRIT DECISION

Courtney Ready to Act in Brown Case.

State's Attorney Courtney will act tomorrow in an effort to upset the habeas corpus writ issued last Monday by Circuit Judge Clyde H. Thompson of Pontiac releasing "Dr." Spencer Brown from Joliet prison. Brown was serving a sentence of one to ten years for participation in the million dollar robbery of Werner Brothers Safety Deposit company in Chicago in 1923.

Judge Thompson ruled that the state sentence was nullified when Cook county authorities turned Brown over to government officials and he served a 70 month term in Leavenworth for altering the serial numbers on war savings stamps. Circuit Judge Michael Feinberg previously had ruled against Brown on the same point in an action brought before Cook county courts.

Courtney Acts Tomorrow.

A complete record of Brown's case has been assembled to govern State's Attorney Courtney's line of action. He will act on the Brown case tomorrow, probably appealing to the Supreme court for a mandamus order requiring Judge Thompson to strike the habeas corpus writ from his records.

Meanwhile Attorney General Otto Kerner and the state's attorney placed themselves on record as favoring the proposal to revise the Illinois state law to limit issuance of habeas corpus writs to courts of the county in which sentence was passed. This step was proposed by Frank J. Loesch, president of the Chicago Crime commission, as a permanent cure for possible miscarriage of Cook county justice through intervention of outside judges.

Special Session Subject.

The two law enforcement chiefs agreed that such a law might profitably be made a subject for consideration by a special session of the legislature.

State's Attorney Courtney criticized the present law, which grants jurisdiction over habeas corpus hearings to any judge in the state.

AUTOMOBILE THEFTS.

Automobiles stolen, 46; recovered, 47; stripped, 5. (From police records for the twenty-four hour period ending at midnight Friday).

RESUME INQUIRY IN BAIL JUMPER'S CASE TOMORROW

Five Witnesses Absent as Jury Opens Quiz.

An investigation into the approval of an insufficient bond for a notorious forger, launched yesterday by the state's attorney's office, will be resumed before the grand jury tomorrow.

On Jan. 26 the forger, Lester Weiss, jumped his bonds, which had been approved by Municipal Judge Leon Edelman in the early hours of the morning.

Witnesses Fail to Appear.

First Assistant State's Attorney Wilbert Crowley and Assistant State's Attorney Ota P. Lightfoot said they were hampered in their investigation yesterday by the fact that five of the important witnesses did not appear. They are: Weiss, Judge Edelman, the sureties on the bonds; Anna Skolnik of 3654 West 19th street, and Morris Lakowitz of 1334 South Jefferson street, and a man known only as Berman, who aided in the arrangement for Weiss' release.

Robert Marcus, a professional bondsman who was said to have called upon the judge at his home, and Attorney George R. Bieber, who informed the prosecutors that it was he who called upon the judge to arrange Weiss' bond, were the only witnesses available yesterday.

Denies Part in Case.

Marcus denied any connection with the case, and was told to come back and tell his story to the grand jury.

Attorney Bieber said Berman came to him and put up $50 as a retainer fee for Weiss. Bieber then told him to go ahead and arrange bond for the defendant, he said, and Berman went to the bond court with the two sureties but the judge in charge had departed. The clerks made an investigation of the properties and Berman then reported to Bieber, according to the latter's story.

"I then went to the judge's home," Bieber said. "I told him I didn't know the defendant nor either one of the sureties, but he accepted the properties and approved the bond."

Told to Face Jury.

Bieber also was instructed to tell his story to the grand jury.

The prosecutors sent policemen to the homes of the sureties but neither of them could be found. Chief Justice Sonesteby of the Municipal court was asked to send Judge Edelman to the state's attorney's office, but the chief justice reported that Judge Edelman had gone out of the city over the week end.

Bonds for the forger, held on three charges involving $18,000, were fixed at $15,000; the assessed valuation of the properties scheduled—two vacant lots and a four flat building—totaled $3,484, indicating a real value of some $10,000 subject to incumbrances of $4,800. Real estate with a fair cash value twice the amount of the bond, after incumbrances are deducted, is required by law.

U. S. AIR LINES SET PASSENGER RECORD DURING LAST YEAR

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—(AP)—American Air Lines were reported by the department of commerce today to have flown more miles and carried more passengers and express in 1933 than in any other year since the airplane became a part of the nation's transportation facilities.

Goods carried by air express amounted to 1,510,000 pounds, compared with 1,032,000 pounds in 1932. Miles flown were 48,771,000, compared with 45,606,000.

Passenger miles flown increased at a greater rate than the actual number of passengers, indicating longer journeys per passenger. Passenger miles were 173,492,000 against 127,083,000.

DILLINGER FACES COURT IN MURDER CASE TOMORROW

John Dillinger, Indiana desperado, will be arraigned in the Criminal court at Crown Point at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon on a charge of murdering Policeman William P. O'Malley of East Chicago.

Elaborate arrangements for the arraignment were completed yesterday. A heavy guard is expected to be assigned to the courthouse to prevent attempts to rescue Dillinger. The murder for which Dillinger is to be tried was committed on Jan. 15 in a robbery of the First National bank of East Chicago.

Meanwhile Dillinger's confederates—Harry Pierpont, Charles Makley, Russell Clark, Edward Shouse, and Harry Copeland—are being held temporarily by Indiana authorities preparatory to turning them over to Ohio for trial on a charge of murdering Sheriff Jesse Sarber at Lima. Sarber was killed by hoodlums when they freed Dillinger from the jail there.

Another phase of the Dillinger case will come up in the Women's court here tomorrow morning when Mrs. Josephine Hunt is to be arraigned on a charge of failing to pay a taxicab bill of $32.70. The bill was incurred two days ago when she rode in a taxi from Chicago to Crown Point to see Dillinger. Police blamed her trouble on drinking. She is the former Josephine Du Pre, daughter of a New York banker, now dead, and former wife of Capt. Jonathan Hunt, an army officer.

CHARGES HUSBAND STRUCK HER.

Mrs. Marjorie Kolar, 25 years old, 664 Melrose street, filed suit for divorce in the Superior court yesterday against Joseph Kolar, a printer, alleging that he struck her when she asked him for money.

AVIATION RULE DIVIDED AMONG SEVEN AGENCIES

Survey May Culminate in Centralization.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—The United States government has five separate air corps and carries on various aviation activities in seven separate agencies of the government. In the 1933 fiscal year expenditures for all federal air services totaled $146,357,850.

After many years of strenuous efforts on the part of aviation experts and government economists, aimed at centralizing these activities, President Roosevelt has just ordered a full survey to be made looking toward a more efficient conduct of the air services.

The survey will be conducted by Secretary of Commerce Roper with the aid of all other department and bureau heads affected.

Consider Separate Ministry.

While Mr. Roosevelt's statement on the inquiry held that his purpose was to establish "a uniform federal aviation policy," it was made known that Mr. Roper will explore the possibilities of setting up a unified air corps, under a separate ministry, to oversee all the aeronautical activities of the government.

A study of the expenditures of the various departments for aviation purposes discloses that in many instances there is overlapping of activities and a widespread bureaucratic administrative work which by consolidation under one direction would reduce overhead expenses by considerable sums.

But the far greater advantage in a unified air corps, it is declared, lies in its greater military effectiveness.

Although the general staff of the army and the bureau of navigation of the n vy have opposed previous attempts to take their air forces away and have given testimony that to do so would impair rather than enhance the effectiveness of the nation's fighting air units, independent expert opinion has been to the contrary.

Army Wants More Planes.

After having denied for some years that the next war will be won by the ablest and best equipped air force among the nations at war, the army generals recently have conceded the need for a much stronger air defense than is now available.

A battle has commenced before congress in which the navy on the one hand and the army on the other are striving for millions of dollars to build and buy new airplanes and to train and pay additional officers and enlisted men in their separate air corps.

The navy wants to have the big air defense unit on the ground that any war the United States may be called upon to defend will be on far away powers, thus calling for naval coöperation to back up far-flung air attacks. The army wants control of major air activities on the ground that air bases will be on land.

Roper to Make Report.

The answer may well be and possibly will be suggested in Secretary Roper's report, the organization of a separate air corps in which this tug of war will be forever stopped, and which will result in a new spirit of coöperation being set up by the three arms of the service.

The five air units now maintained by the government are in the army, the navy, the marine corps, the coast guard and the department of commerce. The department of agriculture maintains an aerial patrol to fight and guard against forest fires, but rents planes with pilots for the purpose.

The postoffice department has control over air mail activities. One other independent agency, created by congress to conduct research into aviation problems, is the national advisory committee for aeronautics.

Expenditures Are Listed.

The expenditures of these seven arms of the government, for air purposes alone, total up as follows:

Army	$ 59,138,236
Navy	52,718,114
Postoffice	26,403,170
Commerce	6,946,103
Coast guard	280,136
Agriculture	29,922
Naca	842,169
Total	$146,357,850

The coast guard airplanes are used in the detection of smugglers as well as in the succor of ships in distress.

The commerce department maintains a fleet of 40 to 45 airplanes, used by its inspectors for traveling from place to place in connection with their duties of inspection of airplanes, airways and air pilots. A recent order has been placed for 35 new planes for the commerce department to replace others grown obsolete or worn out.

The Roper inquiry is expected also to delve into the question of whether military or commercial aviation has made the greatest strides in developing the flying art, and which expenditures by the government, whether for commercial activities such as the postoffice and commerce department outlays, or for the army and navy, produce the greater returns.

No time has been fixed for the completion of the Roper survey, but it is expected to be finished in time for legislative action by the present session of congress.

SPEAKERS WARN OF WORST WAR IN EUROPE'S HISTORY

New York, Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Europe is seriously menaced by the danger of the worst war in history and only decisive action by President Roosevelt can stave off an international conflict in which the United States "almost certainly" would be involved, the four speakers who addressed today's luncheon meeting of the Foreign Policy association today.

Carlton J. H. Hayes, professor of history at Columbia university; Sisley Huddleston, European correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor; Arnold Wolfers of Yale university, and Dorothy Thompson joined in urging strong measures to combat "the militant nationalism" of the chief European powers.

Next to France, the nations most responsible for the present "state of latent warfare" are Germany, Italy, Soviet Russia, and Japan, the speakers agreed.

Arrest Youth After Three Are Robbed, One Beaten

Joseph Mialkowski, 18 years old, 1000 West 51st street, was arrested as an alleged bandit this morning after he and two companions, police say, had robbed three youths and slugged one. The youth slugged was Joe Deuter, 22, of 5631 South Hermitage avenue. The holdup occurred near Deuter's home. Policemen Michael French and Emil Peck of the New City station arrested Mialkowski.

GIVE US LIBERTY NOW FILIPINOS URGE CONGRESS

MANILA, P. I., Feb. 3.—(AP)—A massmeeting of rejectionists of the Hawes-Cutting law, which offered Philippine independence in twelve to fourteen years, went on record tonight as favoring measures granting immediate freedom or separate government within a short period. Approval was voted of the King bill, before congress, providing for independence within 32 to 49 months; of an immediate independence bill, or of any measure avoiding the "onerous provisions" of the Hawes-Cutting law.

The meeting, which followed a parade, also voted censure of Camilo Osias, resident commissioner in Washington. It asserted Osias had discredited the legislature last fall and recently had been "obstructing" the work of the Manuel Quezon mission in Washington in urging congress to extend the time for acceptance of the Hawes-Cutting law, rejected by the legislature.

Speakers at the meeting avoided stating directly their position regarding amendment of the Hawes-Cutting act to continue its life nine months. It expired Jan. 17 on failure of the Philippine people to accept its offer of independence.

GETS U. S. CHECK TO CUT CROP, BUT HE RETURNS IT

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—(AP)—The farm administration has just had a bit of a surprise, but a pleasant one: A farmer sent back the check mailed him for reducing the size of his crop.

J. H. Hoehn of Wilmore, Kas., returned his check for $167.43, and wrote:

"I could use the money nicely, but I believe there are people in the U. S. A. who need it more. I would be very glad if this could be placed in that fund."

Chester C. Davis, farm administrator, returned both the check and a note of thanks, saying, however, that "we can not legally cancel the check for transfer of the funds to relief agencies." He suggested that the money be given to the Red Cross or some local relief agency.

U. S. PREPARES TO KEEP OUT OF FAR EAST WAR

Roosevelt to Avoid Any Entanglements.

Withdraw Fleet Temporarily.

For years the Japanese had been contending that the stationing of our entire naval force in the Pacific was an affront to Japan. They were considerably mollified when the President announced that the fleet would be withdrawn, even though it be only temporarily.

Although the United States is the most important Pacific power, and through possession of the Philippines has a foothold in the far east and through foreign trade has large interests in the far east, the President is determined to keep clear of involvement in any war between Japan and Russia.

With respect to the Philippines, he is even now discussing a new arrangement for liberation of the Filipinos from American rule as a substitute for the legislation recently rejected by the Philippine legislature which may considerably circumscribe American responsibilities in the far east.

Avoids Annoyance of Japan.

The administration also is carefully avoiding such annoyance of Japan as took place under the Hoover administration. The President has not recognized the Japanese puppet state, Manchukuo, but he is not endeavoring to dislodge the Japanese from Manchuria as Secretary Stimson sought to do. Just before taking office Mr. Roosevelt made a statement which indicated that he indorsed in principle the doctrine of refusal to countenance acquisition of territory in violation of the Kellogg pact, but he never has revived the Hoover administration's controversy with Japan over the seizure of Manchuria.

Of late there has been an ebullition of official discussion in Tokio of naval rivalry and possible war between Japan and the United States. Leaders of the military party now in control of the government have given utterance to predictions of eventual war with America, have boasted that in under-age warships Japan will be stronger than the United States in 1936, and have asserted that Japan will not renew the naval limitation treaties unless accorded parity with America.

The military party leaders are suspected of seeking by these utterances to justify the large army and navy expenditures they are demanding. The assertion of former Foreign Minister Yoshizawa that there would be war between Japan and America if the admirals of each nation were allowed to indulge in naval rivalry is also attributed to domestic politics, for Yoshizawa is of the moderate party which is fighting the military party's expensive naval program.

Seek to Frighten President.

By some who are not altogether friendly to the administration the theory is advanced that the Japanese, encouraged by his withdrawal of the fleet from the Pacific, are seeking to frighten the President into abandonment of his navy building program. Mr. Roosevelt, however, has answered the recent agitation in Tokio by serving notice through public statement by Under Secretary of State Phillips that the American navy building program will proceed without interruption or modification.

The Japanese have thrown out the suggestion that it will be futile to hold the navy limitation conference scheduled for 1935 unless America is willing to concede to Japan naval parity. They have intimated that they will sound Washington in advance and if acquiescence in the demand for parity be not forthcoming then will refuse to participate in the 1935 conference.

On this matter the administration has not decided definitely upon the course to be pursued but indications are not wanting that such preliminary negotiations with Japan will be avoided as long as possible in the hope that the situation in the far east will be clarified.

Confer on Treaty Revision.

The Washington conference limitation on capital ships is to be continued indefinitly unless denounced by any signatory not later than Dec. 31, 1934. If Japan should denounce the treaty it would expire Dec. 31, 1936, when the London treaty on auxiliaries will expire. Of course, if Japan and Russia should go to war Japan would have the right to suspend the Washington agreement and to increase categories in the London agreement. On the cessation of hostilities, the Washington treaty provides, the powers would confer on revision of the treaty.

The Administration Attitude.

The attitude of the administration at present is of one opposition to any concession to the Japanese on the naval ratio which was fixed at 3 to 5 in the Washington treaty and moved up to 7 to 10 at London in 1930. The Japanese took advantage of the eagerness of the Hoover administration to reach an agreement with the British on cruisers and won the increased allotment in the auxiliary categories. They threatened to ditch the whole agreement unless granted the concession. The British put up no opposition and the American delegation yielded.

Representative Carl Vinson [Dem., Ga.], chairman of the house naval affairs committee, admits the truth of the Japanese claims that in under-age ships their navy will be superior to ours in 1936. The Japanese have neglected no right to build up to treaty strength. We have. The Vinson bill passed by the house this week is designed to bring our navy up to treaty strength in five years. The Vinson bill is scheduled to early passage by the senate.

Terms of Treaty.

Under the terms of the Washington and London treaties the United States is entitled to a maximum tonnage of 1,186,200 in all categories and Japan to 763,050 tons. On Dec. 31, 1933, the United States had built 372 vessels of 1,038,660 tons, but only 84 ships, totaling 708,530 tons, were under age.

On the same date the United States had 52 ships of 222,060 tons building or appropriated for, while Japan had 47 ships of 123,372 tons building or appropriated for. In this situation the naval committees were informed the United States needed 102 ships of 214,380 tons to reach treaty strength, while Japan needed 600 tons to reach treaty strength. This 600 tons cannot be utilized, however, as the 12 A cruisers allowed by the London treaty have already been built.

The United States is weakest in the destroyer class. On Dec. 31 it had 250 destroyers, while Japan had 104. But all but three of these American destroyers are over age, while 42 of the 104 Japanese destroyers are under age. The United States was building 32 destroyers on Dec. 31, 1933, and needed to build 65 more destroyers to reach treaty strength in destroyers by Dec. 31, 1936. Japan, on the other hand, was building 24 destroyers on Dec. 31 last, and when these are completed will not have to build other destroyers to reach treaty strength by Dec. 31, 1936.

STUDENTS RIOT IN HAVANA; SIX SLAIN IN STREETS

Strike Against Return of U. S. Properties.

BY GUSTAVO RENO.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Feb. 3.—Six persons were fatally injured in a student riot three blocks from the presidential palace here today shortly after workers walked out on strike in the American owned Cuban Electric company. The strike followed the action of President Carlos Mendieta in returning the plants to the firm.

Mendieta immediately put the plants under guard of government troops. He expressed his discouragement at the continued economic chaos and indicated he might resign. He explained a problem had been created by "which might contribute toward the fall" of his administration.

Hotel Damaged by Bomb.

Two bombs damaged the Palace hotel, where many American tourists stop, and a warehouse of the Westinghouse Electric company. Three students, identified as supporters of the defunct Grau régime, were arrested for participation in the bombings.

Meanwhile communist riots were reported in seven cities. At Santiago a Spaniard was killed and a Frenchman gravely wounded.

As a result of today's strike half of Havana is in darkness tonight. The water supply is shut off and street car service is partially paralyzed.

Fails to Bring About Peace.

Mendieta failed in the last 24 hours in an attempt to draw the National Labor federation, the National Labor confederation, and the communist party of Cuba into a conference. He had hoped to solve the problem of increasing strikes by this means. The executives of these organizations replied they would continue to strike. They insist a majority of Cubans demand a farmers and workers' rule.

The president's threat to resign follows his concession to grant the communists the right to organize into a legal political party.

Spends $5 Bill He Signed for Marriage License

Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 3.—(AP)—When High E. Hulen and Miss Martha J. Williams, both of Bartlesville, Okla., obtained a marriage license here today, Hulen handed a $5 bill to the clerk and remarked: "It ought to be good; it's signed by me." And so it was. The bill was issued by the Union National Bank of Bartlesville, of which Hulen is president.

JAPANESE ENVOY SAILS FOR U. S. TO PROMOTE PEACE

SOUTHAMPTON, England, Feb. 3.—(AP)—Determined to try to effect a better understanding between the peoples of America and Japan, Hiroshi Saito, 47 year old Japanese ambassador to Washington, sailed today for the United States.

For the envoy, whose new position is one of the two most important in the Japanese diplomatic service, it was like going home, for he was the consul general in New York for five years and both he and his wife have long been acquainted with the United States.

"There is no real outstanding difficulty between the United States and Japan," Saito said, as he was leaving London for Southampton to embark on the Berengaria. "It is absurd to say that Japan and America now or ever will be at loggerheads."

Many problems have arisen since he served in New York, including the establishment of Manchukuo with the assistance of Japan and the naval situation, which will come up for settlement in the 1935 Washington conference.

To these questions Saito said he will devote major attention. Americans are beginning to understand Japan's position in these matters, he declared.

"In congress, in California, and in other quarters it has been suggested that Japan should be placed on some basis of immigration quotas such as other countries. If such a thing occurs we should be very happy."

He pointed to current agitation by some English speakers for action to meet the competition offered by low priced Japanese products and declared that "no real competition in the trade field ever will occur."

He said Japanese-American trade comprised largely silk from Japan and raw cotton from America.

"The world will see that the firm establishment of Manchukuo will assist in bringing about world-wide peace and tranquility," he asserted.

WE ARE READY IF YOU WANT A WAR! RUSSIA TO JAPAN

Bares Preparations for Conflict in Far East.

MOSCOW, Feb. 3.—(AP)—Pointing Russia's defensive saber in the direction of Japan, the soviet commissar of war tonight told the all-union communist party congress that "despite our diplomatic efforts we have not yet succeeded in convincing Japanese ruling circles that peace is better than war."

In a blunt and outspoken address, Commissar Klementi E. Voroshilov told the congress that, therefore, Russia was continuing with measures to repel invasion.

Russia Fortifies Far East.

Interrupted frequently by applause from the delegates, Voroshilov outlined the general condition of the Red army—which he described as more effective than ever before—and reported steps taken to defend the far east against an expected Japanese attack.

In language which left no doubt that the Red army's high command was convinced that war with Japan is probable, Voroshilov declared that fortifications had been erected at strategic points on the far eastern border, through which "it would be difficult for any invader to penetrate," and that armed forces had been "increased" in that region.

Asserting that it would be "ridiculous" for soviet Russia to ignore Japanese preparations for war "and continue to trust in our 'dear neighbor'," Voroshilov added that "the measures we have taken for the defense of our frontiers in cities of the far east is a sty in the eye of the Japanese."

Cannot Give Japan Satisfaction.

"It would be more agreeable and pleasant for our neighbors were we without any defense, but we cannot give them that satisfaction," he said.

Reiterating the charge that Japan was preparing Manchukuo as a military base for future operations against the U. S. S. R., he continued: "This compels us to prepare for eventualities. War with us will not be easy for Japanese military circles. It would be a big and costly war for the initiators."

Voroshilov, on another tack, took occasion to administer a verbal spanking to his fellow commissar, Andreievich Andreev, in charge of communications and transport. Voroshilov criticized severely Russia's badly lagging state of transportation.

Sitting with flushed face on the tribune before the huge gathering, Andreev listened silently as Voroshilov lashed out.

"There is great disorganization and lack of discipline and we cannot seem to improve it," he declared. "I feel pained when I have to speak of it. If transport cannot function, what happens? It means that our industry has to slacken its pace, not to mention wartime requirements.

Stresses Military Issue.

"Now, while the Red army is preparing to defend our frontiers, transport must also prepare itself, for in the next war we will need efficient contemporary transport just as much as an efficient contemporary army, which we already have."

This public reprimand, delivered by one of the most powerful leaders of the communist party and the soviet government, was regarded as meaning that possibly Andreev will be deprived of his transport post, to which he was appointed two years ago.

"We will be well able to defend our far east and will be victorious in any war in which we are compelled to participate," said Voroshilov, returning to more direct implications. "The dreams of our enemies to share our territory and to exterminate communism are only the rankest stupidity."

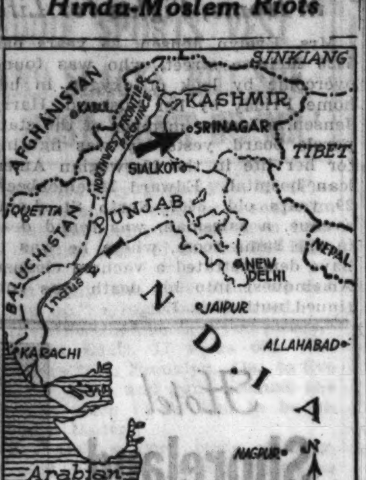
Hinda-Moslem Riots



SIALKOT, Punjab, Feb. 3.—(AP)—Fierce rioting due to renewed conflicts between Hindus and Moslems flared today in the beautiful mountain kingdom of Kashmir. Moslem demonstrators paraded in the capital city, Srinagar, after police had been overpowered. Several officers were stoned and seriously injured, and a number were missing.

At Abantipur police tried to disperse a demonstration of 8,000 and soldiers fired on the mob when it tried to break into the treasury. Whether there were casualties was not reported.

The trouble at Srinagar started in a dispute of Moslems and Hindus over a camping ground opposite a Hindu temple, which is a center of pilgrimages for Hindus from all parts of India. Moslems wanted to erect a mosque there, but Hindus opposed the plan. Serious riots broke out in Kashmir in 1931 following Moslem complaints that religious rights were not respected. An investigating commission since recommended the return of mosques which had been in secular use and better education facilities for Moslems.

PROTESTS LIGHT PUNISHMENT FOR JAP ASSASSINS

Navy Men Favored, Diet Member Cries.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Feb. 3.—"Sentencing the men who shot and killed Premier Tsuyoshi Inukai in cold blood to a few years in prison, because they wore military uniforms, but sentencing a civilian to life, although he did not do the actual slaying, is a rank injustice."

Kazuo Nakai, a member of the Seiyukai party, rose in the diet today and shouted these words at Premier Makoto Saito. He voiced apparently what was in the minds of millions of Japanese.

"Both sentences were pronounced in the name of the emperor," Nakai said. "Does this mean that all one has to do to assassinate persons and get away with it is to join the army or navy?"

Object to Differences.

The populace generally is not objecting to the sentence and does not think it too severe. However, it is unable to stomach the fact that the men who committeed the murder got off with a lighter sentence than the conspirators.

The protest was provoked by the pronouncement of sentences today on the last group of participants in the terrorism of May, 1932, which was climaxed by the assassination of Premier Inukai.

Kozaburo Tachibana, leader of a school of patriots, was given a life sentence. Twenty of his students drew sentences ranging from three and a half years to life. Hidezo Toyama, who supplied the pistols, was sentenced to eight years.

Prison For Naval Officers.

In a previous court martial ten naval officers were given prison terms of 10 to 15 years and 11 naval cadets were sentenced to four year terms. The terrorist campaign was directed at the leniency of Inukai's foreign policy. The defense attempted to show the participants were patriots.

As a way out of the dilemma arising from the discrepancy between the sentences given the civilians and the military men the government will announce a general amnesty on Feb. 11. On that day the nation will celebrate the anniversary of the founding of the empire and the birth of Crown Prince Akihito.

STICKNEY FINDS IT'S UP AGAINST A TOUCHY PROBLEM

Since Chief of Police Louis Marek of Stickney was discharged by Village President William Loeffer and refused to be a private citizen, and Chief of Police James Kassel was appointed to the post and accepted it, residents of the village are up against a touchy spot of etiquette—whether to recognize the Marek force or the Kassel force.

One citizen, George Kabella, made a mistake yesterday. He told Sergt. James Miller of the Marek department that he thought it a shame that the town couldn't reduce itself to one police force. Sergt. Miller promptly arrested him.

"He said I was guilty of lese majesty," said Kabella. "Also he slugged me."

In retaliation Kabella obtained a warrant charging the policeman, if he is a policeman, with assault. This warrant was served by a constable whose status is generally admitted and Miller was locked up in the Berwyn jail. Last reports indicated, however, that Chief Marek and his force still have control of the village flivver and that the Kassel department is on foot. The state's attorney's office has declined to act as referee for the rival claimants.

Samuel Mele, 19 years old, 106 East 23d street, Chicago Heights, did not move quickly enough last night when two robbers entered the Phillips gasoline station at 23d street and East End avenue, Chicago Heights. One of the pair fired, inflicting a flesh wound in Mele's neck. After taking $5 from the cash register the bandits kidnaped the attendant, Louis Baron, and forced him to ride with them to Richton Park, where he was released.

FIVE POLICEMEN GIVEN TRIBUNE HERO AWARDS

BY STANLEY ARMSTRONG.

Four Chicago policemen and a Lincoln park officer wrote December into the annuals of their departments as a notable month by courageously battling against crime. Each of them has received $100 from THE TRIBUNE, which quintupled its monthly hero award, for outstanding bravery in the performance of their duty during that month.

Only once before have more awards been made in one month, and that in July, 1925, when police of the same two departments gave battle to the Drake hotel bandits. That month there were eight awards. With the passing of December, THE TRIBUNE completed 14 years of recognizing courageous deeds and in that time 187 policemen and firemen have received a total of $19,300 as a token of appreciation of their guardianship of lives and property in Chicago and Cook county.

3 Criminals Shot Down.

The city policemen earned their awards by ending the careers of three gunmen, since identified as murderers and bank robbers, who decided to fight rather than be taken prisoners. The Lincoln park policeman arrested two holdup men after engaging one in hand to hand combat and shooting his companion in the leg to prevent his escape. These policemen are:

Sergt. Frank J. Reynolds, 36 years old, 1522 East 73d place, twice winner of THE TRIBUNE award, and receipent of 11 creditable mentions and extra compensation on five occasions from the police department.

Patrolman John Dawe, 54, 8219 South Elizabeth street.

Patrolman John Daly, 30, 5301 Potomac avenue, also rewarded by the department for past deeds.

Patrolman James Shields, 39, 6131 South Kolmar avenue.

Lincoln Park Policeman Henry J. Neelis, 34, 855 Cornelia avenue, to whom the park commissioners gave an award of $100 for the same deed that won THE TRIBUNE hero prize.

Seeking Dillinger.

Under the leadership of Supervising Captain John Stege, the four city policemen with several other squads staged a thrilling raid on an apartment at 1428 Farwell avenue in the Rogers Park district. They were seeking John Dillinger and members of his gang of escaped Indiana convicts, recently captured in Arizona and from Capt. Stege they had received this advice:

"To the best of our information the men inside are members of the Dillinger crowd. They are good shots. But they must be taken."

By strategy the police got to the door of the apartment which was opened in response to a ring from the bell in the lobby. Some one peered out and asked gruffly: "Who's there?" Sergt. Reynolds leaped forward.

"We're police officers," he shouted. "Surrender."

Reynolds, Dawe and Shields were in the apartment in a flash. Two of the occupants, Charles Tattlebaum and Louis Katzewitz, blazed away at them, each firing two guns. Their companion, Sam Ginsburg, concentrated his fire in the direction of Capt. Stege and the men who were breaking their way through the rear door.

None of Policemen Wounded.

The shooting was fast and furious, the action being over in about 90 seconds during which time about 20 shots were fired by the policemen and more by the three gunmen. Looking back on the fray credit is given to Reynolds for downing Katzewitz, Dawe for putting Ginsberg out of the battle, and Shields with getting Tattlebaum. Daly, who came through the rear door, shot Katzewitz as the latter from the floor aimed at Dawe. None of the policemen were wounded.

The three gunmen were ex-convicts who were wanted for bank robbery, jail breaking and kidnaping, and after being taken to the morgue were identified as the murderers of two policemen and two other persons.

The gun fight was on the night of Dec. 21, and it was only a few days later when Neelis, the Lincoln park policean, stopped in the Tavern restaurant, 3428 North Clark street, for a cup of coffee before going home. As he entered he noticed a half dozen unfinished suppers on the counter and an equal number of overcoats on hooks, but could see no one to whom they might belong.

Suspecting that something was wrong, Neelis went to the kitchen door. Through the glass he saw eight men on the floor guarded by two others. Drawing his revolver he went through the swinging door.

Grabs Robber's Gun.

One of the holdup men, later identified as Steve McDermott grappled with Neelis. While the two tussled for possession of the gun, the bandit's companion, Roy Jett, started to flee. Neelis fired at Jett while still holding to McDermott's gun, wounding the fleeing man and preventing him from escaping. The policeman then subdued McDermott.

RUPTURE

Don't submit to avoidable operations or the use of antiquated trusses, which set where the lump is and not where the opening is. The opening is seldom larger than a dime, no matter the size of the rupture, and all cases can be retained with the end of a lead pencil. The Spermatic Shield-Complex (Patent No. 747,247, No. 1237709 and other patents pending) is a scientific achievement in a highly specialized art. It will not only retain any case of rupture perfectly but contracts the opening in 10 days on the average case. Infinitely superior to any instrument method or operation and produces results in no other way obtainable. All cases are secure a lifetime as against any further trouble or expense. Large or difficult cases or incisional rupture (following operations) especially solicited. This instrument received the only award at the International Medical Congress held in London England, producing results without surgery, harmful injections, medical treatment or prescriptions. Has been supplied to U. S. Surgeon General's Bureau, U. S. Naval Hospital, Penn. R. R., etc. See booklet on "The Fallacy of Surgical Procedure."

Wife's New York Suit Is Reinstated.

He reinstated Mrs. Vallee's suit to restrain her husband from seeking a divorce in Mexico.

This action opened the way again for a hearing on Vallee's retaliatory motion to restrain his wife from suing him for separate maintenance in California.

Justice Signs Order.

Vallee's attorney, Hyman Bushel, took this motion into court Jan. 22, intending to offer it in Mrs. Vallee's suit. Bushel was greeted by her attorney, Benjamin Hartstein, with the news that Justice Lydon had signed the order to withdraw Mrs. Vallee's suit, on her petition, thus stopping Vallee's counter-motion.

It was expected that Bushel would again enter the motion to restrain the wife of the crooner from suing for $7,400 a month separate maintenance in the coast state.

"At the time the order was signed," the justice ruled in reinstating the suit, "counsel for the plaintiff stated that the plaintiff desired to discontinue the action on payment of costs and that there was no counterclaim interposed by the defendant with his answer.

Failed to Inform Court.

"But counsel failed to inform me that a similar action brought by this plaintiff was pending in California and also failed to mention that a motion in this action was pending and was about to be heard on that day in special term part 1 of this court, in which the defendant was asking leave to serve an answer containing a defense and counterclaim seeking injunctive relief to restrain permanently prosecution of the California proceeding.

"Had I been advised of these important facts and the circumstances connected therewith the order of discontinuance would not have been signed."

In her west coast suit—filed after she objected to the $100 a week settlement in a New York agreement and accompanied by the charge Vallee misrepresented his financial status—Mrs. Vallee accused her husband directly of misconduct with Alice Faye, blues singer.

The mass of charges that have splurged sensationally since the separation of the couple includes one by Vallee that his wife had an affair with Gary Leon, a dancer.

DELIVERED ON MURDER COUNT.

Raki Borzuku, alias Harry Milton, 35 years old, 208 West Division street, arrested Sunday, was turned over yesterday to Worcester, Mass., police, who have been seeking him on a murder charge since last October.

INDEPENDENT CABS WRECKED BY STRIKING DRIVERS IN NEW YORK

New York, Feb. 4 [Sunday].—[Special.]—Disorder on a widespread scale flared last night and early today just as after theater crowds were at their height as bands of striking taxicab drivers paraded through the streets, halting cabs, ousting the passengers, breaking doors, and windshields, slashing tires, and in some cases wrecking the machines.

In some instances passengers were roughly treated. One woman in evening dress was cut on the head by a chunk of ice thrown through the window of a machine. But in most cases the passengers were told with rough good humor to get into the subways.

The drivers were on their way to Madison Square Garden, where a mass-meeting got under way just before midnight to discuss the result of negotiations between a committee of thirteen representatives of the strikers which had been named earlier in the day and the employers. The meeting, attended by 5,000 drivers and sympathizers, still was under way early today.

Preliminary massmeetings had been held at several places during the evening. About 1,000 strikers marched from one meeting to the Madison Square Garden gathering. It was during their parade that most of the violence manifested itself.

Lily Pons, opera and concert star, arrived in Chicago yesterday preparatory to her concert tomorrow night in the Auditorium theater for the benefit of the Chicago Girl Scouts. Soon after her arrival she was visited at the Lake Shore Drive hotel by Mary Ellen and Betty Irene Samuels, both Girl Scouts, who presented her with an armload of roses.

Miss Pons came from Kansas City, where she appeared in a concert. She expects to go to Louisville from here and thence to New York, where she will appear with the Metropolitan Opera company for two weeks.

Ernst Buehler Resigns Post as Honorary Swiss Consul

The resignation of Ernst Buehler as honorary consul for Switzerland in the Chicago district has been accepted by the Swiss Confederation with an expression of thanks for his services in this capacity since Nov. 15, 1922, according to word received here yesterday. Ulrich Beusch, vice consul, will be acting consul for the present. Mr. Buehler said he was obliged to give up the office by his activities as a lawyer and as vice president of the board of education.

CONVICT CHICAGO MAN FOR THEFT OF WEST JEWELS

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 3.—(AP)—A jury convicted Edward Friedman, alleged Chicago gangster, today of robbing Mae West, the glamorous screen star, of $17,000 in gems and $3,400 in cash.

Superior Judge Harry Sewell ordered Friedman brought before him next Tuesday to be sentenced on two counts of second degree robbery, each of which carries a sentence of not less than one year in state's prison.

The platinum blonde was the state's chief witness.

There was standing room only and corridors were jammed when she made several court appearances. She told of how on a September night last year, a robber pointed a revolver at her while she was seated in her automobile in Hollywood.

Hands Him Purse.

"The man with the gun said to me: 'Give me the poke,'" she testified, and she told how she reached for her purse, beside her and handed it to him, it containing $3,400.

He reached for her diamonds, touching her arm.

"I pushed his hand away, and I told him: 'You'll get it.'" she testified.

And, she said, she gave him diamonds worth $17,000.

Feared Assault.

"I could make that $3,400 any time, but I couldn't get a new face," she said was her thought at the time, and the fear that he might strike her.

Numerous threats were made by telephone warning the actress not to take the witness stand. The latest threat was reported yesterday, police saying they had been informed Chicago gangsters, reputed to be friends of Friedman, were in town and had suggested they would mar the face of Mae with acid.

She has been under guard constantly since the trial opened.

Wife of Jensen, Overcome in Home, Fights for Life

Mrs. Evelyn Jensen, 26 years old, 5523 Melrose street, who was found overcome by lack of oxygen in her home Friday by her husband, Harry Jensen, a former member of the state parole board, yesterday was fighting for her life in the Norwegian American hospital. Edward Muehlenbeck, 29 years old, 3607 North St. Louis avenue, a salesman, was found dead in the same room, where he was to have demonstrated a vacuum cleaner. An inquest into his death was continued until Feb. 15.

Only Accredited Schools Will Get Graduate List

A list of the 6,512 Chicago High school graduates of last week will be issued only to accredited schools and colleges this year, and not to those of doubtful educational standards, it was announced yesterday by President James B. McCahey of the school board. Hitehrto each school has distributed its own lists, sometimes promiscuously. Superintendent of Schools William J. Bogan will issue the list this year at his discretion.

ELEVEN BODY TYPES

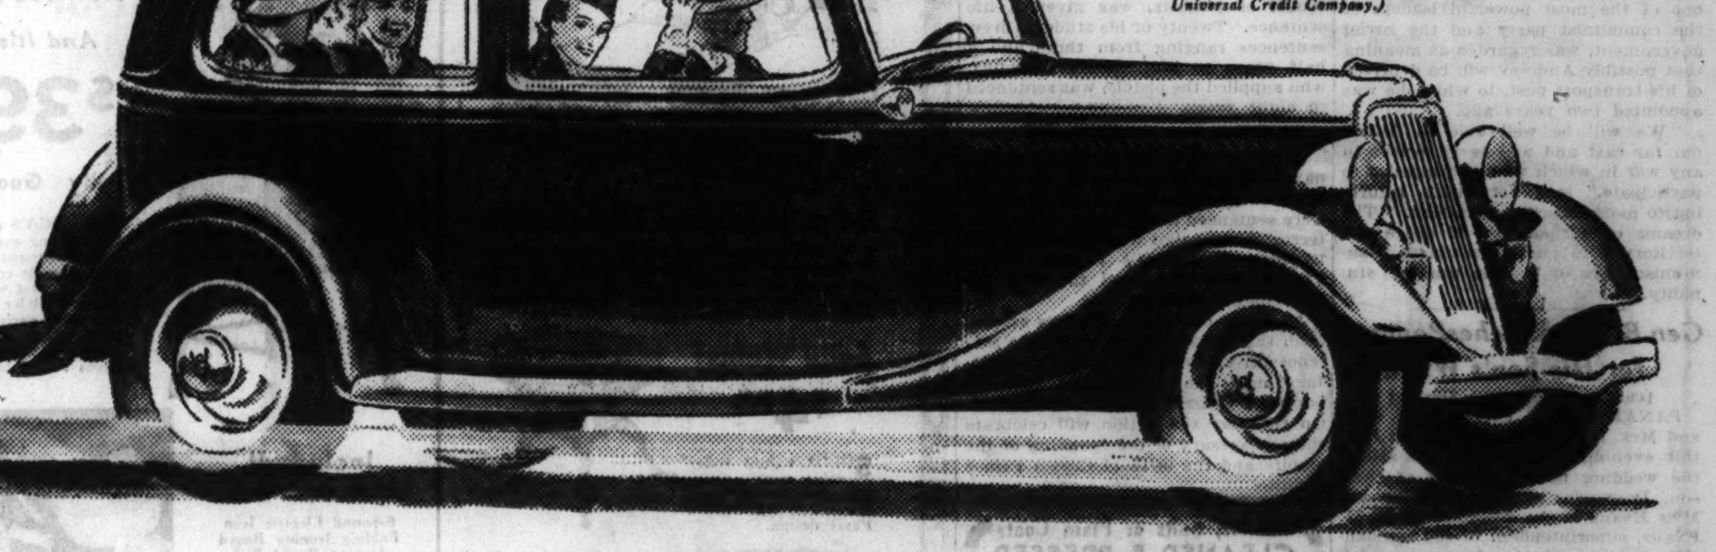
(F.O.B. Detroit, plus freight, delivery and tax. Bumpers and spare tire extra. Convenient terms through Authorized Ford Finance Plans of Universal Credit Company.)



THE New Ford V-8 will do—easily and accurately—over 80 miles an hour. But it is not likely that you will ever need to go that fast. This top speed means that in ordinary, every-day driving you get the ease and safety of great reserve power. It means that your car is not straining itself at 50, 55 or 60.

The New Ford V-8 is mighty smooth in that range because it has the reserve power to go a lot faster. That means efficient, economical running without strain or vibration.

The advantages of a high-speed car are not in the speed. A car designed to do 80 miles an hour easily must be extra strongly built. It must have a better and stronger steering gear. It must be correctly poised and balanced. Body, wheels, springs, axles, frame, brakes—all must be of the best design and greatest strength.

P.S.—Ford speed is honest speed. The speedometer is not "fixed" to mislead you. The limit of variation, for speedometers, a limit that cannot be avoided in manufacture, is 2¾ at 70 miles an hour. : : : No car is so easy to handle. New 15-to-1 steering gear ratio makes steering easier.

Everything in the car must be up to the 80-mile-an-hour standard to give you superlative performance at lower speeds.

Drive the comfortable New Ford V-8 for 1934 and see how this extra power gives you extra pleasure and motoring satisfaction. And extra economy too.

CLEANER TELLS LABOR TROUBLES AT RACKET TRIAL

Strike Called Off When He Signs Squires Pact.

Harry Harris, 825 South Lawndale avenue, an official of a cleaning and dyeing establishment, took the witness stand yesterday before Chief Justice Philip J. Finnegan in the Criminal court, where 18 defendants are on trial on a charge of conspiracy in the operation of a racket in his industry, and told of his business troubles in trying to cope with hoodlums.

A strike was called at his plant, the Nu-Way Cleaners and Dyers, 375 North Cicero avenue, in March, 1931, he said, shortly after he had refused to sign the Squires agreement. This contract gave Dr. Benjamin Squires, University of Chicago economist, dictatorial powers over prices and employment conditions in the industry.

Tells of Officials' Visit.

The witness said that Jean Franks and Ben Abrams, union business agents, visited him as soon as the strike was called and impressed upon him the advisability of signing the Squires contract.

"They walked into my office and said, 'Harris, you ought to go along with the others and sign that contract,'" the witness testified. "I told them I wasn't ready to sign it. With that they walked out."

But after the strike had lasted a day Harris said he decided to call Franks and talk things over with him. When the business agent arrived Harris said he told him:

"Jean, I think I'll have to sign that contract. Franks said, 'All right, we'll call off the strike then.'"

Strike Called Off.

The strike was called off as the business agent promised and two weeks later Harris said he signed the contract. He told, however, of subsequently being called to the office of Sam Ginsburg, another defendant and minor labor official.

"Ginsburg told me I was not a good member and was not paying my dues," said Harris. "I said I was. There was a quarrel and I finally walked out of the office."

Another witness at the special session which was called yesterday, a court holiday, by Judge Finnegan to speed the trial, was W. H. Fricke of Evanston, an official of a cleaning and dyeing plant at 5427 Broadway.

He said Dr. Squires had asked him to join his Cleaners and Dyers institute in 1931 but that he had protested that the two per cent assessment was too high. He said this would amount to dues of about $7,000 or $8,000 a year.

Warned of "Stoppage."

"I asked Squires how he expected to enforce the contract when I was called to his office in March of 1931," the witness said. "He told me there would have to be stoppage if the cleaners didn't agree. I asked what he meant by 'stoppage' and he said that was entirely up to labor."

A week later Fricke joined the Institute and paid dues until May of 1932, Fricke said.

On cross-examination by Defense Attorney James E. McShane, the witness admitted that though he had been a member of the institute's board of trustees and at present was a member of the joint industrial relation board he did not know how the institute's money was spent except that portion disbursed for advertising.

Jack [Machine Gun] McGurn, Capone henchman, will be called as a state witness next week, it was learned yesterday. It is expected that McGurn, who is under a court subpoena, will be put on the stand early in the week as one of the high points in the state's case.

HYPNOTIZED WIFE TELLS HOW MATE DIRECTED SUIT

Mrs. Faye Bossow, the school teacher who testified recently that she was forced into a divorce by means of hypnotism by her former husband, Dr. Ernest W. Bossow, yesterday told of other alleged tricks practiced by him. She is petitioning Superior Judge Rudolph F. Desort to set the divorce aside.

Mrs. Bossow said that early in July of 1932 Dr. Bossow told her firmly: "I want you to get a divorce." She replied that she didn't want one, she testified, but nevertheless found herself obtaining one later the same month.

Before she went to court to get the divorce, Mrs. Bossow said, her husband placed her under a hypnotic spell and coached her in what she should say in court. He further promised her a turkey dinner while she was in the trance if she would be "a good girl" and follow instructions. But after the hearing, when he took her to the Edgewater Beach hotel for the promised reward, it turned out to be capon, she said.

"It's Miss Thompson, if you please," responded Eddie, 17 years old, who came here from Brooklyn, Ala., to live with her uncle and aunt because she wants to learn to fly and to be an orchestra leader.

She's always worn boy's clothing, she said, and always will "because my daddy's my buddy, and he likes for me to dress this way."

JUDGE REJECTS PLAN FOR LEASING MEDINAH CLUB

Traces History and Member Rulings.

Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward yesterday rejected a proposal of the membership of the Medinah-Michigan Avenue club to lease the property from the receiver as "unwise, inexpedient, inadvisable, and obviously detrimental to the best interests of the creditors."

The plan, advanced by a group which formerly controled the old Medinah Athletic club and represented by former Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom, had been under advisement since Jan. 8. It was proposed to pay the receiver, Saul B. Optner, a minimum rental of $135,000 a month, or all income up to $200,000, plus 80 per cent of all over $200,000. A thousand new members, paying dues of $10 a month, were to have been acquired.

Finds Weakness in Plan.

But Judge Woodward held that the character of the organization proposing the lease was "vague and uncertain, with admittedly no assets and no resources, wishing all the benefits without assuming any of the responsibilities." The court would be derelict in its duty in approving such a lease, his opinion stated.

Besides rejecting the plea of the membership, Judge Woodward instructed the receiver to submit recommendations for increasing the business of the club along the lines of his exhibit B, which called for enlarging the membership and accepting all outside business without respect to fraternal or religious affiliations.

Evidence was submitted at the hearing by Attorney Irving Herriott, counsel for the second mortgage holder, the Seneca Securities company, showing that the club barred Catholics and Jews and that many large organizations canceled reservations for parties because of this discrimination.

Traces Membership History.

"The receivership has been a chaotic one," said Judge Woodward. "Originally the club membership was limited to Shriners. Later Blue Lodge Masons were admitted. It appears that applicants of high character, probity and standing were rejected solely on account of their religious beliefs or social origin."

Judge Woodward's opinion sketched the history of the $8,000,000 42 story property, pointing out that the total debts outstanding are $5,781,000. These are made up as follows: First mortgage, plus accrued interest, $4,347,000; second mortgage, plus accrued interest, $710,906; unsecured notes, plus accrued interest, $512,000, and unsecured open accounts, $214,078.

33 POLICEMEN SHIFTED IN NEW TRANSFER ORDER

Two captains, two lieutenants, four sergeants, and twenty-five patrolmen were given new assignments in a transfer order issued yesterday by Police Commissioner Allman.

The sergeants transferred are Peter Bernacchi, from the Sheffield avenue station, and James Coleman, from the Hyde Park district to the South State street station. Sergts. Patrick O'Shea and John McClowry, now at South State street, are transferred to Sheffield avenue and Hyde Park, respectively.

Shroucls for the Dead Stolen from Motor Car

Thieves broke into the automobile of A. J. Manro, salesman for an undertaker's supply firm, while it was parked yesterday in front of his home at 4111 North Francisco avenue and stole $468 worth of shrouds for the dead and embalming fluids.

MONEY.

Money is one of the dozen most useful inventions mankind has ever made. It ranks in importance with the wheel, the mariner's compass, the art of smelting iron, the concept of zero, the microscope, the steam engine, and the electric motor. Without money [and its offspring, credit] our highly complex and immensely productive economic organization could not have been developed and could not be maintained.

In our world, with a few unimportant exceptions, every transfer of goods from maker to consumer requires the use of money. In reality we exchange goods or services for goods or services, but in making the exchange we must have money. It is the common denominator of all transactions. A workman employed in an automobile factory making $500 automobiles earns in fact a tenth of an automobile a week, but he gets $50. If he were paid in automobiles he would receive one every ten weeks. He might well have to spend the next ten months trading his automobile as best he could in a moneyless world for food, clothes, shelter, and amusements. If every one had to go through this elaborate process of barter an industrial civilization with its high degree of specialization could not be maintained. Without some kind of a medium of exchange we would quickly revert to savagery.

Money also provides a means of storing up purchasing power for future use. The dollar received today need not be exchanged for goods at the moment of its receipt. It can buy goods tomorrow, next week or next year. Here again its services are of incalculable value to mankind. Among other benefits, it permits the individual within the limit of his means to regulate his consumption to fit his peculiar tastes and requirements.

Money is so useful and so much a part of our lives that we have come to think of it almost as a product of nature, like air, water and sunlight. Money is, of course, nothing of the sort. It is purely an artifact. Like every other artifact, it can be destroyed by abuse, but once a money has come to be accepted as good it takes a considerable amount of abuse to undermine its value. Our society cannot function without money, and it will therefore tolerate debasement of its money long after prudence might dictate universal distrust.

That is the background against which the present manipulations of the dollar should be viewed. Deliberate efforts have been made to decrease the value of the dollar, now and in the future. Some experiments, of which the gold purchase policy is the most notable, have been undertaken which have never been tried before anywhere and are therefore calculated to disturb confidence in our money because the results of the policy are not clearly predictable.

Formal devaluation by act of congress goes farther in the same direction. We have become accustomed to having a certain gold backing for our money, and the gold in question has been held by the reserve banks which issued the money. Now the gold has been taken away from the reserve banks and intrusted to the secretary of the treasury alone, who may redeem money pretty much at his own discretion. The gold reserve is to be used at the discretion of an officeholder precisely at the moment when the federal government's deficit is of unprecedented size, the government's debt is on the way to reaching its peak for all time, and the borrowing power of the government as registered in the interest rates it must pay is gradually waning. To intrust the gold reserve, which to many minds is the chief source of value in our money, to an officeholder who will be under great temptation to use the gold in some fashion to meet the government's mounting deficits is certainly not calculated to increase confidence in our money.

Forty cents has already been knocked off the dollar, and in spite of that fact there has been no marked loss of confidence in our money. That is a remarkable evidence both of the dependence of our society upon money and of the emotional stability of the nation. There has been a flight from the dollar, to be sure, but it has been confined for the most part to financiers and others who regard money as a commodity rather than as a medium of exchange. The great bulk of the population has not come to doubt that the dollar received today will buy about as much tomorrow and next year as it will today.

Forty cents has already been knocked off, and the President is empowered to knock off another dime at his discretion. At the same time the gold backing is being rendered one degree more remote. The people have accepted all these proposals, but how much more will they stand? No one is competent to state the limit precisely, but that there is a limit cannot be denied.

There might be no great cause for anxiety were it not for the appalling condition of the federal budget. It is six billion dollars out of balance. If the six billions cannot be found in any other way the government will have to resort, in one fashion or another, to the printing press to make the money it must have to pay its bills. There is no reason to think that the American people will continue to trust their money if it is subjected to printing press dilution in addition to the devaluation which has already taken place. It follows that the greatest menace to the American people today is the government's unprecedented extravagances.

THE ELEMENTS OF WATER TRANSPORTATION ILLUSTRATED.

Certain of our readers, interested in waterway transportation, have objected to the statement that rivers should not be canalized except in cases where it may be demonstrated that there is national need for unlocking required resources marooned for the want of cheap transportation. Some objection has been made to a statement to the effect that millions of dollars of the taxpayers' money have been dumped into the Ohio river with no result other than the establishing of Pittsburgh steel in the southwest. They point out that the Ohio river formerly carried an enormous through tonnage that was destroyed by ruthless railway competition. To restore it at low level water rates would seem to be an admirable objective.

Whatever the theory may be, the fact remains that the only substantial traffic that has traversed the length of the Ohio waterway since its completion is Pittsburgh steel, and a small quantity of Pennsylvania oil. The coal, sand and gravel movements remain largely in the pools, and the merchandise traffic is negligible. The assumption that the former volume ever will be restored overlooks the history of the city of Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh was not originally developed as a steel town, but by the textile industry. King Cotton established itself in the south, but the east was the American consuming territory. What could be more natural than that raw cotton in its bulky shipping condition should move by barge through the only medium of transport, the Ohio river, to its eastern terminus, to be fabricated there and the cloth and thread transported over the Alleghenies via the portage system or in Conestoga wagons to the eastern consumer? The Carnegies came from Scotland to Pittsburgh not to bring knowledge of steel manufacture but to bring their experience as spinners. The barges could operate to the best possible advantage with a bulky upstream load of cotton and a heavy downstream load of coal, which was then undiscovered in the south.

Then the construction of the Cincinnati Southern railway was commenced. Work on it disclosed the enormous coal deposits of the Birmingham area. The south needed no more Pittsburgh coal, and that city's spinning industry received its first blow from high water transportation because the barges could not afford to operate on a one way load in the vastly inferior direction upstream. New England took advantage of the situation. It could get cotton via the unfettered ocean routes. Because of the migration of a large part of the male population to the west, thousands of women were available to work in the textile industry.

The development of the steel industry in the Pittsburgh district came later with the opening of the great lakes routes for the Michigan and Minnesota ore movement. It was a big proposition to be handled in a big way—railroads from the ranges to the lake fronts, construction of the great lakes ore fleet, development of the Soo canals, and the deepening of the Detroit and St. Clair rivers by the government, and lastly the railroads offering trainload rates from Lake Erie ports to the Pittsburgh district, where ore met coal for the manufacture of steel. Finally came the establishment of Pennsylvania and West Virginia coals in the great lakes basin to furnish return loads for the ore carriers. Here again it was necessary to employ railroad trainload rates, now commonly known as lake cargo rates.

Here was a genuine water venture carried through to a successful operation, but its success merely demonstrates that where the elements are available water transportation can be a wonderful servant. It forms no criterion for equally low water transportation charges where such balanced traffic in enormous volume and other conditions do not exist. While it is true that the traffic that formerly moved on the Ohio has been transferred to the rails, there was no unfair competition involved, and the railways to Lake Erie have been able to give a splendid demonstration of their ability to furnish economical transportation of trainload quantities.

Editorial of the Day

THE LAW'S WAYS.

[Indianapolis News.]

The lay mind may never understand the niceties of reason and hairsplitting that dictate some court decisions, but it does understand the blundering of lawmakers, and perhaps agrees with Grant, who said in his first inaugural address: "I know no method to secure the repeal of bad or obnoxious laws so effectual as their strict construction." Which is by way of explaining the United States Circuit Court of Appeals decision in the celebrated Donnelley income tax case at Chicago.

Reuben H. Donnelley suffered business reverses with a partner in 1905, and his creditors forced him through bankruptcy. He won a dismissal of the proceedings by buying up all the claims at 26 cents on the dollar. But he did not consider his debts paid. Instead, he turned to the repair of his fortune. He laid aside his savings until, in 1927, he was able to find all his old creditors and to pay each in full. He paid $273,544.35, of which $135,856.53 was interest. He deducted this payment from his income tax return for 1927. Two years later he died.

The internal revenue department declined to allow the deduction. Its decision was upheld by the board of tax appeals. And now the federal Circuit court has sustained the government again. The tax collectors maintained that the payment was a gift. The courts agree that it was. They declare that his debts were settled when the bankruptcy proceeding was dropped. Neither Donnelley nor his creditors thought so. Unless the decision is reversed by the Supreme court, Donnelley's heirs will have to pay $63,439 in taxes on the "gift."

Probably the court felt that to call the absolved liabilities growing out of the old failure debts in fact would be to undermine the purpose of the bankruptcy law. But it is probable that nearly any jury of twelve men would declare that Donnelley had carried the forgiven obligation in his mental audit as debts, paid them as debts, and by paying them earned the peace that he enjoyed in the evening of his life. Certainly no citizen takes pride in his government's maintenance by such taxes nor in a succession of congresses that found no way to spare the people the stigma of the exaction.

THE PROSPECT FOR AMERICA

(An Address)

BY COL. ROBERT R. M'CORMICK.

[Harris Hall, Northwestern University, Wednesday, Dec. 13, 1933.]

IV.

Which brings me to the next point: that whatever your troubles may be, there is no salvation in government ownership and operation of anything.

In order to make this perfectly clear let us take those activities which government has always maintained as monopolies to itself—the conduct of war and the administration of justice.

Let us begin with the navy. At one time the Spanish navy, nourished by the gold from Peru and the silver from Mexico, dominated the world. It built the Armada, the finest fleet that the naval art could conceive, and sent it against England to be met and destroyed by a flock of merchantmen, for England had no organized navy then.

After England became the dominant world power and our ancestors revolted, a handful of American merchantmen blockaded England in the face of her overwhelming navy, and when it came to battle defeated the warships of England with old, dilapidated merchant ships.

In the civil war the Confederates raised a burned hulk, fortified it with railroad iron and armed it with cannon. Against this makeshift gunboat the entire American navy with its glorious traditions, its professional officers, its dockyards, and its builders, was helpless. One Union frigate was sunk; one frigate was burned. The whole fleet at Hampton Roads was at the mercy of the Merrimac, and Washington was in peril until a small iron boat that a Swedish civil engineer had designed and forced upon the navy department by supersalesmanship came to the rescue.

On land the Spanish army that had dominated Europe was defeated and driven to ruin by the burghers of Holland. Later our farmers and backwoodsmen drove the victors of Minden from Boston, captured Burgoyne at Saratoga, commanding armies of English and German hereditary soldiers; and thirty years later at New Orleans farmers from Tennessee and Kentucky, citizens of New Orleans, and the sailors of nearby ports defeated Pakenham, commanding the English army which had triumphed over Napoleon's armies in Spain and afterward conquered Napoleon himself at Waterloo.

You will find in Gen. Grant's memoirs that when he took the city of Vicksburg with an army that had been armed by the ordnance department, with the unlimited resources of the government behind it and all the world at its disposition, the first thing his men did after the capitulation was to abandon the weapons which their government had given to them and take instead the rifles which the agents of the Confederacy, almost without credit, had bought wherever they could find them, had shipped to Vera Cruz, and brought on muleback across the Texas frontier.

Consider, then, another government monopoly, justice. What of the reign of crime which is defying the justice of this country from end to end? What of professional murder, of kidnaping? What of prisons run by and for criminals, of jail deliveries, and of paroles engineered by the officials? What of the savage lynchings by inflamed people who have taken justice into their own hands and exercised lynch law because the government monopoly of justice has so completely broken down?

Is the government which cannot begin to operate the functions it holds as monopolies to undertake the dominance of us all? No person of normal intelligence and ordinary honesty will say so. This subject need not be discussed further to educated, competent men.

As you younger men come into the period of active life you will not be misled by the self-serving statements of pay roll patriots. You will want to fall into the places left vacant for you and continue the advance of civilization.

For civilization began its advance in the dim days of the past with the recognition of property rights. In the earliest times there were only such rights as the cave man could maintain with his stone hatchet and could acquire with the same instrument. A temporary loss of strength from illness or accident would cost him property and life itself. From this developed communism in the tribe, the ownership of property in common, the customary ownership of the pre-Middle Ages; which, in the course of time, passed to the royal ownership of all the land let out in the servitudes of feudalism. In reaction against such uncertain tenures came personal entailed ownership of property, in which the owner could not alienate the property but must pass it down to his next of kin. From this in turn grew the American institution, free ownership, the right to own and to alienate property, the right to devise property or to leave it in equal portions among one's heirs at law.

As soon as men became free they began to work together in partnerships, a system unknown in the Middle Ages but developed by the Romans and forgotten in their destruction. The courts acquiring education adjudicated partnerships according to the Roman law of "Societas."

The Roman institution of "Universitas" percolated through the dark ages confusedly in the form of religious, municipal, and trading organizations set up by act of government. Their use was greatly increased, especially in Holland and England, to carry on the adventurous and uncertain overseas trade of the era of discovery, from which comes our phrase "business ventures." It was for the state of New York to give itself a flying start on the other states, and this country on other countries, by the passage of a general incorporation law in 1811. A generation later congress in exercise of its constitutional powers enacted a general patent law in 1836.

The principal difference between partnerships and corporations is that partnerships terminate with the death of each partner, the heir of the deceased withdrawing the investment of the deceased and leaving all of the going value in the partnership, and that each partner is liable for the debts of the partnership, while corporations continue irrespective of the deaths of the incorporators, whose interests pass to their legatees, and that stockholders, having paid for their stock, have no obligations to pay the debts of the corporation except in certain cases. It is the latter feature that has been so important in the development of new devices. Men have been willing to risk a definite amount of their wealth in buying stock of a corporation to build canals, railroads, airplanes, and radio sets, where they would not dare incur the general liability of a partnership.

The general patent law and the general corporation law have been the team that have together opened the door to the recent vast advance in civilization, a greater advance in the century of their existence than in all previous recorded time.

We cannot exist without them. From the cradle to the grave there is no implement we use, garment we wear, or food we eat that is not the product of one or more patents and one or more corporations.

The patent law, while it provokes a great deal of legal acrimony and litigation, seems to give general satisfaction and has undergone little amendment. On the other hand, the corporation law has never given popular satisfaction. We find it continually criticized and changed in hundreds of details, with as much legislation to harass corporations as to aid them; but we know of no substitute to do its work.

RATS VERSUS MAN.

RATS are responsible for the spread of some disease. Wherever there is a possibility of an invasion by plague, the rat crop must be kept down. Had London known this and acted on it a few centuries ago they might have escaped the great epidemic which is held to have been the most appalling disaster that has befallen any community in historical times; and Defoe could not have written his graphic story.

There are some other pestilential diseases which can be spread by rats and their parasites. Some of these, in milder forms, are present among us much of the time. In addition, rats are responsible for the spread of some of the bacteria that cause certain forms of food poisoning. Control of rats is, therefore, regarded as a health measure. The job is not an easy one.

The rat is the only animal that has not been domesticated and that remains ever and always at enmity with man, and yet is able to take up his abode in man's house and then live and beget his kind. This is possible because of his extraordinary mental ability. Debating societies have been known to spend sessions discussing the momentous question, Which has the better brain, man or the rat? The side that argued for the rat has been known to win the debate.

The truth seems to be about as follows: Man has the better brain, but when the rat brain is pitted against so much of the human attention as is engaged in the particular contest, the rat wins. While a serious and sustained battle against rats has some chance of success, a half thought out and half carried out program is certain to lose.

Books have been written on methods of trapping rats, of poisoning them, and of building them out.

For a long time experts in the rat field have contended that both cats and dogs were of no practical value in rat campaigns. A recent Paris letter to the Journal of the American Medical Association tells of a new breed of French cats that can be used to rid premises, stockyards, and even cities of rats. Dr. Loir, nephew of the great Pasteur, is health officer of Havre, a shipping city. In every such place the rat problem is of importance. As health officer he operates a cat farm on which is raised and trained a breed of cats that is more than a match for rats. These cats are distributed over Havre. The correspondent says: "Not a single rat can now be found in the city of Havre."

Mr. Herriot, the mayor of Lyons and otherwise known to fame, got some of these cats to do away with the rats in the slaughter houses of his city. Said the correspondent: "Within a few weeks these buildings were rid of rats."

Paris has now started one of these cat farms preliminary to attacking the rat problem of that city. All of which sounds too good to be true. Had Dr. Loir lived a hundred years ago there might have been no "Pied Piper of Hamelin" and no poem about him.

TRAINING NEEDED.

A. C. S. writes: What is your explanation of nervous breakdown and its cure? I have all the symptoms of same, fears of all kinds such as fear of being alone, of insanity, of dying, and the feeling that something is going to happen. I experience strange feelings in my body, sinking spells, dizziness, fainting. I have talked to various people who have had this disease, and their cure. After trying all of them I find I have not improved very much. I have heard that there is a serum that can be injected into the bloodstream that will control this condition. Is this true? What is the effect, the cost, and the result of this treatment?

REPLY.

The term nervous breakdown is very loosely used. In your case I think the morbid fears are psychopathic. You should be cured by training. The guidance of some one experienced in handling such cases should help you to win your way out. I do not know what is the serum you have heard of. Can you find out and write me? My opinion, for what it is worth, is that taking such a serum would act more psychically than physically.

TOENAILS AND HICCUPS.

C. writes:

1. Ten or twelve years ago I was troubled with ingrowing toenails. After trying different methods of treating them I hit upon an idea, tried it, and have never been bothered since. I let the nail grow out beyond the flesh of the toe and cut it square and about one-eighth inch long. That was the cure, though it is rather hard on socks. After the nail grew out beyond, the flesh healed up and I had no more trouble.

2. Another subject of interest is that of hiccups. Some years ago I was troubled with that. I had it continuously for about 48 hours and was on the verge of calling a doctor when, about 3 o'clock in the morning, when loss of sleep was getting the best of me, I went into the bathroom, stuck my finger down my throat, and went through all the contortions of vomiting, but didn't. When I straightened up after a few minutes I was delighted to notice that my hiccups had gone. I went to bed and had a good sleep. I've used the method a dozen times since, and the relief is instant.

REPLY.

1. Your method has been used by thousands and cures some cases. The soreness is due to rubbing against the corner of the nail. Any method that prevents such rubbing cures.

2. Again you discovered an old method that cures some cases. Hiccupping is caused by spasmodic contraction of the diaphragm. Giving that muscle another task stops hiccupping occasionally.

COLD FINGERS.

Mrs. E. B. J. writes: In the morning before the house is warm several of my fingers—different fingers at different times and seldom all of them at the same time—lose all their color and feel numb. The ends of the fingers feel somewhat as if a rubber band were binding them tight. It is not exactly painful, but uncomfortable and annoying. Can you explain this? I am 50 years old and in good health.

REPLY.

You have a mild Raynaud's disease or some disorder that belongs in that family. Living in the far south for the cold season is an excellent but expensive treatment. If you must stay where it is cold keep your hands and arms warm. Wear loose woolen gloves.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ISTANBUL, Turkey. — How four peasants rowed across the Danube in a blizzard and secured for themselves probably the strangest application of Woodrow Wilson's point about the self-determination of peoples in the history of Versailles has just been disclosed in the Turkish press.

They crossed from the island of Ada-Kaleh. Their adventure added to Rumanian territory, settled for a time at least, a question which Wilson, David Lloyd George, and Clemenceau were too busy to consider. It also brought complete satisfaction to the islanders who had taken into their own hands the disposal of their particular post-war problem.

The island has a population of between 500 and 600. Throughout its long history it has been the bone of contention with the rival war dogs in the Balkans. Its resources, natural or developed, are of little or no value.

But it lies in the middle of the Danube where the stream flows through the Carpathian mountains. As a strategic asset in a Balkan war it is a gem.

The Romans fought for it in the time of Trajan. After that the Hungarians took it, then it became Austrian territory. Still later, after a bloody battle it became a prized possession of the Turks.

After many other occupations, which gave neither satisfaction nor assurance to anybody, the island was definitely ceded to Turkey by the peace treaty of Sistov in 1791.

From that time until 20 years ago Ada-Kaleh remained Turkish, although the Christian countries in the Balkans had taken up the long struggle to drive the Turk out of Europe. It was Turkish through its Moslem population, and Turkish through its subjection to the Ottoman empire.

In 1913, however, Austria profited by the Turkish defeats in the Balkan war. She reclaimed the island and reacquired both possession of the land and the Hapsburg sovereignty over the Moslem population.

But this occupation was brief, for within a year the world was at war. In the scramble of greed which followed, none remembered Ada-Kaleh. The little island seemed destined to a place on the earth, but on no map. The negotiators of the treaty of Versailles were too preoccupied. Larger questions had to be settled. Even the Rumanians themselves forgot it.

Then one blizzardy night a Rumanian frontier guardsman saw a boat approaching Rumanian soil. He ordered it to land and asked the occupants to come ashore for examination. Four Turkish peasants, wearing fezzes, stepped out of the boat.

"My friend," said the leader, "we are the delegates of our brothers on the island of Ada-Kaleh. We have just read in a newspaper that a powerful American named Wilson has proclaimed the right of all people to determine their allegiance.

"We have been Turks. But Turkey, vanquished, is unable to protect us. We are Austrians, but there is no Austrian empire any more. Therefore, we wish to become Rumanians."

The problem seemed too big for the sentry to settle by himself, so he marched the four men to the officer in charge of his post. There the story was repeated and the same offer was made. But even the officer felt unqualified to decide. He entered the facts on a report sheet.

This he forwarded to his superiors. Eventually that sheet of paper found its way to Versailles. It resulted in the decision that Ada-Kaleh should be placed under the jurisdiction of the Rumanian government.

CO-SIGNER.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Two years ago I co-signed on a loan. As they have only my signature and not my wife's, I thought they could not hold me as [1] our property is in joint tenancy. Since then we have lost everything [2] even our furniture being mortgaged. The only thing left is my earnings of $10 per week. 3. Can they attach this? 4. They have threatened to attach my $10 because the party failed in his payments. Twice before when he failed they stopped my earnings for a week each time. The firm protested and they released me, but through this I lost my job. 5. I don't know what action my present employer will take when they start such proceedings against me.

R. A. R.

1. This fact would merely mean that they could reach only your share.
2. They would also be subject to the mortgage.
3. No.
4. If you mean that they served a garnishee demand notice before securing judgment against you, this is unauthorized by statute and you might bring a suit against them for the damages sustained by losing your job.
5. Try notifying them that you will hold them liable if they serve a demand notice in advance of securing judgment against you.

COURT PROCEEDINGS.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A party who formerly worked for me under a contract owes me a sum of money according to the terms of that contract. His residence is in Missouri, and he travels Missouri but is paid from, and works for, a company in Alton, Ill. 1. Can papers from the Circuit court in Chicago be served on him when he is in Alton and then the case tried in Chicago? 2. If a judgment is obtained, must the suit for garnishment be tried in Alton because he gets his money from this company at Alton? 3. If the garnishment failed, how could I use my Illinois judgment to collect from him or his property in Missouri? 4. How should such a case be handled where myself and his present employer are both in Illinois but he resides and travels in Missouri?

W. E. E.

1. If he does not reside here and the transaction did not take place here, then we see no basis for instituting the proceedings here.
2. You can bring garnishment proceedings wherever you could serve process on the garnishee.
3. It would be necessary to secure a Missouri judgment on the basis of the Illinois judgment.
4. The first step would be to employ an attorney.

THE TRAGEDY OF SIMPLIFIED SPELLING.

Chicago, Jan. 29.—As a small boy, in grammar school, I gave my teachers much trouble with the singular answers I got to problems in arithmetic. My solutions never agreed with those in the back of the book, and I should, doubtless, have been recommended to the school for feeble minds, except for my excellence in spelling. In this I was always head of my class, and on one occasion "spelled down" the pick of the county's schools. This tickled my teachers so much that from then on I had no trouble getting passing marks in my other studies as they were convinced that no one so well informed about words could possibly really be as dumb as I appeared to be.

I fear they were mistaken. After many years I still find it hard to imagine the answer to such problems as: "How long will it take 10 men to lay a mile of track in New Guinea if 1-5 are fat men and 4-5 are cannibals?" My only source of pride has been that words like liquefy, consensus and mammilliform were easy for me, though they sometimes eluded my betters.

But now comes THE TRIBUNE, with simplified spelling for some of those old catchwords. Cotillion, tranquillity! When I remember how many school day triumphs were won because of those superfluous l's a great sympathy wells within me for present day halfwits. Where now is their refuge? Pavilion, battalion! What perfect traps for the orderly minds of the math stars! O, spare those l's, dear, good milords! Providence "tempers the wind to the shorn lamb": surely you would not take from the mentally deficient of this generation his one chance of reminding the haughty prodigy in "Trig" that his "Carribean" would conform more nearly to polished usage with one r and two b's.

C. I. T.

A LONG WAIT, BROTHER.

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Jan. 28.—As a long time reader of your valuable paper I resent your introduction of saner spelling of many words.

Your paper strongly resented governmental interference into your freedom of the press; but you think it proper to enforce new spelling on an educated public whether it is proper or not.

It is time enough for newspapers to change the spelling of words in the English language when our universities agree together to make the necessary changes.

Take the word decalogue. You propose decalog. Suppose some other newspaper elected to spell it dekalog. Which is right?

You have many well educated men on your staff; still I think it is better to keep to the standard spelling until the whole of the United States' larger newspapers and our universities can get together on the necessary changes to be made.

BEN DAWSON.

HATS AND BUTTER FAT.

Beecher, Ill., Jan. 27.—During the first week of December, 1933, my son purchased a hat for himself at Hammond, Ind., and paid $2.45 for it. At that time butter fat was worth 22 cents per pound at Chicago, or nearly $5 for an 8 gallon can of cream, enough to pay for two such hats.

One month later I bought a hat of apparently the same quality for myself at the same store, but in the meantime the price of dry goods had advanced so I had to pay $3.50 for my hat.

During the interval the price of butter fat had dropped to 15 cents per pound, or a trifle over $3 for an 8 gallon can of cream, not enough to pay for one hat.

A year or more ago it was customary to blame the Hoover administration for such conditions. Who, if anybody, is to blame now?

READER.

RELIEF FOR VETERANS.

Chicago, Jan. 30.—An A. P. dispatch advises that Gen. Frank T. Hines, veterans' administrator, told a senate subcommittee that 486,926 veterans and dependents had been stricken from the compensation rolls between June 30 and Oct. 31.

Naturally these disabled veterans and dependents will have to be cared for by some agency. The local taxpayers, of course.

Of course, the general does not mention that on appeal some of that number were returned to the rolls, where the appeal boards decided their claims were well founded. The administration controls the boards.

At Hines hospital, which serves Illinois and three northern counties of Indiana, less than 24 per cent of the appeals were returned to the rolls. If upon consideration by competent and unprejudiced boards that percentage is just and fair, then no one should complain. The review of each case, a great many of which were voluminous, consumed just 4½ minutes of the boards' time.

Illinois, we know, is normally Republican, and its Democratic organizations might as well be Republicans or veterans, for all the consideration they will receive.

Suppose we ask whether or not the general might be playing politics, and that he publish an accurate list, by states, of the percentages returned to the rolls as against those appealed. We are rather anxious to learn just how this great economy act is working out.

W. S. DOLAN,
Chairman Publicity Committee, John J. McShane Post, No. 1843, Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States.

REPUBLICAN ERRORS.

Chicago, Jan. 29.—I notice Deneen, Crowe, Harding, thinking they represent the Republican party, have all been sleeping in the same bed trying to agree upon who is to run.

Will these supposed leaders never learn anything by their past mistakes?

Can they not see that the day of crooked politics has gone into the discard?

Have they not noticed that the New Deal under our able President stands for "public office is a public trust," and that he is making good along these lines? The people like that kind of real statesmanship. No longer will the people back a party that cannot produce men and women who themselves are honest and candidates who will serve honestly in any position to which they may be elected or appointed.

The New Deal has hit Chicago, and the people will remain away from all combinations such as have been pulled off in the past. The hundreds of thousands of Republicans who in Illinois voted for Roosevelt are sick and tired of the gang who have had charge of the state most of the past fifteen or twenty years, Chicago included, and they now mean to refuse their support. There are enough decent Republicans and Democrats in Chicago who can elect an entire ticket, if only a few people in whom they have confidence will start the ball rolling.

A ROOSEVELT REPUBLICAN.

THANK YOU, DAVID.

Saugatuck, Mich., Jan. 30.—I am a boy 10 years old and am in the sixth grade in school. I saw a picture in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE taken in Genoa, Italy. Its headlines read: "Genoa, Italy, Boasts Electrified Railway Terminal with Trains Passing Under City." You also added that Genoa is historic as the port from which Columbus sailed when he discovered America, which is wrong. Genoa is the place where Columbus was born. He sailed from Palos, Spain. If you did not notice it, others did.

GERMANY AGAIN DEMANDS ARMY OF 300,000 MEN

Hitler Flatly Rejects French Disarm Proposals.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Feb. 3.—Germany must have a defensive force of 300,000 men. This force must be equipped with six inch guns and six ton tanks.

This was Chancellor Hitler's firm reply, made public today, to France's latest proposal on the disarmament problem. The answer, which was delivered to Paris on Jan. 19, flatly rejected practically all of the proposals contained in the French aide memoir of Jan. 1.

Hitler's note denied a German army of 300,000 troops for defense would result in an armaments race.

Army of 300,000 "No Menace."

"So far as Germany is concerned, it would only mean the creation of a defensive army which would be far from constituting a menace to any other state," the note continued. "Taking into account the geographical situation, and especially the length and nature of the German frontiers, 300,000 troops is, from any point of view, the minimum which Germany requires for security in the present circumstances.

"This becomes particularly evident when a comparison is made of this figure with the armaments of the heavily armed neighboring states among which are France, Poland, Czechoslovakia, and Belgium.

Hitler's reply stressed that all of Germany's neighbors also possess "great masses of trained reserves." France alone, the note said, could place 5,000,000 men in the field by a general mobilization.

It added that "political organizations," such as Nazi storm troopers and Hitler guards, can not be compared to military reserves in other countries.

Welcomes World Probe.

In this connection the note went on as follows:

"Germany is ready to submit the nonmilitary character of the associations in question to the planned international control providing other countries do likewise with respect to similar organizations."

"The main stipulations and possible consequences of the French plan raise serious doubts as to whether solution of the disarmament problem could be found along these lines which would conform to justice and serve as an assurance of peace," the reply emphasized.

In conclusion Hitler asked France to state the exact man power she desired in the regular and colonial army and how she intended to list her colonials and reserves.

"Will France guarantee not to station or use her colonial forces on home soil in case a pact is signed?" the chancellor queried. "France is requested to announce explicitly what she intends to do about her tremendous reserves, the nature of restricting military aviation, aerial bombing, materials for war, length of military service, and types of artillery."

GERMANY OPENS AIRMAIL LINE TO SOUTH AMERICA

STUTTGART, Germany, Feb. 3.—(AP)—A regular bi-weekly South American air mail service from Germany started at 8 a. m. today. A mail plane with an average speed of 200 miles an hour roared away southward on the first leg of a route which will reduce the mail carrying time from Germany to Brazil and Argentina by two-thirds, compared with the previous steamer service.

Pilot Untucht supervised the loading of 400 pounds of mail and started out for Seville, Spain. From there other planes will carry the mail in relays to Las Palmas, Azores; Bathurst, Gambia, on the west coast of Africa, and thence across the South Atlantic by way of the steamer Westfalen, the mid-Atlantic floating base for the Lufthansa air line.

The new air mail line brings Buenos Aires to within six or seven days' distance from Berlin and places Rio de Janeiro within five or six days, compared to the three weeks occupied by a steamer which sails only once every six weeks.

PRIEST JAILED; FAILED TO FLY NAZI EMBLEM FROM CHURCH STEEPLE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Feb. 3.—The Rev. Father Rachor, a Catholic priest of Bechtheim, in Hessen, was arrested today because he refused to fly the Nazi emblem from the steeple of his church on the first anniversary of Chancellor Hitler's régime. He unfurled the swastika flag at the church door, but the mayor considered this was insufficient.

Reports spread in Protestant circles today that many members of the Pastors' Emergency league will read a manifesto against Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller from their pulpits tomorrow. The Rev. Martin Neimoeller, leader of the opposition to the Nazi church dictatorship, has been grilled almost daily this week by the GSP (German secret police) in an attempt to prove that he agitated against the government. But the former submarine commander, who was arrested early this week and subsequently released, has thus far convinced authorities he only fought against Bishop Mueller, whom he considers unfit to rule.

Supporters of Bishop Mueller will start "school week" tomorrow. This activity will "emphasize the closeness of the gospel and the home," the Nazi bishop explained to the pastors.

ACCUSED RAPIST IS FOUND TO BE MURDER FUGITIVE

CRIMINAL COURT.

William Madaus, Jack Andrews and Norman Johnson, larceny, sentenced to one to twenty years each in the penitentiary; Charles Sherman, robbery, sentenced to one to twenty years in the penitentiary; Richard Avery, robbery, sentenced to one to twenty years in the penitentiary by Judge Harry B. Miller.

Nagie Johnson, confidence game, sentenced to one to ten years in the penitentiary; Raymond Roger and Charles Elmann, robbery, sentenced to one to twenty years each by Judge Francis B. Allegretti.

The finger prints of Dominick Costello, 27 years old, who was arrested yesterday on a charge of rape, showed him to be Dominick Gaustello, wanted by New York police for murder. The victim was Sam Rano, 187 Boerum street, New York City, who was slain Feb. 11, 1933.

Costello, or Gaustello, was seized by Detectives Edward Dooley and Donald Coakley on a warrant obtained by Tessie Festa, 4100 West 57th place. The bureau of identification disclosed him to be a fugitive on the more serious charge. Police notified New York authorities they could have Costello.

Costello was charged with larceny here in 1925, and in 1930 was sentenced to a year in the Bridewell for robbery. In 1929 he was accused of burglary in Kansas City. He was convicted as a vagrant in New York City in 1931. He gave his address as 3928 West 56th place.

Ex-Crown Prince Escort to French Envoy's Wife

BERLIN, Feb. 3.—(AP)—Berlin society buzzed with excitement today when it became known that at a dinner last night former Crown Prince Frederick Wilhelm conducted Mme. Andre Francoisponcet, wife of the French ambassador, to the table. It was a dinner given by the former Crown Prince and Crown Princess in honor of a committee in charge of the latter's charity organization, the "Cecilienhilfe." Frederick Wilhem's action was seen as evidence of former imperial family's desire to help in general efforts directed toward improving Franco-German relations.

VICTIM OF OWN BURGLAR TRAP.

Mobile, Ala., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—A victim of his own burglar trap, Roy Bledsole, 50, of Half Chance, Perry county, Alabama, is in a Selma, Ala., hospital in a dying condition today. He placed a loaded shotgun near a window that, when it was opened, the gun would be discharged. Bledsole forgot and opened the window.

GERMAN REVISES PSALMS TO ERASE 'JEWISH TAINT'

Claims Christ Was of Pure Aryan Blood.

BERLIN, Feb. 3.—(AP)—A need for "thorough purging" the Psalm of David "from Jewish taint" was advanced today in a new hymn book published by a leader of the new Germanic cult.

The book is by Wilhelm Teudt, a pioneer in the movement, whose "guiding strength" is gained "from the religious inheritance of the German people," and consists of 75 revised psalms—in blank verse—instead of the original 150.

How Psalms Are Rewritten.

"The Lord loveth the height of Germany more than all the dwellings abroad.

"The Lord loveth the yew tree of the Odenwald and the oak of the Baltic.

"I will make mention of the vulgar Euphrates and the Ganges, where our forefathers ruled.

"Behold the lands of the Goths, the Longobards, and Andalusians: It shall be said our brethren were born and died there.

"But on Osning [part of the Teutoburger forest] the Lord shall count those sprung from blood of the sons of Mannus; Ingo, Istu, and Erwin." [Ancient Germanic guards.]

How Original Reads.

The original, as contained in the authorized or King James version of the Bible, reads:

"His foundation is in the holy mountains.

"Glorious things are spoken of thee, O city of God.

"I will make mention of Rahab and Babylon to them that know me: Behold Philistia, and Tyre, with Ethiopia; this man was born there.

"And of Zion it shall be said, this and that man was born in her: And the Highest himself shall establish her.

"The Lord shall count, when He writeth up the people, that this man was born there.

"As well the singers as the players on instruments shall be there: All my springs are in thee."

An Anti-Fundamentalist.

Teudt frankly revealed himself as an anti-fundamentalist.

In the foreword to his volume he claimed that Christ was of pure Aryan blood—"His whole spirituality being foreign to Jews."

While not entirely eliminating the Old Testament, Teudt said many features in it were obnoxious and should be pruned.

The so-called Psalms of Revenge he eliminated altogether. He said he stood for a new religion which "unites conceptions of God, nature, morality and heroism, which are the imperishable, God-given heritage of Germans."

ACTRESS FRIEND OF FAIRBANKS JR. WEARING A RING

LONDON, Feb. 3.—(AP)—A picture of Douglas Fairbanks Jr. and the British actress, Gertrude Lawrence, was published in the Sunday Dispatch today.

It was pointed out that in the photograph Miss Lawrence was wearing a solitaire diamond ring on the third finger of her left hand.

"We are not announcing anything and shall continue to deny anything that's said," the American actor said after being congratulated by a friend, according to the story.

ASK GERMANS TO EAT 1 COURSE MEAL TODAY AS 'PLEDGE OF UNITY'

BERLIN, Feb. 3.—(AP)—Germans throughout the Reich have been asked to have a single one-course meal tomorrow "as a pledge of indissoluble unity" and turn over the rest of what they usually spend for Sunday meals to a winter relief fund.

"Just as believing Christians join in the Lord's supper in the service of their Lord and savior," an officially inspired statement said, "so will National Socialist Germany celebrate this sacrificial meal as a pledge of the indissoluble unity of the nation."

It will be the fourth time in four months that Germans have been asked to limit the amount they eat and donate the rest to charity.

200 BOLIVIANS SLAIN IN 3 DAY CHACO BATTLE

LA PAZ, Bolivia, Feb. 3.—[U.P.]—Renewed determination to carry on the Gran Chaco war marked this nation's celebration today of the birth of Marshall Antonio José de Sucre, the father of Bolivia.

An intense Paraguayan attack in the Platanillos sector of the Chaco was finally ended, according to an official communique. The Bolivian dead numbered 200 in the fierce assault which lasted three days.

Bolivian troops, however, believed the repulse of the enemy marked a "new period of warfare," and high officers were determined to prosecute the war with renewed vigor until Paraguay was "vanquished."

CONVICT THREE AS EMBEZZLERS.

Eads, Colo., Feb. 3.—(AP)—Ethel L. Westcott, Thomas L. Lewis, and Miles G. Saunders, former officers of the Railway Savings and Building association of Pueblo, were convicted on embezzlement charges today.

GIRL SCOUT CAMP LEADERS REPORT GAIN IN INTEREST

An increasing interest in Girl Scout work was reported yesterday at a meeting of the midwest Camp Directors' association in the Drake hotel. The meeting was attended by directors from 96 Girl Scout camps in Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, and Indiana.

Katie Lee Johnson, acting regional director, said that last summer there was a national increase of 52 camps and that 1,165 more girls than ever before attended the camps. A total of 62,725 girls attended 600 camps throughout the country.

Methods of selecting young women as counselors in the camps to meet the increased demand of larger enrollment were discussed. Most of the counselors are college women who direct camp activities in summer.

The national membership of the organization, now 22 years old, increased from 295,940 in 1932 to 315,944 in 1933.

KILLED BY TRUCK AS HE WALKS ON LINCOLN HIGHWAY

An unidentified man about 35 years old, apparently a wanderer, was killed when he was struck in Lincoln highway, a mile east of Torrence avenue, by a truck driven by Charles Cramer of Magnolia, O., yesterday. His death and one other, reported elsewhere in this issue, raised the Cook county moto rtoll for the year to 129.

Frank Rundle, 35 years old, of Harvey, was fatally injured yesterday when the automobile in which he was riding overturned a mile from the village of Cook, south of Hammond. Paul Christian, driver of the car, also was hurt.

William Steelwassen, 72 years old, 2048 West Lake street, a rag picker, was critically injured yesterday when he was struck by an automobile as he was pushing a cart in front of 2562 Washington boulevard. The driver of the car abandoned the automobile at the scene of the accident and fled.

Edward Cohen, 29 years old, 1133 Madison street, a bartender, was arrested by Warren avenue police last night as the driver of a hit and run car which severely injured William Steelwasser, 72, in front of 2562 Washington boulevard, on Friday. The injured man lives at 2048 Lake street.

FREE BOOKLET

containing many confidential facts regarding venereal diseases will be sent you in a plain envelope on request

Saved a few dollars

by self treatment, but lost both his health and his job!

In the long run, nothing is cheaper than the best medical treatment for venereal diseases. Go to a good doctor—or to a reliable clinic!

This is the story of a young man with gonorrhea who foolishly attempted to cure himself. True, by using a patent remedy he saved a few dollars over the cost of proper medical treatment. BUT—by the time a competent doctor would have cured him, he was crippled so severely by gonorrheal rheumatism that he had to give up his job!

The reason it is dangerous to use either a patent remedy or a friend's prescription is that such treatment merely drives away the outward symptoms of gonorrhea. The germs remain and spread to other parts of the body, in time causing crippling rheumatism, sterility, or serious prostate, bladder and other troubles. Occasionally the sufferer even has to submit to a painful operation!

Thus the man who resorts to self treatment for gonorrhea is practicing the worst sort of false economy. Sooner or later he will be forced to go to a doctor or clinic in order to get relief from the complications caused by his failure to be properly treated at the start.

The same applies to self treatment for syphilis, for this is the most treacherous of all diseases. Unless properly treated, it is very likely to result in heart disease, blindness, deafness, apoplexy, paralysis, nervous breakdowns or even insanity!

Not all men, of course, attempt self treatment because of its supposed economy. Some do so because they wish to keep secret the fact that they are infected. But this also is foolish for the reason that no reliable doctor or clinic will ever betray a patient's confidence.

At the Public Health Institute, for example, patients are known by number rather than by name so that the identity of each is fully shielded. Further protection is assured by numerous individual treatment rooms, making it possible for every patient to be treated in absolute privacy.

Therefore, if you have either gonorrhea or syphilis, avoid dangerous self treatment and go at once to a reputable doctor or clinic! Your family physician is a good man to consult. And the Public Health Institute is recognized as one of the nation's most trustworthy clinics.

Founded by public-spirited citizens NOT FOR PROFIT, the Public Health Institute specializes in the treatment of venereal diseases at remarkably low fees. An examination for gonorrhea and syphilis, including Wassermann and Kahn blood tests, costs only $3.00, while treatments for syphilis cost as little as $1.00 each and some of those for gonorrhea still less. Even persons pressed for funds can arrange to be treated.

NOTE: The Public Health Institute has no connection with any other Chicago health or medical institute, and should not be confused with those operated for personal gain!

RACE TO FILE FOR COUNTY OFFICES ON OPENING DAY

No Unexpected Insurgent Group Appears.

Aspirants for county offices were the first to engage in a race to file nomination petitions for the April 10 primary in County Clerk Sweitzer's office yesterday. It was the first day for congressional, legislative, state office, county, and sanitary district filings but only the county candidates appeared in the early lists. No unexpected signs of insurgency appeared against the regular Democratic or Republican organization slate. There are three groups of Republican candidates, with a scattering of independent filings.

In the list of candidates published below "O" indicates the regular organization candidates in both parties. In the Republican list "C B" indicates the candidates of the Crowe-Barrett faction and "J" the candidates indorsed by the Newton Jenkins group which calls itself the Progressive Republican organization. Incumbents are designated by an asterisk. The list of early filings follow:

Barrett's Name Missing.

Seven Republican candidates for nomination to the five country town posts on the county board are listed above. This came about by the decision of the county central committee to allow seven to file and leave the job of weeding out two of them to the country committeemen.

An important omission in the lists was that of George F. Barrett from those filing for assessor. When the Barrett-Robert E. Crowe faction announced its partial slate last Saturday, Barrett declared he would file for assessor. The omission was taken to mean that some dissention has already shown up in that branch of the party.

NEW DEADLINE GIVEN FOR LOCAL OPTION PETITIONS

Robert L. Taylor, assistant attorney for the board of election commissioners, announced yesterday that the deadline for filing petitions to place local option questions on the ballot at the April 10 primary is March 1, and not Feb. 9, as he had stated in an interview last week.

MONTAGUE GLASS WRITER OF YARNS ABOUT JEWS, DIES

Westport, Conn., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Montague Glass, creator of "Potash and Perlmutter," and of many comic tales of Jewish characters and scenes, died suddenly today of a cerebral hemmorhage. In poor health for several weeks he had been in bed for two days. He was 56 years old.

The body will be taken to New York City tomorrow for funeral services Monday by the Rev. Stephen S. Wise in the Free synagogue.

Montague Marsden Glass was born in Manchester, England, the son of James David and Amelia Marsden Glass. His father, a linen merchant, had offices also in Belfast and New York. In 1890 he closed his English business and removed here, bringing Montague with him.

Magazines Afraid of Stories.

At the College of the City of New York and at New York university, the young Mr. Glass studied law and wrote for undergraduate publications. Even after he began praticing law, he continued to contribute to the New York university item.

For nearly ten years Mr. Glass bombarded the magazines with scant success, meanwhile, making his living by examining real estate titles. His first published story, outside the university magazine, appeared in the Metropolitan magazine in 1900. It was entitled "Aloysius of the Docks."

Heroes on Stage and on Air.

From the many Jewish clothing and real estate dealers among his law firm's clients, Mr. Glass drew Abe Potash and Mawruss Perlmutter. His first story involving the pair was turned down by several magazines fearful of offending Jewish readers, and was eventually published in a Detroit business magazine.

Potash and Perlmutter were put on the stage in 1913. Altogether, Mr. Glass wrote 600 stories and articles, fourteen plays, and several motion pictures. In recent years he wrote for the radio.

In 1907 he married Miss Caroline Patterson of Port Jervis, N. Y. They had two children, James Montague, who died, and Elizabeth Mary Glass.

AMPUTATE LEG OF U. S. WITNESS SHOT ON "RIDE"

Physicians at the county hospital yesterday amputated the right leg of John French, 25 years old, 4903 Lake Park avenue, who was shot Jan. 7 by two men who took him for an automobile ride. The condition of French was described by Dr. Lee L. Schrager as critical.

The shooting took place at 141st street and Ashland avenue. The assailants thrust French out of their car there and fired several times at him. He escaped by leaping into the Calumet river and feigning that he was dead.

Later he identified Edward F. Cusack, a suspended policeman, and James McCarthy, formerly business agent of a truckmen's union, as his assailants. Both were held to the federal grand jury on a charge of tampering with a government witness. French, with Cusack and McCarthy, had previously been indicted for stealing merchandise from an interstate shipment.

MME. CISNEROS, FORMER OPERA SINGER, IS DEAD

New York, Feb. 3.—(AP)—Mme. Eleanora de Cisneros, former Metropolitan opera mezzo-soprano, died today of uremic poisoning at the age of 53 at a women's club where she made her home.

The singer was listed in "Who's Who in Music" as the first American to make her début with the Metropolitan without European training. She made her bow in "Cavalleria Rusticana" as Lola in 1900, with the great Emma Calve singing Santuzza.

She is survived by her husband, Count Francois de Cisneros of Havana, who is in the Cuban consular service in Paris. She was born in New York, the daughter of a Scotch-American writer, John C. Broadfoot and an Irish mother, the former Ellen Small.

Mme. de Cisneros was a discovery of Jean de Reszke who heard her voice and interested the Metropolitan. Following her début she made a successful tour with Mme. Sembrich. Later she sang abroad, appearing in Covent Garden, London, and in Australia with Mme. Nellie Melba's famous opera company.

Mrs. Janet Foulis, 64, Golf Professional's Wife, Dies

Besides her husband, Mrs. Foulis is survived by her son, James, also a well known golfer, and a daughter. Funeral services are to be held at the chapel at 120 North Hale street, Wheaton, at a time to be announced later.

BEG YOUR PARDON

The Associated Press requests a correction in its dispatch of Jan. 30 from London, Ont. The dispatch told of the indictment of Senator E. S. Little, Arthur F. Little of London, Ont., and Walter Little of Winnipeg. The dispatch erroneously stated that "the charges grew from the failure three years ago of Robinson, Little & Co., a large dry goods firm." Robinson Little & Co. Ltd., of London and Winnipeg, has not failed but, on the contrary, is actively carrying on business, the Associated Press now states.

An item on Jan. 21 said that Benjamin Krywick, an insurance salesman, was arrested on a warrant charging rape. Krywick asks that it be stated he appeared on Jan. 22 in the Felony court of Judge Harold P. O'Connell and the case against him was discharged.

JURY ACQUITS ST. JOSEPH MAN IN LYNCH CASE

St. Joseph, Mo., Feb. 3.—(AP)—Walter Garton, first of the defendants in the lynching of a Negro here Nov. 28 to go to trial, was acquitted by a Buchanan county Circuit court jury tonight on a charge of first degree murder.

Garton and six others were indicted Dec. 31 on murder charges growing out of the lynching of Lloyd Warner, 19, Negro, who was being held in jail on a charge of having raped a white woman.

Warner was hanged to a tree and burned with gasoline by a mob which overpowered the force of Sheriff Otto Theisen, policemen, and a tank company of the Missouri National Guard ordered out by Gov. Guy B. Park. A crowd estimated at between 5,000 and 8,000 looked on.

The acquitted defendant, whose trial started Monday, was immediately returned to his cell to await trial on another indictment charging him with malicious destruction of jail property.

The case went to the jury after Assistant Attorney General W. O. Sawyers had demanded conviction.

"President Franklin D. Roosevelt is sitting in Washington right now awaiting your verdict," Sawyers told the jurors. "It is the wish of our President that law and order be restored in this land. You gentlemen can by your verdict say whether Missouri stands with the President."

Garton did not take the stand, but defense witnesses said he was not seen with mob leaders.

HORNER LEAVES FOR VACATION IN SOUTH TODAY

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 3.—(AP)—Retiring briefly from public life to recover from a cold, Gov. Horner will leave tomorrow for a vacation of a week or ten days somewhere in the south.

His exact destination was not announced, but Phoenix, Ariz., was regarded as the governor's probable choice for his vacation ground.

His return probably will be by Feb. 13, the date upon which the legislature is scheduled to reconvene for the third special session. Mr. Horner and his advisers worked until 2:30 a. m. today on the special session call, which will be signed before the governor leaves Springfield. Its release is expected early next week, but the third session might be delayed until Feb. 20.

Desiring to avoid all public attention while recuperating from a severe cold, Mr. Horner has carefully guarded the exact plans for the first vacation he has taken since being inaugurated thirteen months ago. He recently suffered an influenza attack and has been under the care of physicians for several weeks.

SCOOTERS BRING FOOD FOR 250 ON FIRE ISLAND

Bay Shore, N. Y., Feb. 3.—(AP)—Marooned by an ice pack which has jammed Great South Bay since Tuesday, 250 inhabitants of Fire island, 45 miles from New York, are dependent upon coast guardsmen and their amphibian scooters for food and supplies.

By telephone today Capt. Pamer Midgett, commanding the coast guard station on Fire island, said the winter population of the island was "okay, except that we're having trouble getting enough fresh milk to feed the 11 babies we have out here."

On Tuesday Capt. Midgett telephoned the mainland coast guard stations to bring food in trucks to the beach. Then he and his men fashioned the scooters out of small boats. For four days the inhabitants of Ocean Beach have been dependent on these scooters for their food supplies.

On Tour to Prepare for 1934 Encampment.

Col. Russell C. Martin, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, arrived in Chicago yesterday on a tour of all the state departments of the G. A. R. in preparation for the 1934 encampment of the organization to be held in Rochester, N. Y. The commander, who is 86 years old, was honored at a reception held in the memorial hall of the public library in the afternoon by the Illinois department of the G. A. R. About 20 civil war veterans were present.

Already Col. Martin's tour has included a visit to President Roosevelt, whom the commander interviewed in an effort to enlist support for the annual encampment of the G. A. R. to be held in Washington, D. C., next year.

Need Government Aid.

"We will need government financial aid for the celebration of what will be the 70th anniversary of the great parade down Pennsylvania avenue at the close of the civil war," Col. Martin said at the reception. "The President promised that 'within a reasonable time, our troubles regarding the pensions would be over.'" Col. Martin pointed out that there are fewer than 10,000 members of the G. A. R. left in the United States.

A formal dinner in honor of the commander-in-chief was held last night at the Palmer house by the Daughters of the Union Veterans of the Civil War.

The Women's Relief corps of the department of Illinois will give a dinner tonight at the Hotel Sherman in honor of Col. Martin and those traveling with him. These include Mrs. Mae G. Lincoln of Aurora, president of the Women's relief corps; Mrs. Dorothy Houghton, Wichita, Kas., president of the Daughters of Union Veterans, and Park F. Yengling, Cleveland, commander-in-chief of the Sons of the G. A. R.

A Soldier at the Age of 15.

Enlisting at the age of 15, Col. Martin served in Company 1, First Vermont cavalry, in the Army of the Potomac. Of the 2,885 men in the regiment, only eight are now living, including a brother of Col. Martin. At the conclusion of his tour Col. Martin will return to his home in California.

DOCTOR'S FATAL ILLNESS TOLD AT 'HIGHBALL' TRIAL

Crowd in Court Hears How Physician Died.

Greenwood, Miss., Feb. 3.—(AP)—A vivid description of the 10 day illness of Dr. John Preston Kennedy, 44, allegedly poisoned with a whisky highball, was presented by the state today as it sought to convict Dr. Sarah Ruth Dean, 33 year old physician, for his death.

The one state witness testifying today told how Dr. Kennedy, a surgeon, remained out until near daylight the night before he became ill. He had left his home at midnight after receiving numerous telephone calls, but the state was not able to prove Dr. Dean was at the other end of the wire.

As the jury, completed earlier in the day, retired early tonight for the weekend it had heard only the direct testimony of August Thalheimer, at whose home Kennedy lived after separating from his wife.

Courtroom is Packed.

As a packed courtroom followed intently every word and Dr. Dean, listened calmly, Thalheimer told the jury that Kennedy became ill after going out on the night of July 21, "and staying out until 4:30 a. m."

The state has charged that Dr. Kennedy died of poison contained in a whisky highball handed him by Dr. Dean during a midnight tryst at the woman's apartment July 21.

"Sick and Moaning."

Thalheimer said Kennedy was "just like a member of the family" in the Thalheimer home. He said that after the physician returned following upon his early morning absence he saw Dr. Kennedy lying crosswise on his bed.

"He was undressed and didn't have on his pajamas," the witness said. "His clothes were on the floor."

"Was he drunk? Prosecutor Fred Witty asked.

"No, sir. He may have had one drink, but he wasn't drunk. He was sick and moaning."

Thalheimer said Kennedy had had stomach hemorrhages and complained of pains in his mouth, throat, and stomach for five days, during which he could eat no solid food—"only shaved ice."

Members of Kennedy's family, including his divorced wife, with whom he had reputedly made plans for remarriage, were not in the courtroom during Thalheimer's recital.

SING SING CONSIDERS DETECTOR THAT RINGS BELL IF GUN PASSES

Ossing, N. Y., Feb. 3.—[U. P.]—Warden Lewis E. Lawes of Sing Sing prison disclosed today that he considers installing a "mechanical gun detector" as a part of the prison equipment.

The machine, somewhat smaller than a typewriter, may be concealed in a desk. It rings a bell whenever persons carrying metal objects of certain size enter its area. The detector will be invaluable in cases were the gun, knife or other weapon is so cleverly concealed upon the owner's person as to be overlooked by the customary "frisk," the warden said.

"It will prove especially helpful in preventing women from smuggling in a weapon. It is much harder to find any contraband upon a woman than it is on a man," Warden Lawes said.

"It can be adjusted so it will overlook a small metal object like a matchbox, a small penknife or a woman's vanity case."

WOMAN FOUND SLAIN; FORMER CIRCUS ACROBAT

Tell City, Ind., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—The body of Miss Alice Martin, 50, former Barnum & Bailey circus acrobat, was found today in a shallow grave near the banks of the Ohio river on her farm. Police said the woman had been murdered and began a search for Ernest Wright, 32, farm hand who had been employed by Miss Martin.

The search for the woman began today when neighbors discovered that the farm had been abandoned since yesterday afternoon. Wright was last seen at that time. Miss Martin had been missing for seven days, and Wright had informed storekeepers and two grocery delivery boys whom he saw during the week that she had gone to New Jersey to view property she owned there.

Miss Martin retired from the circus ten years ago and purchased the farm where she met death. She had performed in the big tops under the name of Alice de Garno. The farm is on a bluff overlooking the river near the village of Derby. The farm house is located some distance from the road and is accessible only by foot paths.

ALDERMEN URGE IMMEDIATE CUT IN CITY SPENDING

Committee Asks Monthly Slash of $325,000.

TAX COLLECTIONS.

Real estate tax collections last week were $1,403,991. Collections for the previous week were $1,180,082. A total of $104,588,320 has been collected since enforcement of the Kerner-Skarda act began on April 28, 1933. Last week's collections of real estate taxes and the uncollected taxes for four years follow:

	1928.	1929.
Uncollected	15,391,861	41,191,024
	1930.	1931.
Uncollected	65,081,167	68,256,844

An immediate curtailment of city expenditures in 1934 below the $47,883,195 level authorized for 1933 was agreed upon informally yesterday by members of the city council finance committee. Their action, if confirmed by the council, will reduce corporate expenses roughly at the rate of $325,000 a month.

Pending the passage of the 1934 budget, the city is operating on the "continuation" ordinance which authorizes department heads to spend on the basis of the 1933 appropriations. The aldermen propose this week to amend the ordinance to limit expenditures to an annual basis of $43,764,871, which is the amount of the tentative 1934 budget submitted by City Controler Upham.

Some May Lose Jobs.

"I am convinced," said Ald. John S. Clark [30th], committee chairman, "that this cut can be made without affecting the vital services of the city such as police, fire and health protection, and the cleaning and lighting of streets. It may mean, however, that we will have to lay off some employés in departments that give less essential services.

"It is true that we will be expending even so at a greater rate than a desire to conform with the estimated revenue of $39,500,000 for 1934 would dictate. But, we'll proceed to build a budget on the basis of $39,500,000, which will picture plainly just what a reduction of over eight million in appropriations below the 1933 figure will do to the services that Chicagoans expect the city to give.

"This picture we will give to Gov. Horner with a request for measures in a special legislative session that will give the city more than one year's time in which to meet deficits caused by reductions in valuations that no one could foretell."

Plan to Merge Tax Levies.

One way proposed to bolster up the revenues is to merge the tax levies for the corporate and working cash funds, giving to the former a tax extension of approximately $36,000,000 for 1933 and 1934. This would avoid an increase in taxes, and has been advocated by John O. Rees, director of the citizens' committee on public expenditures. There would be no increase in the corporate tax rate, which would give the city more money when valuations increased.

Mr. Rees was present at the four hour budget session to discuss with the aldermen the probable loss and cost there will be in collecting 1934 taxes many months hence. Among others at the meeting were Douglas Sutherland, executive secretary of the Chicago Civic federation and bureau of public efficiency, Chief Justice Sonsteby of the Muncipal court, and Newton C. Farr, chairman of the Chicago recovery administration.

Tax Loss Estimated.

A figure of 10 per cent for loss and cost was given to the aldermen by Rees, Farr and Sutherland with a warning that a further reserve should be set aside for a greater delinquency. They estimated that ultimately not more than 85 per cent of the 1931 taxes will be paid, but advocated the 10 per cent loss and cost factor on the ground that the courts apparently favor that figure.

At the suggestion of Ald. John A. Massen [48th], the committee decided to ask Mayor Kelly to request the governor to make some provision for revenue amendments so they can be put on the November ballot.

COUNTY HEARS CRITICS

With some apprehension members of the county board assembled yesterday morning for the advertised public hearing on the 1934 preliminary budget. The feeling of foreboding was occasioned by recollection of a similar meeting last year.

In 1933 only one person attended the hearing required under a law passed in 1931. Advocates of the law held it would provide a check on governmental extravagance and give aid to the budget makers.

The 1933 audience was the first on hand again yesterday. He is John O. Rees, advisor to the Citizens' Committee on Public Expenditures. As he made his entrance he announced that he was appearing merely to retain the doubtful honor he won last year.

For a time it appeared that Rees would again be the audience. But as the meeting opened people filed in. The faces of the commissioners brightened.

Asks for Criticisms.

A clerk read the advertisment which, in effect, states that if any one has any reason why the budget should not be passed, let him speak or forever after hold his peace. The clerk called on the gathering to offer criticisms or suggestions.

A spokesman for the county nursing service rose to object to a cut of $100,000 in the estimate returned by the department, declaring that it will be impossible to carry on the service with the reduction.

A delegation from the Juvenile Detention home made a plea for the inclusion of at least $12,000 to meet the problem of dependent children.

Joel D. Hunter, superintendent of the United Charities, voiced a complaint against a cut of $100,000 in revenue for blind and mothers' pensions.

A representative of the window washers' union demanded payment of the union scale to washers in the county building.

No one else spoke and the meeting adjourned.

SALES TAX YIELDS STATE $4,436,352 IN MONTH OF JANUARY

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 3.—(AP)—State Treasurer John C. Martin today announced that his office received $13,749,783.57 during January, paid out $12,929,171.01, and had a treasury balance of $35,591,936.01 on Feb. 1.

Included in the month's receipts were $1,750,000 in tax anticipation notes issued against future collection of taxes.

Martin's report showed that the retail sales tax was the largest source of revenue, producing $4,436,352.23. Other levies contributed to the state treasury during January as follows: Direct property tax, $1,323,553.91; inheritance tax, $253,275.37; beverage [beer] tax, $71,115.40; insurance, corporation and others, $162,714.75; motor fuel tax, $2,375,749.35; motor vehicle tax, $2,863,969.20. Miscellaneous fees, earnings and refunds brought in $254,723.23; federal aid, $142,239.12, and trust funds, $79,109.82.

PLEAS TO START IN $20,000,000 U. S. TAX SUITS

400 Cases Here Await Settlement.

Preliminary hearings on some of the 1,500 pending income tax cases which involve about $20,000,000, will be opened tomorrow in the United States postoffice under the supervision of John E. Merrill, special attorney from the Washington bureau of internal revenue.

While the board of income tax appeals does not meet here until March 5, the hearings have been inaugurated in an effort to eliminate all the detailed litigation possible before the complex cases are presented to the board.

Washington Attorneys Here.

Attorneys have been sent from Washington to settle as many cases as they are able before the appeals board meets, or in any event to arrange with defense attorneys to stipulate on whatever points they can so the lengthy trials will move more rapidly.

There are about 400 cases in this district in which the government expects either to settle the case or to clear the way for the matter to be heard with more brevity than would otherwise be possible. Among these are the fraud cases of a number of politicians and gangsters who have already been convicted in criminal trials of income tax evasion.

Included among these persons are Al Capone, his brother Ralph, Jack Guzik, former County Assessor Gene G. Oliver, and Lawrence C. O'Brien, former state representative. Former City Building Commissioner Chris P. Paschen was found guilty also, but his case is pending before the Circuit Court of Appeals.

Some Seek Settlements.

Attorneys for some of the defendants in civil fraud cases have already approached government attorneys in the matter of settling all or parts of their respective controversies before coming to trial. However, it is understood that the government would not dismiss a civil suit even in the event of a settlement if criminal liabilities are still pending.

It was pointed out by federal officials that the two types of income tax prosecution differ greatly as to the length of attending court procedure. The civil trials are expected to consume much more time, for in this action the government must show the exact amount of money on which the defendant has allegedly evaded payment. Convictions in criminal prosecutions require only that it be shown that the defendant defrauded the government of $1 or any other sum.

WOMAN TO GET INCOME WILLED BY 'OTHER WIFE'

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 3.—(AP)—Mrs. Jeanette Patterson Wallace of Philadelphia is to get the $1,800 yearly income bequeathed to her by her late husband's "other wife," Mrs. Etta Meliler of New Haven, Conn.

Both women were married more than 20 years to the same man. One knew him as Harold D. Wallace; the other as A. A. Meliler. Not until his death did they learn of each other's existence and then they became close friends.

Assurance that Mrs. Wallace would receive Mrs. Meliler's legacy and that her son, Jack Wallace, would get a $40,000 trust fund came with the appointment of administrators by the register of wills, disallowing the contest filed by Mrs. Merhad H. Wilkinson, 100 year old resident of Overlea, Md.

Mrs. Meliler's estate is variously estimated between $300,000 and $500,000, with the largest part going to Temple university hospital.

PLAN TO USE WATERWAY FOR OIL SHIPMENTS

Alton, Ill., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Water shipments of oil from the refinery of Shell Petroleum corporation, south of this city, up the Illinois river to Chicago and thence to numerous points along the great lakes, are seen as a possibility of the company's application to the war department for a permit to construct a wharf on the Mississippi river. Operation of barge lines were considered when the Standard Oil company built its first Madison county refinery in Madison county about 1910.

Plans for the wharf have been filed at the St. Louis office of the war department. The proposed location is described as being 1,276 miles above the mouth of the Mississippi river. The wharf will be constructed in a T-shape and 18½ feet above high water stage.

Several representatives of the company said that feasibility of water shipments is being studied but nothing definite has been decided.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 3.—(AP)—John C. Fehrs Jr., 14, hammered a dynamite cap some time ago, thinking it was a lipstick tube. The explosion cost him the loss of two fingers, and yesterday he was awarded $10,000 damages against the city, which had been using explosives to blast stumps in a park near John's home.

Sedate "Main Street" to Be Feature of Sophisticated World's Fair

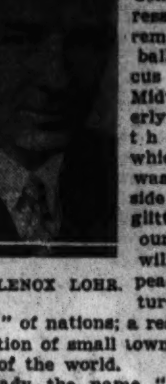
Ballyhoo Center to Be on Northerly Island.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Paradoxical as it may seem, sedate village life is going to be an outstanding novelty at Chicago's brilliant, boisterous, sophisticated and cosmopolitan 1934 Century of Progress. With the removal of the ballyhoo and hocus pocus of the Midway to Northerly island, the thoroughfare which last year was lined with side show gayety, glitter and glamour next season will become a peaceful and picturesque "Main Street" of nations; a restful and quiet exhibition of small town stuff from all parts of the world.



MAJ. LENOX LOHR.

Already the name "Main Street" is being considered as a handy, short, easy to remember and easy to say designation of what is expected will become one of the world's unique thoroughfares. Every town in the world, it is pointed out, has its "Main Street"—whether it's an English "High street," a French "Grand rue," a Teutonic "Hauptstrasse" or a Russian something or othersky.

May Surpass Midway.

So, with both sides of the former Midway lined with seventeen or more reproductions of villages of that many nations, Maj. Lenox Lohr, general manager of A Century of Progress, and other officials predict that peaceful "Main Street" will rival and perhaps even surpass the boisterous Northerly island Midway.

Several villages already have been announced, but few outside of the Fair officials themselves [and even they don't know of several that still are in preliminary stages] have any idea of the magnitude of "Main Street" as it will be when the 1934 World's Fair opens its gates.

In the adjoining column is printed for the first time a new map, just completed, showing the sites of six of the new villages along "Main Street." Locations for several more are being discussed. And, in addition, four of last year's villages are to continue.

Belgian Village Starts Things.

It was the outstanding success of the Belgian village which started the present remarkable vogue for villages. When the Belgian town was built, the backers of various hanky panky, seemingly surefire Midway concessions smiled knowingly. But when the final figures were published and it was discovered that the quiet Belgian village had more actual paid admissions than the Streets of Paris, its boisterous neighbor across the road, [although the latter made more money because of its fan dancers and other frivolities], the rush for village life began.

A census of "Main Street" disclosed that up to last night there were seventeen villages, completed, under construction, planned or merely in the conversational stage.

There are four villages of the 1933 Fair which will reopen. These are: the Belgian village, the Indian village, the Moroccan village and the Midget village.

Six Sites Assigned.

Six brand new villages have been assigned sites, have signed contracts for the space, and will swing open the town gates when the World's Fair starts: They are the American Colonial village, the Old English village, the Black Forest [German] village, the Spanish village, the Swiss village and the Tunisian village.

Two other villages have been mentioned but are still in the "looking for a site" stage. These are the Irish village and the Dutch village.

Then, in the conversational stage, we find five—though there are probably half a dozen more that are just being whispered about. The five are: a Venetian village, a Hawaiian village, a Russian village, an East Indian village and a Chinese community, tentatively christened "Streets of Shanghai."

Several of the new villages will replace Midway attractions which either were a flop, weren't wanted at the 1934 Fair or didn't care to reopen. For instance, the Black Forest village will cover ground occupied last year by the Havana Rhumba, the Crystal Maze and the Seminole Indian village.

Oriental Village Vanishes.

The Spanish village will replace that hodge podge of pseudo far east life, the Oriental village. The Swiss village will occupy the site of the Eitel cafeteria, which opened a few weeks before the Fair closed. The Tunisian village will take the place of one of the Midway rides.

The Early American village will replace several Midway attractions, one of which is the Battle of Gettysburg. Adjoining the Yankee small town will be a wee bit of old England, which will take the place of several smaller Midway concessions. Some of them will be moved to Northerly island and some have closed permanently.

Of the newest and so far least known communities contemplated for "Main Street" the Venetian village sounds the most alluring. Of course, canals and gondolas will be features and the atmosphere will be more metropolitan than rural, but still it will be called a "village."

Reflects Color of Far East.

The East Indian village, according to Maj. O. J. F. Keatinge [who also is sponsor for the old English village] will reflect the romance and color of Bali, Java and other far flung points in the far east.

The Irish village, planned originally for the 1933 Fair, will have rural reminiscences of the Emerald isle, such as cozy cafés where Irish stew and other Erin edibles can be enjoyed.

Considerable has been told recently about the six villages to which sites have been assigned. Pictures of four of them already have been published. Meanwhile, according to the best informed small town gossip, "Main Street" is going to be one of the most talked-of thoroughfares in the world before many months slide by.

FIRST MAP OF 1934 CENTURY OF PROGRESS

A brisk and rising market for real estate in the near future as a result of a steadily increasing demand for apartments on the west side, leading to a shortage in medium sized units, is predicted by Arthur H. Davidson, vice president of the West Side Real Estate board, and manager of the west side office of the Realty Management company. He also bases a belief that there'll be few people moving this spring, on the unusual interest shown by tenants in renewals.

ARTHUR H. DAVIDSON.

"Never during the last five or six renting seasons have we had so many tenants inquiring about renewal of their spring leases," said Mr. Davidson yesterday. "This shows that the people are conscious of the shortage of good apartments and that there'll be very few people moving this spring.

"Renting conditions in west side apartments have shown substantial improvement during the last six months. Since the early part of last summer there has been a very marked increase in applications for apartments of two to five rooms. As a result, the buildings on our list have filled up to 95 per cent occupancy. This has been accomplished without further reductions in rent and without giving any concessions or free periods of occupancy.

"Collection of rents has shown steady improvement during the same period, due to the fact that there seems to be more money circulating in the hands of the public. That unemployment is on the decrease is shown by the large number of cases in which families are unscrambling. Where two families formerly lived together in one apartment, each now has its own and rent is paid promptly for both.

"There is going to be a shortage of medium sized apartments for the spring renting season, which will mean an increase in rents in the near future and marks the end of a long period of declining rents which began in 1929.

It also means a brisk and rising market for real estate in the near future."

SHOWS TAMMANY MADE MONEY IN "EXPERT" FIELD

New York, Feb. 3.—Corporation Counsel Paul Windels, recently appointed by Mayor La Guardia, has released a report showing that in the last four years twelve real estate appraisers employed as experts by the Tammany city administration in condemnation proceedings received $1,241,481 for their services, or an average of more than $26,000 a year each.

Windels disclosed that he intends to appeal every award made in real estate condemnation proceedings in the past which he believes excessive and which has not been outlawed by the statute of limitations.

WRECKERS TO TEAR DOWN 45 YEAR OLD STORE

$1,500,000 Sears Unit to Be Erected.

Doors that have swung open and shut for shoppers an estimated 36,000,000 times in the last forty-five years were boarded up last night and tomorrow the wrecker's pickax and shovel will begin to tear down one of southtown Chicago's historic landmarks—the brown stone Becker-Ryan building, which is being razed to make way for Sears, Roebuck & Co.'s new $1,500,000 retail department store at the northeast corner of 63d and Halsted.

LOUIS BECKER.

So venerable is the old Becker-Ryan building, with the florid turrets and many other architectural whimsies of the eighties, that Englewood today probably has only faint recollections of what its famous corner looked like before its first large department store stood on the site. Scarcely any one is alive who remembers the old well on the corner from which the population of the district in that early day drew its drinking water.

63d-St. Then Junction Avenue.

The horse car had not yet come as far south as 63d street, then known as Junction avenue, and water lay stagnant in the ditches on both sides of muddy Halsted street, when in 1887 the lot on which the Becker-Ryan building stands was sold for the unheard of price of $50 a front foot, or $13,750. Next day neighbors picnicking in nearby Linden grove characterized the buyers of the property as the most reckless of speculators.

Two years later the Boldenweck Dry Goods store opened for business on the northeast corner of 63d and Halsted in a building magnificently constructed and equipped for conducting a merchandise establishment during the '80s. The stone arch over the 63d street entrance bears the date of the building's erection—1889.

Englewood Annexed.

It was the same year that the voters of Chicago and of the Town of Lake authorized Englewood's annexation by its big neighbor. It was the same year that Richard W. Sears, founder of Sears, Roebuck & Co., decided that country banking was not for him and returned to the mail order business in Minneapolis, where the year before he had sold out his interests for $60,000 cash.

It was also about the same year that Louis Becker, proprietor of a general store in Goshen, Ind., struck out to seek his fortune in Chicago and, by a strange coincidence, became associated in a mail order enterprise with Morris Rosenwald, brother of Julius Rosenwald. The latter was soon to become the man of destiny with the company that in later years was to buy the business that Mr. Becker was yet to establish.

Morris Rosenwald and Mr. Becker disposed of their mail order firm and in 1901 the latter bought the merchandise business on the northeast corner of 63d and Halsted streets from Simeon Lederer. The following year, with the addition of John Ryan and Simon Becker, the firm of Becker-Ryan was formed. From that day 32 years ago to this the business has flourished under the same name and in the same quaint quarters. Louis Becker now lives in California.

Justice and Booze.

Justice of the Peace Peter Caldwell held court in a third floor room in the old building as late as '95, and until prohibition went into effect Mahoney Bros.' saloon occupied the ground floor corner and a Chinese restaurant was located in the extreme second floor corner.

On June 16, 1919, Becker-Ryan purchased the property the store stood on, fronting 124 feet on 63d and 167 feet on Halsted, from Edward A. Uihlein of the Schlitz Brewing company of Milwaukee at a price then reported to have been around $585,000, or more than 42 times what the "reckless speculators" of 1887 had paid for it.

In March, 1925, control of the Becker-Ryan company passed into the hands of a syndicate of Chicago business men and on April 20, 1926, a building and property adjacent on the north, fronting 24 feet on Halsted, was purchased outright for $206,000.

Through its purchase, announced on Sept. 23, 1929, of the capital stock of the Becker-Ryan company, Sears, Roebuck & Co. acquired two 99 year leases besides the third piece of property with a building on it purchased in April, 1926, together with all rights and title to the Becker-Ryan business and good will.

The frontage of 216 feet on Halsted and 124 feet on 63d was consolidated on March 30, 1926, when the 25 feet at 6243 Halsted was leased from Robert and Hans Lanz at a rental for the 99 year term of $1,371,000.

16,000 Per Cent Increase.

A fourth piece of property fronting 124 feet on Englewood avenue and 50 feet on Halsted and completing the block long site for the new Sears store was purchased by Sears, Roebuck & Co. for $400,000 from the Chicago City Bank and Trust company on Feb. 27, 1931. The $8,000 per front foot on Halsted street that Sears paid for the bank property was 160 times what the "reckless speculators" of '87 paid for their frontage.

Dismantling of the 25 year old Chicago City Bank building, at the corner of Englewood avenue and Halsted street, one of the structures being demolished on the future site of the new Sears store, was completed yesterday, and the razing of the 45 year old Becker-Ryan building proper, will get under way tomorrow morning, according to Harold F. Lieberman, superintendent of the Goldman Wrecking company.

AUTO SHOW GIVES HOPE OF REVIVAL IN ALL INDUSTRY

Exposition Ends; Record Best Since 1929.

BY HAL FOUST.

The 34th National Automobile show closed last night, a success. Attendance and sales were the highest of any of the annual expositions since 1929, according to Alfred Reeves, vice president and general manager of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

The sales were fairly accurately estimated last night at $2,536,500, an increase of more than 48 per cent over the 1933 show. The attendance during the eight days of the exposition was estimated at 225,000, an increase of 25 per cent over 1933. The ticket receipts were curtailed somewhat last Sunday and Monday by subzero weather, and later in the week, according to Mr. Reeves, they were limited by the capacity of the Coliseum.

Barometer of 1934 Trade.

"More important than the buying these eight days," said Mr. Reeves, "is the significance of these figures as an indication of the 1934 market. The Chicago show has been a consistently reliable barometer of trade for the ensuing year.

"In 1932 the Chicago show was a flop. So was 1932 automobile business. Last year the sales at the show gained 33 per cent. Sales during the year stepped up 43 per cent over 1932.

"With a gain of 48 per cent for the 1934 show as compared with 1933, even the most conservative of the manufacturers are confident buying will continue to increase. They are returning to their manufacturing plants prepared to step up production schedules and to enlarge commitments for raw materials.

4,000,000 Jobs Affected.

"It is a major unemployment relief program by America's largest manufacturing industry. Four million wage earners, a tenth of the nation's gainfully employed, look to the motor car and allied industries for a livelihood."

The estimated sales for the 1934 show were placed at 3,500 cars. The Chicago Automobile Trade association reported that 2,625 orders had been signed up to Friday night. Orders taken at the show will continue to be signed for another week or two.

The average delivered and equipped price of the cars sold was placed at $725. Last year the show sold 2,512 cars at an average delivered and equipped price of $680 for a total of $1,708,160. The NRA has brought about a slight increase on sales tags and more folks are buying the larger automobiles.

"The sales just during these last eight days will constitute no small relief to the country's unemployment problem," said Mr. Reeves. "It is estimated that every $10 invested in a new automobile provides labor for one day to one man. The man-days of labor from the show sales will approximate 253,650.

How Labor Benefits.

"This is the direct application of the $10 to wages. Approximately $5.50 pays for a day's labor to some member of the 64 crafts employed in manufacturing and assembling the vehicle.

"A college economist would say, with a great deal of accuracy, that the entire $10 goes to labor. All the material used in producing an automobile is of little or no value in its crude state and becomes valuable only as it is handled by man. The metal is ore in a mountain side, the glass is sand in a pit or a hill, the lumber is timber hundreds of miles from the car factory.

"The economist would also talk about the velocity of currency and of labor. The $10 for a new automobile changes hands many times in a few months and creates more labor with each change.

"The velocity of currency received by the automobile industry at this show will be very rapid. The industry has been working with low inventories. An order for a new car is soon represented in orders from the factory for rubber, iron, copper, leather, and so forth.

"The unemployment relief quickly spreads from the automobile manufacturing town to the rolling mills of northern Indiana, to the mines of the Lake Superior region, to the machine shops of Chicago for parts and to the stockyards for leather, to the south for cotton, to the west for hardwoods.

"The automobile factories, using 15 per cent of the country's steel and iron, would boost the total production of this basic industry 3 per cent with an increase of 20 per cent in motor car sales. The automobile business also uses 80 per cent of the country's rubber, 38 per cent of the plate glass, 14 per cent of the lumber and hardwood, 11 per cent of the copper, 10 per cent of the lead, 25 per cent of the aluminum, and 28 per cent of the nickle.

"The entire country will benefit from increased employment growing out of the trade upturn indicated by Chicago's 34th National Automobile show."

150 Young Artists Win Institute Scholarships

Scholarships were awarded yesterday to 150 young artists who have completed with honors a six weeks' course in sketching at the Art institute. They were selected as the most proficient among 600 students between the ages of 3 and 18 years who took the course. Under the direction of Prof. Dudley Crafts Watson, who conceived the idea of presenting the course, the children were taught fundamentals and then permitted to sketch in any fashion they desired. Prof. Watson asserted that from such unbridled expression will evolve the new American art. The work of the winning artists was placed on exhibition in Blackstone hall at the institute.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—About 280,000 children under the age of 16 in New York are members of families on relief rolls, a preliminary report on a survey of the New York relief situation, made public today, by the federal emergency relief administration disclosed.

The survey, undertaken in October, does not show the lessening of relief rolls by the operation of the civil works administration.

The chief relief burden is made up of large families, the survey shows. The children constitute 41 per cent of those on the relief rolls. The 1930 census figures show that children of this age constituted 26 per cent of the population.

The total number of persons in relief families having five or more members constituted 54 per cent of the total number of persons receiving relief. This relief percentage of 54 per cent of persons in families of five or more is considerably higher than a comparable population percentage [42 per cent] computed from the 1930 census.

RESTRAINS CITY FROM DUMPING IN STATE CANAL

Circuit Court Ruling Forbids Practice.

Judge Joseph M. Burke in the Circuit court yesterday issued a permanent injunction restraining the city of Chicago from continuing to dump garbage and refuse in the old Illinois and Michigan canal, in the suit filed by the state department of public works. The use of the free canal dumping grounds has saved the city about $200,000 since the practice was begun a year ago.

While the state's suit also demanded that the city be compelled to remove the refuse already dumped, it was indicated yesterday that this point will not be pressed. Judge Burke gave Assistant Corporation Counsel Joseph F. Grossman until tomorrow to read the court's opinion and to decide whether the city will appeal the decision.

"The court is of the opinion that the city and all others that have filled in any part of the Illinois and Michigan canal did so in violation of the law of the land," the court ruled in a nine page opinion covering the history of the waterway.

The canal was constructed in 1848, and from then until early in this century, when the sanitary district built the Sag channel, it was in active use. Steps were taken to fill up the unused parts of the old canal to prevent disease, and in 1932 the sanitary district trustees, wishing to give the city permission to use the canal as a dump, appointed the city its "agent" to perform the fill-in work.

Judge Burke yesterday ruled that this action was illegal.

TELLS JUDGE HE SEES CHILD ONLY ON ALIMONY DAY

Leonard P. Teuscher, 8000 South Morgan street, a technical teacher at the Calumet High school, complained yesterday to Superior Judge Rudolph Desort that his former wife, Mrs. Helen Teuscher, 1031 North Shore avenue, a teacher at the Mayfair elementary school, had refused to let him see their daughter, Joan, 7 years old, except when he made his alimony payments.

"Although she is also a teacher she has apparently no consideration for his difficulty in obtaining his salary," said Attorney Norman Becker, counsel for Teuscher. "In fact, she has virtually adopted a 'pay as you enter policy,' refusing to let him see his own flesh and blood except when he hands over the hard cash."

Judge Desort advised Teuscher to do his best to keep up the payments of $35 a month support money and $25 a month for insurance premiums, but warned Mrs. Teuscher that if she didn't permit her former husband to see their child every Saturday he would take the custody of Joan away from her. The Teuschers were divorced in March, 1931.

DENEMARKS FILE $722,955 LIST OF LIABILITIES

Liabilities of $722,955, including $130,000 for bail bonds scheduled in the state courts, are shown in a schedule filed yesterday on behalf of Emil Denemark, automobile sales agent and sportsman, and his wife, Jennie. Assets of the couple are $8,423, according to the statement filed in the United States District court, where an involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed on Friday by three creditors with total claims of $800. The debts, of which $631,000 are secured, also include an item of $48,000 in mortgages on Denemark's racing stable. The sales agency bearing Denemark's name is a corporation and is not involved in the bankruptcy proceedings.

LOW COST CLINIC REPORTS FIRST YEAR IS SUCCESS

Record Cites Feasibility of Medical Plan.

Reduction in the cost of care over the entire field of medicine has been proved feasible in its first year of trial by the United Medical Service, Inc., according to Dr. Joseph G. Berkowitz, president of the pioneering organization.

Occupying four floors of the Finchley building, 23 East Jackson boulevard, the service opened Jan. 18, 1933, to provide complete medical and hospital care for that "large section of the public which is going untreated because of incomes not sufficient to meet the high cost of existing facilities."

Operates Without Loss.

Despite its inauguration in the "worst period of our economic history," Dr. Berkowitz said, this experiment in the corporate practice of medicine struck a sound financial balance after payment of salaries, reduction of debts on equipment, and allowances for depreciation. It began to make money after three months and has operated at a small profit since then.

More than 22,000 patients were treated during the first year at a cost of $260,000, of which $110,000 was paid in salaries.

More than 4,500 patients were referred to the clinic by 1,350 private physicians. Also laboratory work and extractions were handled for 600 dentists.

The annual report shows a degree of acceptance by the medical profession despite bitter opposition of organized medicine to this form of practice.

Dr. Berkowitz stressed the coöperative nature of the service, showing how complete care at lower cost is available to the public, either directly or through the family physician. The service competes with neither charitable institutions or private practice, he asserted.

Serves Middle Group.

"We say that the profession serves the upper third and that the lower 10 per cent depends on charity," said Dr. Berkowitz. "We are trying to develop complete service for the great intermediate group, which now has no better than haphazard treatment. Such a situation lessens the value of preventive medicine and permits disease to develop through neglect."

The annual report bespeaks the growth of the infant experiment. The original staff of 21 physicians was increased to 35 by the end of the year. The nonmedical personnel grew from 15 to 40.

Expansion Detailed.

Hospitalization service was established last April 28 and departments of dermatology and minor surgery were added during the year. More than $30,000 was invested in X-ray equipment originally, but $5,500 more was spent later. The dental department opened with five units, to which six more were added before the end of the year, the total cost being $15,500. Twice this amount was invested in other medical equipment.

The service is capitalized at $45,000 and members of the medical profession are the incorporators. Equipment and alterations have cost a total of $100,000. Brig. Gen. James A. Ryan, U. S. A. [retired], is vice president and treasurer.

SERGT. CARNEY CONVINCES TRIO HE'S POLICEMAN

Sergt. James Carney of the detective bureau won an argument in the Traffic court yesterday when three men were fined and one of them was given a jail sentence by Judge N. J. Bonelli. The defendants were William Miller, 48 years old, 6320 Magnolia avenue, a stationary engineer, who was fined $100 and sentenced to 30 days in the Bridewell for driving while intoxicated; Charles Larson, 6053 Ridge avenue, and Phineas J. Duke, 31 years old, 5725 Broadway, each of whom were fined $25.

Sergt. Carney testified that on Friday night, when he was off duty and riding with a young woman, a car driven by Miller sped through a red traffic signal at Ashland and Devon avenues and crashed into his automobile. After a two mile chase Carney overtook the car and informed the three occupants they were under arrest.

"Even when I showed them my star and revolver they wouldn't believe I was a policeman," said the detective. "They jumped back in their car and I had to chase them again before getting them locked up." Judge Bonelli, in announcing the penalties, asked Miller and his companions if they were convinced Carney was a policeman. They nodded glumly.

CUBS TO TRADE MALONE AT LEAGUE MEETING

YOUNGSTERS BID FOR NICHE IN TURF HISTORY

Tod Sloan, perhaps America's greatest jockey, who rose to riches as a racing idol, but who died recently in comparative poverty. He was born in Kokomo, Ind., Aug. 10, 1874, and obtained his real racing start in Chicago. In England he became the favorite jockey of King Edward VII.

Silvio Coucci, well up among the leaders last year, and a favorite at eastern tracks.

Earle Sande, the greatest of recent American jockeys, who, when forced from the saddle by increasing weight, has become a leading trainer.

Earl Porter, Geneva, Ill., sensation of the early winter racing season, who had 46 winning mounts in January. Many believe he will be ranked with Sloan or Sande in turf annals.

8 NOTRE DAME FIGHTERS ENTER GOLDEN GLOVES

Marek Leads Boys in Tourney Invasion.

BY FRENCH LANE.

They were to the effect that the best boxers on the University of Notre Dame campus, led by Max Marek, a former Golden Gloves champion, have banded themselves into a team which will invade THE TRIBUNE's Tournament of Champions.

In addition there were reports from Michigan that 600 boys from all parts of the state have already competed in six different tournaments—all sponsored by newspapers—Bay City Times, Flint Journal, Muskegon Chronicle, Kalamazoo Gazette, Ann Arbor Daily News, and Jackson Citizen-Patriot. Each has picked eight open class champions and eight novice champions.

Grand Rapids Opens Wednesday.

Beginning Wednesday and concluding Friday, the Grand Rapids Press tournament will be held out of which will come eight open champions, eight runners-up, and the same number in the novice division. Then on Feb. 15 and 16, this group of champions from all parts of Michigan come together in Grand Rapids. After the war is over the eight survivors will make up the team which will represent the Grand Rapids Press and its associate newspapers in THE TRIBUNE's Tournament of Champions.

So great is the interest in Golden Gloves boxing in Michigan that 37,000 spectators already have watched the bouts held in the various cities. Before the Grand Rapids tournament ends the total attendance will have gone beyond 50,000.

Marek Seeks Second Crown.

The return of Marek, who was the full back on the Notre Dame freshmen football team last fall, to Golden Gloves competition was enough to create a sensation. He is the first of last year's champions to indicate he will seek a second crown. The team of eight Notre Dame boys he will bring with him gives promise of being a formidable fighting aggregation.

This new phase of entering the tournament—that of a group entering from a single source—is growing in popularity. Instead of a hit or miss entering of two or three boys from Notre Dame, two or three from the University of Iowa, two or three from Northwestern and other universities and colleges, the boys from these several locations have mutually agreed to enter as a team thus making themselves eligible for the Tournament of Champions team trophy as well as for an individual Golden Gloves prize.

Notre Dame Fans Excited.

The teams assembled in this manner are not official representatives of their schools, nevertheless, they spring from the same sod and bask in some of the reflected glory of their several schools.

The big army of Notre Dame rooters in Chicago is already excited about this team of boxers from the campus made famous by Irish football teams. The Chicagoans are already familiar with Marek's prowess in the ring. When he won the light heavyweight championship a year ago he was regarded not only as the best 175 pound amateur in the country, but fully capable of holding his own with the leading professionals of this weight division.

Marek Instructs Mates.

Marek will not alone lead his team into the Tournament of Champions He is already instructing the Notre Dame boys in the art of taking care of themselves in Golden Gloves competition. He can see championship possibilities in every member of the team.

The team likely will include John Michuta, a former Detroit Golden Gloves heavyweight champion; Bud Marcy, 126 pound scrapper from Loyola academy in Chicago who won the C. Y. O. title in 1931 and was a member of THE TRIBUNE's Golden Gloves team in 1932; Hal Gooden. Notre Dame lightweight champion last year, who is a former Southwestern A. A. U. feathereight champion; Phil Purcell of Salt Lake City, a welterweight, and Bart McKernan from Mount Carmel High of Chicago, a

GOLDEN GLOVE TICKETS

Mail orders are now being accepted for THE TRIBUNE'S seventh annual amateur boxing tournament. Fans who prefer seats up front are urged to send in their orders this week.

Three hundred fighting men from 35 cities and colleges in Chicagoland will battle it out with the strongest and bravest from the Catholic Youth Organization, the Jewish Organized Youth, the athletic clubs, gymnasiums, and an army of unattached Chicagoans in the great Tournament of Champions at Chicago Stadium Feb. 26, 27 and 28.

The prices of tickets for these three nights are $1.10, 66 cents and 40 cents.

Then come the finals, March 9, which will crown the Golden Gloves champions of 1934. They will be the survivors of the thousands from Illinois, Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Tennessee, Iowa, Wisconsin, and Nebraska who had the courage to test their fistic skill in man to man fashion.

Tickets for the finals are priced at $3.30, $2.20, $1.65, $1.10 and 55 cents. All seats are reserved.

CUNNINGHAM RUNS HIS FASTEST INDOOR MILE TO BEAT VENZKE

New York, Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Gene Venzke made another unsuccessful attempt to beat Glenn Cunningham at a mile tonight when the Kansas nemesis of the Pennsylvania sophomore raced the second fastest eight furlongs ever timed indoors to win the Rodman Wanamaker mile. The event featured the 27th annual Millrose A. A. games, which were contested in Madison Square Garden.

Wresting the lead from his eastern foe with two and a half laps to go, Cunningham surged over the finish fifteen yards ahead of Venzke as the watches snapped down on 4:11.2, time that has been surpassed only by Venzke's 4:10 indoor record in 1932.

No Cheers at Finish.

Jammed into the Garden, from the floor to the rafters, was a capacity crowd of 16,500, a gathering that was no larger because of the limitations of the arena. Thousands were turned away and the fire department finally was forced to close the doors.

There was no mighty roar of acclaim when Cunningham snapped the finish line. It was with complete and absolute apathy that the huge throng greeted his mangnificent performance. It was far from being the most spectacular race of the Venzke-Cunningham series, merely because the Kansasan went about winning in such a business like fashion. His victory was readily apparent from the eighth lap on.

It was then that the rugged, barrel chested Cunningham stepped into the lead, opening up a wider and wider margin. Glen Dawson of the Tulsa A. C. was too far back in third place to be at all dangerous. And so it was that Cunningham achieved his sixth victory over Venzke in seven starts.

Hornbostel Nears Record.

With this triumph Cunningham gained permanent possession of the Wanamaker cup. His time of 4:11.2, the fastest of his career indoors, was identical to that turned in by Venzke in the same race in 1932, then a world's record.

One world's indoor record was broken three times during the evening's competition, finally ending in the upset victory of John S. Collier of the Boston A. A., former Brown star, over Johnny Morriss of Abbeyville, La., the national outdoor high hurdler, in the 60 yard event. Collier's time was 7.5 seconds. The former mark was 7.8 seconds. Collier ran his heat in 7.7 and Morriss won his preliminary test in 7.6.

Charles (Chuck) Hornbostel of Indiana, a driving, powerful runner of the Cunnngham pattern, unreeled a sizzling sprint in the last two laps of the invitational 1,000 yard race to win by thirty yards. He was caught in 2:12.8, just eight-tenths of a second behind Harold Cutbill's twelve year old record.

Hornbostel stayed behind the pace of Jack Keville of the New York A. C. for four laps. Then when Frank Nordell of N. Y. U. moved into the van Hornbostel followed right along, jumped ahead of the violet ace in the next few yards, and promptly proceeded to turn the event into a pursuit race.

Turner Starts Too Late.

Waldo Sweet of Amherst took second place, 30 yards back, with another fast finisher, Brendan Moynahan of the Boston A. A., finishing third.

Ned Turner, formerly of Michigan and a member of the U. S. Olympic team, waited too long for his sprint in the half-mile special and failed by a yard of repeating his triumph of a year ago. Don Fleet of the Boston A. A., out in front at the gun, clung desperately to his advantage in the homestretch and won in the unimpressive time of 1:57.4. Eddie Blake of the Newark A. C., was third.

Ralph Metcalfe, Marquette university Negro and Olympic sprint star, won the 60 yard dash in 6.3 seconds, defeating Emmett Toppino of New Orleans, La., in a close finish. Met-

4 Marks Fall in Western Skating Meet

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Four United States indoor skating records were broken last night in the Western Open speed skating championships at the Chicago Stadium. Leo Freisinger of the Brekke Skating club of Chicago, former winner of a pair of Silver Skates and holder of five world's intermediate records, supplied half of the record breaking punch last night.

Freisinger, who won every intermediate race in the recent North American outdoor championships at Oconomowoc, Wis., established new marks in the one-half mile and one mile events. Edith Kingsmill of Winnipeg, Can., won the class A women's 440 yard dash in record time, and Maddy Horn of Oconomowoc set a record in the first semi-final of the class A women's three-fourths mile event. Miss Horn fell in the finals of this race and Kitty Klein of Buffalo was the winner. While her time also exceeded the former record, it lacked two seconds of equaling Miss Horn's in the trials.

A capacity crowd, which jammed the mezzanine and balconies and which officials estimated as in excess of 15,000, watched the races. In between the speed events figure skaters, acrobats, and dancers entertained the throng.

THREE CHICAGO MEN NAMED ON NEW TURF BOARD

Peter B. Carey, president of the Chicago Board of Trade, was named chairman of the new state turf governing body. The other two members selected by the governor were Leo Spitz, a Chicago attorney, and Walter C. Peacock, Chicago jeweler and sportsman.

Spitz was appointed for a period of six years, Carey will serve for four, and Peacock for two years. Carey and Spitz are Democrats and Peacock is a Republican.

Body Nonpolitical.

They had urged the governor to keep the racing commission out of politics, and that seems to be what he has done, according to the unanimous verdict of the men whose millions are invested in the race tracks in Chicago.

All the members of the commission are enthusiastic racing fans, but none of them has ever held public office nor been interested in any racing venture either in a track or the ownership of horses.

The race track owners pictured Carey, the chairman of the commission, as just the kind of a fighting Irishman who will keep the sport above reproach at all times. "He will not hesitate to enforce the rules the commission adopts and will do it in a two fisted manner," an associate of Mr. Carey on the Board of Trade, who is also heavily interested in one of Chicago's largest tracks, declared last night.

Peacock Crack Shot.

Peacock, while always interested in horses from an observer's and admirer's point of view, has gained most of his fame in sports as an expert marksman with a shotgun and small arms. He is one of the star trapshooters of America and a crack marksman in the duck shooting regions of central and southern Illinois.

From St. Petersburg, Fla., last night came a message from Mr. Carey, the chairman of the new commission, who said he was glad to accept the appointment. "I will insist, however, that the rules of racing be enforced to the letter. This commission is charged with a genuine responsibility to the people of Illinois, and that responsibility must be discharged honestly and fearlessly," he said.

Racing Dates Important.

"One thing certain is that the doping of race horses will be stopped and will not be tolerated at any time in Illinois. We will find measures with which to enforce this rule."

Mr. Carey did not say when he will return to Chicago, but it is understood he will come back from Florida within a few days, when he will call the commission into session. He considers the granting of racing dates as the most important subject to be considered by the committee at its first meeting.

No secretary has been named for the commission, but it is understood that George Foster, also of Chicago and an attorney, will receive the appointment as soon as the commission is organized.

PITCHER SPURNS CUT; MAY GO TO CARDS OR REDS

Won Only 10, Lost 14 in 1933.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Pat Malone is a Cub holdout. He has spurned salary offers from President William M. Walker, who is said to have gone further than he thought Malone deserved in the dickering process.

Malone may be sold or traded to either the St. Louis Cardinals or the Cincinnati Reds during the league meeting in New York next Thursday. It virtually is a certainty that he will not be in a Cub uniform on opening day even if the Cards and Reds turn thumbs down.

Long a Problem to Cubs.

Malone throughout his baseball career has been something of a "problem child" in so far as regulation of his conditioning programs was concerned. Some of his unique ideas about rules of conduct were overlooked as long as he was a winner, but when he started to slip, it is said, the frowning on Pat's jovial nature off the field became more acute.

The Cubs last season thought that Malone's record of 14 losses, as compared to 10 victories, was largely due to the big boy's whimsical outlook on life, and during the early winter efforts were made to use him in several potential trades.

The Cubs tried to use Pat in a deal with the Reds last November, listing his value at $15,000. The Reds were reported to have noticed the item, and to have asked, "If the deal goes through would you just as soon give us the $15,000 instead of Malone, or maybe $8,000 or $10,000?"

Contract Calls for Cut.

Further efforts at swapping eventually reduced the price tag on Malone to just a few dollars above the waiver price, but still there were no customers, and the Cubs, figuring they were giving the big Altoona fireman a break, announced: "Well, it looks as if Pat Malone will be among those present at Catalina, come spring training."

In due course a contract was sent Malone to his winter base at Miami Beach, Fla., and his name was embossed on the official roster.

The contract, it is said, called for a cut, but nothing severe, and it was assumed that Pat, once reported to be an $18,000 a year performer on a two year contract, would sign and set about the business of reëstablishing himself in the estimation of not only his club, but the National league as well.

Only 30 Years Old.

But developments weren't as anticipated. Pat roared when he got his document and subsequent negotiations were of such a pointed nature that the Cub front office is said to have lost interest in the matter of Pat's joining up, even with the cash elements held in the background.

Contrary to the general impression, Malone has not been overtaken by age. He was 30 years old last Sept. 25 and, of great strength, should have at least four or five years of stellar pitching in his system.

Pat's erratic manners kept him in the minors for seven years, but when he won 28 games with Des Moines in 1926 and followed with 20 for Minneapolis in 1927 Joe McCarthy, then manager of the Cubs, decided Malone had seen the light and bought him.

In his first four years with the Cubs Pat tended to his knitting in great style and during the span won more games than any pitcher in the National league.

He Came Back Strong.

In 1928 he lost seven games before winning one, then squared away and won 18 of his next 24 games. The next year he turned in 22 victories to 10 defeats to become the main pitching man in the pennant winning campaign that year. In 1930 he won 20 and lost 9, to bring his average wins for the first three years with the Cubs to an even 20. In 1931 Malone won 16 and lost 9, for a percentage of .640, which is very good, but in 1932 he dropped below the .500 mark for the first time as a Cub, with 15 victories and 17 losses. Then came last year's 10 wins and 14 losses, with many losses resulting from temperamental blowups when success seemed imminent.

President Walker and Vice President John O. Seys will leave for New York today. Tuesday night they will attend the banquet given by Owner Charles Stoneham of the Giants.

Dorais Signs with Detroit for 3 Years

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 3.—(AP)—Charles E. [Gus] Dorais, head coach at University of Detroit who has been mentioned in connection with almost every major coaching vacancy since the end of the football season, today renewed his contract for three years.

No announcement concerning salary was made, but in the past Dorais was understood to be receiving about $10,000 a year.

Since coming to Detroit from Gonzaga college, Spokane, Wash., in 1925, Dorais' football teams have won 61 games, lost 21, and tied 4.

TIME SUPPLY IS EASY VICTOR IN HIALEAH STAKES

Leads Agrarian to Finish by Five Lengths.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Mrs. Frank A. Carreaud's Time Supply merely galloped along in front of a field of 10 fleet 3 year olds in the third running of the six furlong Hialeah stakes at Hialeah park today. At the finish the son of Time Maker held a five length advantage over Mrs. F. J. Helle's Agrarian, with W. Graham's Open Range a length and a half farther back in third place.

A crowd of 15,000 saw the Carreaud colt earn $2,210 for his owner by covering the distance in 1:11 2-5 over a fast track.

Winner Makes Own Pace.

Although Open Range, a frequent winner in recent Texas meetings, tried his best to make a race out of the stake event, Jockey Don Meade had only to allow Time Supply to make his own pace and stay in front. After the first few furlongs the winner was never in danger, holding an advantage of from three to five lengths.

Only at the start did another racer figure in the running. At the break Open Range got away fastest of the field and held a brief lead. The Graham racer had been acting up badly at the post and was put on the outside, from where he broke best of the field.

Time Supply broke well in motion, however, and stayed with the leader, moving up and into the van after getting well into stride. After two furlongs Time Supply had already taken an insurmountable lead and was never threatened thereafter.

Open Range Shows Speed.

Open Range, the Phalaros gelding which made an enviable record at Houston, was the second best of the field in the early stages of the race. He showed a good turn of speed and stayed fairly close to the leader's pace.

J. R. Bucahan's Happy Go, which finally finished sixth, was also well up early. He stayed near Open Range until the turn into the stretch, where he tired and dropped back. Open Range also tired after trying to force the pace throughout and was passed in the stretch by the fast closing Agrarian.

Agrarian Forced to Outside.

Agrarian had the worst of the break. He was caught in behind horses and was forced to come to the outside to gain racing room. As soon as he had a clear passage, Porter sent him up strongly and he passed most of the field in the last three furlongs, closing gamely and with good speed.

Time Supply was the first favorite to win, and, as later events proved, the only one. He returned $5.50 straight. Agrarian was second best regarded in the wagering, returning $3.80 for the place and $3.20 to show.

PICK FIRST MINSTREL

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 3.—(AP)—Forgetting the fillies and equating the ratings of various handicappers, the colt considered most likely to be post time favorite in the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs May 5 is Mrs. Payne Whitney's First Minstrel.

This is a rather surprising choice on the part of the pencil and paper men who have been trying to pull a Derby prospect out of the hat for a flyer in the winter books, considering that First Minstrel won only $5,945 as a 2 year old and was not even among the first 15 of last year's juvenile money winners.

Singing Wood Up There.

Close to First Minstrel in the colt rating is Mrs. J. H. Whitney's Singing Wood, winner of the Belmont Futurity and $82,950, which gave him honors as the leading 2 year old money winner last year. Both First Minstrel and Singing Wood are by the same sire, Royal Minstrel.

First Minstrel is given the edge over Singing Wood because of the form he revealed in winning the junior championship stakes and the Sanford handicap, and his staying qualities evidenced in other races last year in which he was defeated. Both, however, are quoted at 20 to 1 in the early winter books.

Third in the handicap census of colts is Chicstraw, George D. Widener's winner of the Pimlico handicap. Close up in the rating are High Quest and Cavalcade, both owned by the Brookmeade stable.

A. B. Gordon's Sir Thomas, a maiden which barely missed recording a startling upset by defeating Singing Wood in the Belmont Futurity at long odds, is the sleeper among the ranking colts. That remarkable stretch drive in the Belmont stamps him as a serious threat in distance races if he reaches his top form by Derby day.

Some More to Watch.

Other colts ranked among the first eight of that sex in Derby forecasts are Discovery, owned by Adolphe Pons, and Black Buddy, another of Mrs. Payne Whitney's prospective color bearers.

Nominations for this year's Derby, which will carry an added purse of $30,000, will close Wednesday. Nominations postmarked as late as midnight Feb. 7 will be accepted.

BACKYARD DUCK HUNTERS GET 18, AND TIME TO PAY

Four duck hunters who did their hunting in the back yard of an acquaintance were arraigned yesterday before Police Magistrate John J. Peters in Wilmette. They were accused by Arnold Chilcott, 2117 Lake avenue, Wilmette, of bagging 18 live Mallard duck decoys he had been keeping in his yard. He signed burglary complaints against them after finding in the empty pens a ring he recognized as belonging to Melvin Cotrill, 419 Gregory avenue, Wilmette. Under questioning Cotrill confessed he and three companions thought the ducks extremely tasty. Magistrate Peters continued the case until Feb. 10 when the defendants promised to reimburse Chilcott at the rate of $3 for each of the birds. The other defendants are William Corus and Peter Heinzen of Wilmette, and Dave Weberg of Evanston.

HAWKS BATTLE REVAMPED BRUIN SEXTET TONIGHT

Wilcox Fills Hitchman's Place for Boston.

Tonight at the Stadium the Boston Bruins, with Eddie Shore back at his old position on right defense, will battle the Blackhawks in the third and last game of the 1933-'34 schedule between teams in Chicago.

The Bruins in the two games played to date have not been able to score at the Stadium. The first went to the Hawks by a 1 to 0 score and the second ended in overtime, 0 to 0.

Chicago's largest hocky crowd of the season is expected to attend. Since Shore's return to the game the Bruins have played to big crowds in New York, Boston, and Detroit.

Fears that Lionel Conacher, Hawk defense star who suffered a nose injury in the Ottawa game, would not even be in Chicago for tonight's game, were ended when Conacher called Manager Gorman last night from his home in Toronto and told him his condition had improved and he would be ready for duty here. Conacher had gone home to his own physician after the injured member failed to respond to treatment.

Hitchman Coach on Bruin Farm.

Even with Shore back in his accustomed place the Bruins will meet the Hawks with a vastly changed lineup. Lionel Hitchman, former great defense man, captain of the Boston squad and linemate of Shore's for many years, will be missing from the Boston ranks.

Last week as a reward for outstanding hocky service—he has been with the Bruins since 1925—Manager Art Ross appointed Hitchman coach of the Boston Cubs, the Bruins' farm in the Canadian-American Hockey league. His place will be taken by Archie Wilcox, former Montreal Maroon defense player. Myles Lane, a former Dartmouth football star, is back with the Bruins and will be teamed with Alex Smith on a second defense line.

George Patterson and Lloyd Gross, who became Bruins in a recent deal which sent Bob Gracie and Art Chapman to the New York Americans, have been sent to the Bruins' farm. Their places have been filled by Frank Jerwa and Bob Davis.

Hawks Pick Up Three Points.

The old standbys who have been supplying most of the scoring punch for Boston are Nels Stewart, Marty Barrry, Red Beattie, Dit Clapper, and Joe Lamb.

Manager Tommy Gorman's Blackhawks picked up three points while up in Canada last week.

Particularly pleasing to the Hawks' boss was the showing made by Johnny Sheppard, Doc Romnes, and Mush March on the trip. Lineups:

Conacher	D.	Shore
Jenkins	D.	Wilcox

Chicago Only Undefeated Team in Ping-Pong Play

Chicago came out of the first day's play in the national intercity ping-pong team championship tournament last night at the Morrison hotel with four victories and no defeats, but Jimmy McClure of Indianapolis, a slim 17 year old boy, who has been playing ping-pong only two years, stole the show.

Although young Jimmy's Indianapolis team was not among the leaders it was not his fault. In nine appearances at the table he whipped eight opponents, and it took the national champion, James Jacobson of New York, to keep him from having a perfect record. At that McClure gave Jacobson a stubborn argument before succumbing, 21-15, 14-21, and 22-20.

He Beats Clark.

One of Chicago's four victories yesterday was over McClure's team, five matches to four. Jimmy trounced each of the three Chicagoans to face him, including Coleman Clark, former national champion.

Clark, who mowed down most of his opponents, had additional trouble in the Indianapolis series, for Joel Inman also took his measure. Later Clark fell a victim of Mark Schulde of St. Louis for his third upset of the day.

Champ Has Trouble.

If Clark could complain about ill luck he had company in Jacobson. In his first two appearances against Dayton the national champion was defeated, and in the evening he again was humbled three times by St. Louis players, Schulde being one of the offenders.

Winning Ping-Pong

BY COLEMAN CLARK.
[National Champion 1932.]

THE CHOP.

To play a winning game it is not enough to be equipped solely with a good topspin drive, described in the last article. Many believe the chop is fully as important a stroke, and there is no question that it is the defensive shot par excellence.

The opposite of topspin is underspin, called the "chop" in tennis. Topspin comes from striking UP on the ball, while underspin is attained by striking DOWN on the ball. The stroke is much the same as chopping with an axe. The ball must be really hit, not pushed. A gentle massage will not do. You will get the right idea if you know what the "draw shot" is in billiards. Don't peck at the ball—follow through. Be sure not to turn the wrist over when the ball is hit, as this will give you topspin.

Learn a good chop. It will cause your opponents no end of worry and diversify your game.

Maroons, Minus Haarlow, Lose to Marquette, 33 to 25

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 3.—Marquette beat Chicago tonight in a listless basketball game for its fourth victory of the season over Big Ten competition. The score was 33 to 25. The Auditorium was less than half filled.

The Hilltoppers, winners in nine out of 12 starts, won as they pleased. With one exception, which came early in the opening half, they never were headed. The Maroons, minus the services of their star, Bill Haarlow, threatened in the final minutes, drawing up to within five points of a tie.

Leo Oppenheim, husky guard, not only was the Maroons' star player, but also the leading scorer, sinking six baskets, three in each half. Adolph Gorychka and Ray Morstadt were the main guns in the Marquette attack. The former with nine points and the latter with eight. Morstadt's total tonight brought his aggregate for the season to 105.

WHITE SOX ORDER ROOKIE BATTERIES TO COAST FEB. 24

10 Pitchers, 3 Catchers Will Get Early Test.

J. Louis Comiskey, owner of the White Sox, yesterday sent out orders for ten of his pitchers, three of his catchers, Coach Jimmy Austin and Trainer Ad Schacht to report to Manager Lew Fonseca at Pasadena, Cal., on Feb. 24.

Mr. Comiskey's assignments were forwarded simultaneously with the release of the official roster of 37 players now under contract—the largest squad the Sox have signed in recent years.

With thirteen players in training on the morning of Feb. 25, the Sox will be the early birds of the majors.

The White Sox special train for Pasadena is not scheduled to leave Chicago until Feb. 28. Indications point to light booking on the special, in so far as athletes are concerned. Many of the players who live in the south and west, as well as Al Simmons and George Earnshaw, who have been in training at Hot Springs, Ark., will go direct to the Pasadena training camp.

Add Two Games with Pirates.

The revised list of exhibition games, featured by the previously announced half dozen contests with the Cubs, was included in the roster and shows the addition of two games with the Pittsburgh Pirates, bringing the total with the Pittsburghers to 14 games. The additions to the list include a game in Tulsa on April 12 and another in Terre Haute on April 13. Here is the revised list:

March 11—Los Angeles at Los Angeles.
March 13—Los Angeles at Los Angeles.
March 14—Los Angeles at Los Angeles.
March 17—Chicago Cubs at Los Angeles.
March 18—Chicago Cubs at Los Angeles.
March 24—Pittsburgh at Los Angeles.
March 25—Pittsburgh at Los Angeles.
March 27—Chicago Cubs at Los Angeles.
March 28—Chicago Cubs at Los Angeles.
April 2—Pittsburgh at San Bernardino.
April 3—Pittsburgh at Yuma.
April 4—Pittsburgh at Phoenix.
April 5—Pittsburgh at Tucson.
April 6—Pittsburgh at Tucson.
April 7—Pittsburgh at El Paso.
April 8—Pittsburgh at El Paso.
April 9—Pittsburgh at Albuquerque.
April 10—Pittsburgh at Tucumcari.
April 11—Pittsburgh at Oklahoma City.
April 12—Pittsburgh at Tulsa.
April 13—Pittsburgh at Terre Haute.
April 14—Cubs at Wrigley field.
April 15—Cubs at Comiskey park.

The list of early birds, the gents who start doing their stuff Feb. 25, and something of their history, follows:

Catcher Morgan J. Snyder, purchased from Topeka, and doped by Fonseca to be among the best of his crop of rookies—possibly his first string catcher. Has worked for five minor league teams and last year batted .319.

Catcher Mervin Shea, obtained from St. Louis in a trade for Frank Grube. He'll be the first string catcher if Snyder doesn't live up to expectations.

Pasek Earnest Youngster.

Catcher John Pasek, who lit with the White Sox in the deal involving George Earnshaw and Mickey Cochrane. Johnny didn't get much work with Detroit last year, but is reported to be a very earnest young man.

Pitcher Phil Gallivan, a big right hander, who started with the Sox last year and finished with Buffalo. He won 14 and lost 15 with the Bisons.

Pitcher Paul Edwin Gregory, a Sox chattel for two years and a year ago expected to be a sensation with the Sox. He couldn't get going and didn't improve much when shipped to Milwaukee. He was recalled near the close of the season.

Pitcher John Huck, Chicago sandlotter, who says he is a cinch to make good. He was born on the last day of the year, 1912.

Pitcher Ira Hutchinson, another native Chicagoan, who did some fair work for Galveston, where he won 7 and lost 3.

Mills with Eight Clubs.

Pitcher Dale Mills, a much traveled right hander, who has seen service with eight clubs, including a brief visit with the Cincinnati Reds. Won 12 and lost 6 for Quincy and Topeka last season.

Pitcher Otho Nitcholas, a Texan, who won 13 and lost 15 in the Texas league last year.

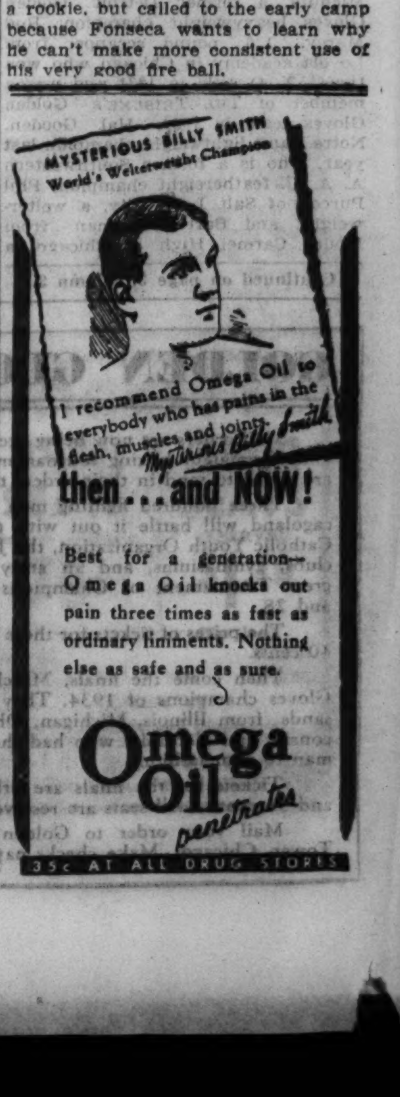
Pitcher John Pomorski, one of the early birds expected to be with the troupe when it gets back to Chicago. He won 14 while losing 7 with Montreal last season.

Pitcher Lee Stine, who is more than 25 years younger than Red Faber. Despite his youth he has put in three seasons with San Francisco. Last year he took part in 47 games, winning 12 and losing 13.

Tietje Expected to Be Regular.

Pitcher Leslie Tietje, a young man who looked very good in the closing weeks of last season after the Sox got him from Dallas. Fonseca expects him to be a regular.

Pitcher Whitlow Wyatt by no means a rookie, but called to the early camp because Fonseca wants to learn why he can't make more consistent use of his very good fire ball.



COACHES URGE ELIMINATION OF PASS PENALTIES

Also Want Definite Rules for Officials.

New York, Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Coaches want several important changes and clarifications of football rules, according to the sentiment of the meeting of the special rules committee of the Football Coaches' Association of America at its meeting here today.

Perhaps the most drastic is the suggestion that the penalty for extra forward passes incompleted during one sequence of downs be eliminated. Another suggests that a blocked kick be declared dead regardless of which side recovers the ball.

This sentiment became known unofficially. Officially the rules committee issued, through its chairman, Lou Little of Columbia, a statement endorsing the game as it stands at present and adding a desire to "call attention to several rules which need clarification and simplification for the benefit of coaches and officials and the safety of players."

No New Rules.

The coaches did not adopt any suggestion for radical changes or the introduction of new rules. The suggested ending of the automatic touchback on incompleted forward passes into the end zone and the moving of the goal posts back to the goal line died in discussion. But there were certain definite recommendations decided upon to be made to the rules committee when it convenes in Atlanta next week. These, however, were not made public, it being understood that Walter Okeson, chairman of the rules committee, requested this in a letter to the meeting.

The official statement read as follows: "The special committee of the Football Coaches' Association of America goes on record as being satisfied with the present college game of football. The rules have proved satisfactory as regards interest and the safety of players.

They Want Clarification.

"The committee does wish to draw attention to several rules that need clarification and simplification for the benefit of coaches and officials and the safety of players. These are:

1. The blocked kick rule, which now permits only the defensive team to run with the recovered ball.
2. Eligible men on forward passes.
3. Equipment.
4. Notification of time out.
5. Duties of field judge on a dead ball.
6. Protection of the forward passer.
7. Position of officials on all plays.
8. Penalty on successive incompleted forward passes."

It is known that the definite recommendations which the coaches are to carry with them to the rule committee on each of these items are:

Here Are Recommendations.

No. 1—That a blocked kick be declared dead on recovery, regardless of which side recovers.

No. 2—That the present rule forbidding ineligible men to go down field on a forward pass until the ball has been thrown be stringently enforced, more so than in the past.

N. 3—That there be a more definite agreement of what constitutes legal and illegal equipment.

No. 4—That the referee or some other official be definitly charged with reporting to any captain as soon as his side has taken the limit of three time outs.

No. 5—That there be a definite decision as to which official is to declare the ball dead when it is rolling on a punt.

No. 6—That there be a more strict enforcement and watching of unnecessary roughness to a forward passer after he has thrown the ball.

No. 7—That there be a uniform grouping of officials on each play.

No. 8—That the penalty for successive forward passes be eliminated from the rules.

Pass Suggestion Important.

This latter suggestion was the most important decision and grew from the consensus of opinion that the rule, designed to cut down on wild forward passing, had not done that, and that at present it merely cluttered up the game with penalties which spoiled play.

In general the tone of the meeting was more conservative than any of recent years, and the few radical suggestions which were put forward had short life in the discussion which followed. These suggestions are now carried to the rules committee by the representatives of the coaches on that committee: Lou Little, Noble Kizer of Purdue, Percy Locey of the University of Denver, and Bill Hollingberry of Washington.

THE TRIBUNE'S Silver Skates titles, would have equaled Freisinger's double victory feat except that he was disqualified in the two mile class A event, the finale of the program. Stundl was the winner in the one mile race and crossed the line first in the two miles and in record time, but the judges scratched his name. He was alleged to have pushed Eddie Schroeder, national champion, on the back stretch turn of the twentieth and final lap.

Brekke Team Wins.

The Eden T. Brekke Skating club won the team championship in the Chicago grouping with 170 points. The Romme Skating club was second with 100 points, and the Olympic club was third with 60 points. In the out of town list, Oconomowoc, Wis., was the winner of the championship with 90 points.

The tournament was sponsored by the Chicago Daily News.

The ten laps to a mile track imposed a handicap on skaters inexperienced in taking sharp corners and Eddie Schroeder fell in both the mile and two mile races. His first tumble was the result of another's misfortune, who, in sliding against the protection mats, took Schroeder and two others with him. Only four of the field finished the one mile race. Twenty-four started the two mile race and more than half had fallen at the completion of the race.

Interest Wide in Other Sections.

Other prospective members of the team are Jess Roces, a youthful Hawaiian who scales 112 pounds, and Reno Zarantenello of Harvey, Ill., who is a promising heavyweight. The boxers have been working out almost daily since Christmas.

The wide interest which the earlier tournaments in Michigan have attracted is in evidence in other parts of Chicagoland, where there will be furious fighting in nine sectional tournament centers this week.

In the number of entries and in the advance demand for reserved seats all records are being shattered in every sectional center.

Chicago boys—more than 2,000 of them in all—are in hard training and marking time until they will see action in the Chicago sectional meets.

WIFFY COX WINS AGUA CALIENTE OPEN WITH 282

Brooklyn Golfer Beats Hunter by One Stroke.

AGUA CALIENTE, Mexico, Feb. 3.—(AP)—W. H. [Wiffy] Cox won the fifth annual Agua Caliente open golf championship with a 72 hole score of 282 today, to establish a new scoring record for the event.

The Brooklyn pro led the field at the end of the second round, held his position through a grueling third round and was still out in front by a stroke over Willie Hunter, Culver City, Cal., pro, when the firing was over for the year on the Mexican front.

Cox ran the scale in winning the $1,500 first money. His four rounds moved up a stroke a day, 69—70—71—72, when more than a stroke advance would have been costly.

Hunter, who was 41 years old last Monday, was given a birthday present of $1,000 for finishing second. The former British star, long resident in the United States, carried the fight to the last hole, coming to the eighteenth with a chance to tied for the lead by getting a birdie three.

Deciding Putt Is Short.

He fired a great iron 22 feet above the cup and was left with a tricky putt against the grain of the green. He studied the line closely but his ball stopped two feet short.

Cox played consistent but not spectacular golf throughout. His 72 today was the same as scored by Hunter, but Wiffy finished 40 minutes ahead of Willie and the Briton knew what he had to do to catch him.

Denny Shute, British open champion, shot a 68 in the last round to slip into third place with a total of 285. Shute, who left after the play for Miami and his professional duties there, was off to an indifferent start with 75, but he played great golf later.

Ky Laffoon, young Denver pro, was among the several stars with last day scores of 72 and his 286 gave him fourth place. Tied for fifth at 287 were Leo Diegel, Olin Dutra and Horton Smith of Oak Park, Ill. Abe Espinosa continued to play consistent golf by scoring 72 for the fourth time in four days and his 288 gave him a tie for eighth with Paul Runyan, the winner last year.

Runyan started the play with a 69 in the first round, but never again was able to get under par.

Cooper Places Tenth.

Harry Cooper of Chicago took tenth place with a four round total of 289 and there was a four-cornered tie for eleventh among MacDonald Smith, Bobby Cruickshank, Jimmy Thompson and Vic Ghezzi, Rumson, N. J.

Frank Walsh, Chicago professional, saved his best for the last and, with a 67, became the fifth player of the week to share in the new course record. Walsh finished with a total of 290 and 15th place. Fay Coleman of Los Angeles, Bill Mehlhorn of Brooklyn, who also scored 67s earlier in the play, and Julius Ackerbloom of Little Rock, Ark., tied for 16th with 291.

Johnny Dawson, Chicago, won the amateur honors with a total of 296, with Charles Seaver of Los Angeles, runnerup at 297. Dr. Cliff Baker, Portland, Ore., was a stroke back at 298. Dawson has won the amateur prize in the Mexican event every year except in 1931, when Fay Coleman was in front. Coleman returned in 1934 to get in the money as a professional.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

IN SUNNY FLORIDA.

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla., Feb. 3.—Friend Arch: Well, Arch, as soon as I received your note saying I better take my vacation at once since I was so rundown, I was a man of action, just like I always try to be when I work for you. So I wrote Wakes for two days ahead, hopped the rattler, and here I am with other members of the Wake household. You see they had such confidence you would recognize my nervous condition they preceded me.

I haven't had time to look around any yet for I've been here only a few hours, but I thought you'd want to know if I stood the trip all right, considering how weak I felt before I knew for sure I was coming. I did stand it all right and already I feel much better, almost as if I could go to the race track any time you wanted me to. As soon as I get settled a bit, I'll write and tell you of our living conditions and what people you know are here and things like that.

I suppose you'll want me to take part of my vacation period before I go to work so I won't write any column for a few days but will be ready to put my shoulder to the wheel, if I can find any wheel, at any time.

Now you didn't say in your note just how long you wanted me to stay. After my vacation is over, if you can call it a vacation when I'm thinking of the office and my work all the time, there's the Carnera fight and probably I ought to see both atha-letes in action before they square off in the ring, so to speak.

I don't remember whether I mentioned that the Florida Derby is March 17 at Hialeah. Although I've been here only a few hours I find tremendous public interest in this event and many of the people here read THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Probably there will be some Chicago owned horses in it. Charley O., won it last year for the Eastman stable, you know, and he also started in the Kentucky Derby.

It might be worth while to try interviewing some of the horses and see what they think about their chances, although I've never had much luck at that sort of thing except at Louisville. That's the only place where I've ever been able to get them to talk frankly. Probably it's the blue grass influence or something. But even so, I'd like you to remember that the Derby is March 17.

We can talk about that later, but there might be a number of human interest stories I could work up in the time between the fight and the Derby.

For instance, I could take a dip in the ocean and see whether it is warmer than Lake Michigan. I might compare the golf course sand traps here with those of the Chicago district. I might conduct a sociological study of the patrons of Jack Huff's night club at Hollywood as related to those of his Lincoln Tavern in Chicago. Perhaps I could find out how a sailfish sails. There are plenty of problems to be solved, but as I said we can talk about that later.

I hate to mention it but a distressing thing happened when I stopped at office on my way to train. It's about that Iowa City expense account of $19.07. You remember the one where I misplaced my receipt for railroad fare and didn't turn it in with the expense account. Later I found it and gave it to you and I hope you didn't misplace it, too, for when I called at paymaster's window and asked for my expense account check, he said there wasn't any. It was very embarrassing, not to say annoying.

If you lost the receipt, too, I suppose we'll have a heck of time with the auditing department. I can prove I took the train out of Iowa City because I played bridge—though they didn't call my idea of the game real bridge—with Ted Payseur, Northwestern's freshman coach, and officials Feezle and Klarno. I didn't come back on the same train with them and no one on the train knew me. Still it's hardly reasonable to assume I walked back to save the railroad fare because in the first place it was too cold, and besides my feet aren't what they used to be.

Remember that time I lost my railroad receipt for fare from Columbus and it took about four months to prove I didn't walk back. It was really harder to get that money than the time at Louisville about four or five years ago when Don, who was sporting editor then, said I could charge $20 for "experience" because I was short a lot of jack that I didn't know where it went.

Well, I got that $20 all right, and the next year of course, I was short again, but times were a little harder and I only charged $10 for "good will" when I created more than $10 worth of good will for the paper, I'm sure. And that went through, too, but this railroad fare receipt thing has me stumped because I always lose the darned things. I don't blame the auditing department at all because they have to be businesslike, but that doesn't get me my $19.07.

I'll be real careful about receipts here when I'm doing work for you. They really are a little hard to get. I've tried it before. You see when you rent a car and ask a receipt for the money you pay, the garage man is likely to think it's a "damn Yankee trick" and be discourteous. There aren't many cars to be rented during the winter season, but I'll do the best I can for, as you know, I'm always very conscientious in my work and about my expense accounts. Regards to the bunch. HARVEY T. WOODRUFF.

P. S.: If you can do anything to straighten out that $19.07, please drop me a line, for I'll need it if you should want me to stay longer than two weeks. O. I nearly forgot, my address is 717 S. E. 2d street, Himmarshee court, Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Nation-Wide War on Crow Urged by Game Heads

BY BOB BECKER.

Ol' Jim Crow, that smart, tar-colored villain of the fields and woods, brought forth considerable oratory in New York recently when hundreds of conservationists and wild life authorities assembled to discuss problems affecting upland game and migratory birds. Charles F. Thompson, acting director of conservation for the state of Illinois, was one of the officials at the conference who stressed the destructive habits of crows in the United States and urged that a nation-wide program of crow control be adopted.

Mr Thompson now is pressing a campaign in Illinois to reduce the crow population. Sportsmen are being urged to assist in the job of exterminating the big, black birds which downstate are now found in flocks numbering hundreds of thousands of birds. Inasmuch as these huge flocks are congregating in fruit orchards considerable damage is being done to the trees.

Reporting on the reaction of the biological survey, the recent game conference in New York, and officials of conservation organizations to a program of crow control, Mr. Thompson writes as follows:

"The biological survey as you know has made a comprehensive study of the crow and his habits, and his material increase in numbers during the last few years. The survey has requested that states inaugurate campaigns to reduce the crow population I know how the song bird organizations felt about such a program because Brooke Anderson, member of the migratory bird advisory board interviewed Gilbert T. Pearson, head of the Audubon society and officials of the emergency conservation organization. They both agreed that some action was necessary to reduce the crow menace. They approved the recommendation of the biological survey and of any other means used to reduce the excessive number of crows now evident."

Gerstein's 214 Average Helps Keep Old Manhattans in Front

BY HOWARD MARTIN.

A. Gerstein, 214; L. Levine, 211; G. Notz, 208, and J. Burke, 207, are the men keeping the Old Manhattans in first place in the Men's Classic Bowling league as the second half race picks up momentum. With all these averages exceeding the 200 mark, the Manhattans, who have won 20 games and lost ten, still do not have the individual leader.

Gerstein's 214 is only good for third position since D. Winsberg of Edelweiss is knocking over the pins at a 221 clip and J. Bishop of the second place Baby Ruths is shooting 215.

Tonight the ten teams of the league will return to action with the Manhattans facing serious opposition from the Moulding-Brownells, who would not be adverse to bettering their lowly 14 and 16 standing, a sharp contrast to their work in the first section of the season. The schedule for this evening:

Baby Ruth vs. Moulding-Brownell at Gold Coast, 1213 North Clark street; A. J. Cermaks vs. Lorenz Knitting at Garden, 4074 Milwaukee avenue; Olive Can company vs. Arlington Bowlers Aid at Petersen's, 2055 West 35th street; Budweiser vs. Old Manhattan at H. B. Kaad's, 2112 Lawrence avenue; Stevenson Heating vs. Edelweiss at Harding, 2701 Milwaukee avenue.

Their margin now is only one game. P. Strassburger of Leonard's Beauty shop was high with a 604 series, which included a 233 game. Ida Johnson had 548, Violet Whitney 534, and Lill Roos 532. . . . The Petersens have climbed into first place in the Women's Classic league, displacing the Windy City quintet.

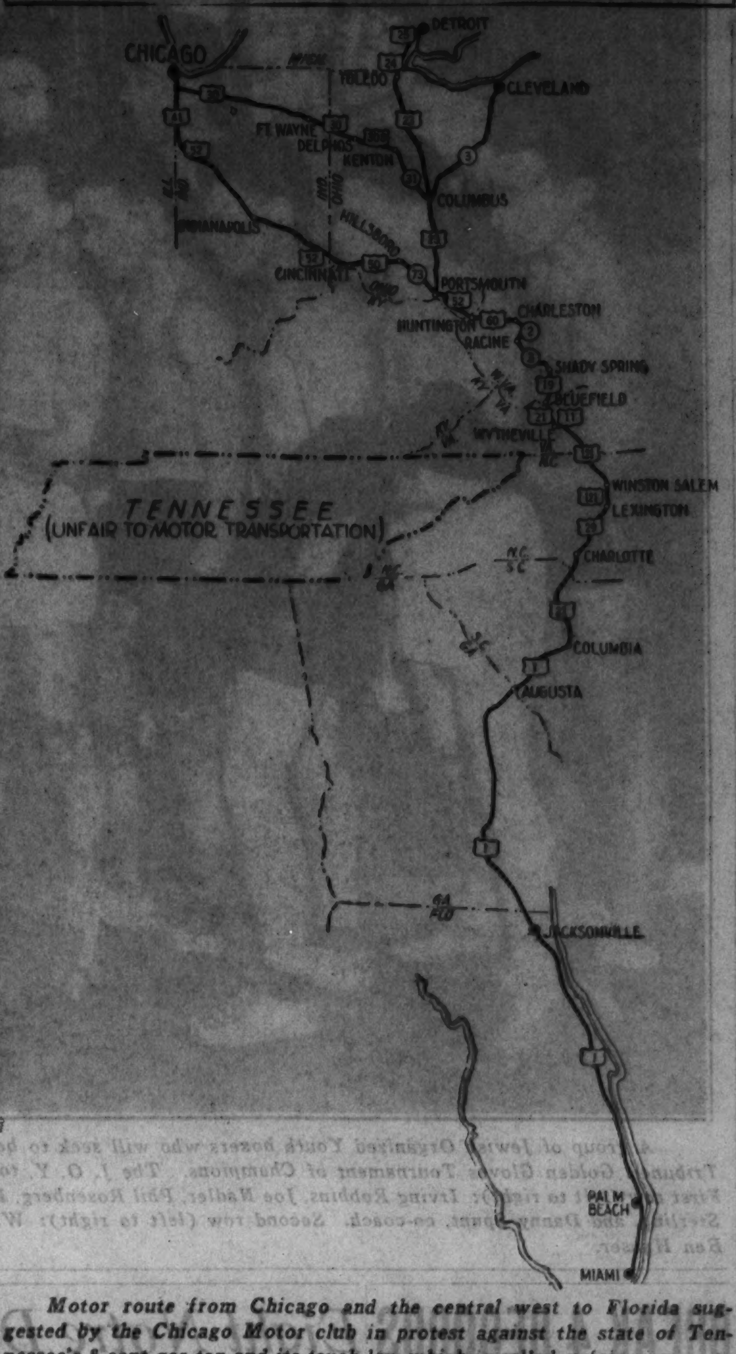
AVOIDING TENNESSEE



Motor route from Chicago and the central west to Florida suggested by the Chicago Motor club in protest against the state of Tennessee's 8 cent gas tax and its truck law which is called unfair.

Friedman to Coach Eleven at C. C. of N. Y.

New York, Feb. 3.—(AP)—Benny Friedman, former all-America quarter back at the University of Michigan and a professional star and coach since, today said a fund had been subscribed to pay his salary as head coach of football at City college and that he would be in charge of the team next fall.

Negotiations have been under way for some time to have Friedman handle the Lavender team next year, but the college had no funds to pay his salary, the former coach, Dr. Harold J. Parker, being a regular member of the faculty.

Maurice Diches, also a Michigan alumnus and football player and a trustee of City college formed a committee to underwrite Friedman's salary.

Benny did not say what his salary would be, but it was understood from other sources that it had been set at $6,500.

It is the belief of the alumni and friends subscribing to the fund that City college football will have a rebirth under Friedman and that added gate receipts probably will be sufficient to pay his salary.

Except for a brief period as "guest" coach at Yale two years ago Friedman's football career has been strictly professional since his graduation from Michigan. He was a player and coach with the New York Giants for several years and later with Brooklyn.

Tilden Wins; Cuts Vines' Tour Margin to 2 Games

New Road to Travel

BY HAL FOUST.

With Tennessee levying an exorbitant gasoline tax of 8 cents a gallon and charging private trucks a full year's license for a single crossing of the state, the Chicago Motor club yesterday recommended an alternate route for travel between the central west and Florida.

The intersectional tourist traffic is heavy in both directions through February. In March residents of the central west will be motoring north from winter homes, many with light trucks carrying household furniture or other personal belongings.

With Tennessee stretching from the mountains to the Mississippi river, most of the north to south routes pass through the state. Probably the most popular route to Florida for years has been U. S. 41 through Nashville and Chattanooga.

Another good road, however, may be found east of Tennessee. Its use might offer a pleasant change of scenery for those who are familiar with the older trails.

This detour around Tennessee, with its 8 cents gas tax and its truck license fee, is shown on the map printed on this page. According to the Chicago Motor club there is good pavement for the entire distance. The only slow driving is over four mountains of the Blue Ridge range in Virginia.

The distance over this new route from Chicago to Miami is 1,570 miles, as compared with 1,427 miles over the shortest route. In compensation for the additional 143 miles the motorist will pass through a historic and scenic section of the country, and will assert his protest against Tennessee's exactions upon highway transportation.

Illinois highway police are checking the roads in the southern part of the state for Tennessee trucks preliminary to possible retaliatory measures should Tennessee continue to force Illinois trucks on casual trips into the south to purchase Tennessee licenses. Before any arrests are made in Illinois Director Kingery of the department of public works is seeking a reciprocity agreement with the governor of Tennessee.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

PARK ON SIDEWALK.

Chicago, Jan. 24.—Is there any way outside of bombing to keep the automobiles from parking all over the sidewalk on Jeffery avenue just south of 71st street?

The city police and the south park police have been notified in regard to the automobiles parking on this sidewalk, but for the last year or more have done nothing.

Every day or night from one to twenty-five cars will park all over this sidewalk, and if you don't watch out they will run into you when you are on the sidewalk. JAMES LINDSAY.

ANOTHER COMPLAINT.

Chicago, Jan. 21.—Gosh, Mr. H. M. Groves Jr., you should not kick about your new number, this being a new deal with a new dealer you should have expected something like that, but here is what happened to me:

My application was sent in on Dec. 5, 1933, asking for my same number which I have had for several years. On Jan. 10, 1934, I called up my bank and they advised me that my check was presented for payment and paid on Jan. 6, 1934 [Where was it all the time?] I wrote to Springfield Jan. 10 about my plates, and received a letter on Jan. 15 as follows:

You are advised while I am unable to locate the application referred to from many thousands received daily, and due to the fact that all applications for 1934 registration have not been indexed, I am unable to definitly advise you. However, it is my opinion that your license plates will be received during the course of the next few days.

Now it is Jan. 21, and they have my money and I have no plates. What must I tell the cops? S. H.

THEFT RATES.

Evanston, Ill., Jan. 24.—Item 3 of THE TRIBUNE'S platform, "Overcome Crime," should have a subhead, "Stop Auto Thefts." Much is being attempted in that direction, but an opportunity that is being overlooked is that of forcing the auto manufacturers to coöperate. This can be accomplished quickly and effectively by the press in directing public attention to the facts.

Why is the theft insurance rate on one make of car 85 cents per hundred and on another $9.18? Why does theft insurance on one $600 car cost $55.08 and the same coverage on a competing $600 car cost $31.98? Any insurance man will be glad to let you compare the rates on cars in the same price class. Until Mr. Motorist shows an interest in these facts, and communicates it to the auto salesman, auto manufacturers will continue to buy the cheapest locks available. BERNARD A. SCHROEDER.

LOST LOW LICENSE.

River Forest, Ill., Jan. 22.—In reading a letter by Mr. H. M. Groves Jr., I am reminded of the treatment I received in the same regard.

I, too, have had the same low license number—16-838—for many years, always having applied for it in the latter part of November. This time, I was sent 127-884, and immediately upon receipt of same I telegraphed the secretary of state, Edward J. Hughes, refusing the new number and demanding my old one, which I was entitled to. I received no reply from this great public service office and I wrote a letter, to which again no reply was received.

This treatment on the part of our secretary of state is no encouragement to law abiding citizens who pay their taxes and license fees when due. He should realize he is dealing not with Chicago payrollers but with the intelligent people of the great state of Illinois. WILLIAM M. KNOUREK.

STATE MARKING AUTO ROADS TO STOP CONFUSION

State Highway Engineer Lieberman last week announced changes in the marking of Illinois roads. Inconsistencies of state bond issue designations are to be unraveled. State numbers are to be removed from federal routes to save drivers from the confusion of a multiplicity of signs.

At some places route markers are to be carried over new pavements so that strangers as well as those familiar with the vicinity can benefit from the new concrete. The entire scheme of the changes, while not perfect in its execution, is aimed to improve the guidance of traffic.

HUGE RAIL CAR ORDERS PLACED BY THREE ROADS

VanSweringens Will Spend $35,000,000.

BY WILLIAM YATES.

Car and equipment orders exceeding $35,000,000 were placed yesterday by three Van Sweringen lines, marking the first equipment order of real importance since the advent of the depression and the largest ever placed at any one time by this group.

JOHN J. BERNET.

A total of 12,725 freight cars, 147 passenger coaches, 12 mail and express cars, 20 locomotives and tenders make up the purchase, which is distributed among sixteen companies of the east and middle west. Announcement was made by J. J. Bernet, president of the Chesapeake and Ohio. The Nickel Plate and the Erie share in the purchase.

Orders 40,000 Tons of Rail.

At the same time the Southern Pacific announced a major rail order, 40,000 tons, which is estimated to cost $1,750,000, divided among the United States Steel, Bethlehem Steel, and Colorado Fuel and Iron companies.

In Philadelphia the Pennsylvania placed orders with the Westinghouse Airbrake company for 7,000 complete sets of air brakes, estimated to cost $1,000,000, while in Washington the Chicago and North Western railway applied to the interstate commerce commission for permission to sell $1,400,000 of 4 per cent notes to the public works administration, proceeds of which would be used to buy 25,000 tons of rail and 7,000 tons of fastenings.

Steel Mills Are Aided.

Steel companies which enjoyed a three point rise in operations last week were preparing to step up production in anticipation of further gains this week as the result of yesterday's purchases. Combined railroad orders already received or contemplated are estimated at more than $50,000,000, while other railroad projects, many of which are waiting merely for formal approval of financing arrangements by the PWA, will double this figure, steel men say.

The tremendous burst of buying contrasts with the unusually dull period of 1933, when only six steam locomotives were built in this country for domestic use, in addition to 36 electric engines and 15 of other types—the smallest for the industry in any year since 1905.

Allocations of Orders.

Contracts to build 850 hopper, 1,000 gondola, and 50 automobile cars were given the American Car and Foundry company by the Chesapeake and Ohio, while the Erie awarded the company 500 auto, 500 box cars, and 50 semi-suburban coaches; Canton Car company was allocated 500 hoppers by the C. & O.; Standard Steel Car will construct 1,150 hoppers for the C. & O. and 750 for the Erie.

Other allocations follow: Greenville Steel Car company, 750 hoppers from the Erie; Pullman Car and Manufacturing company, 650 box cars from the C. & O., and 500 box cars and 7 passenger coaches, 2 of which will be air conditioned, from the Nickel Plate; Magon Car company, 100 furniture cars from the Erie; Ralston Steel Car company, 750 hoppers from the C. & O.; Mount Vernon Car company, 100 furniture cars from the C. & O.; Pressed Steel Car corporation, 500 hoppers from the C. & O., and 750 hoppers and 25 suburban coaches from the Erie; General American Transportation company, 2,250 hoppers from the C. & O.

Orders Are Widespread.

St. Louis Car company, 15 passenger coaches and 11 mail and express cars from the C. & O., and 1 mail and express from the Nickel Plate; Bethlehem Steel corporation, 675 gondolas from the Nickel Plate; Ryan Steel Car company, 25 flat cars from the Nickel Plate, and 250 hoppers and 125 flat cars from the Erie; American Locomotive company, 15 freight engines from the Nickel Plate, Lima Locomotive company, 5 switch engines and 20 tenders from the same line; Kuhlman Car Manufacturing company, 50 suburban cars from the Erie.

Widespread increase in employment are expected from the orders, as plants which will construct the equipment are located in many cities. Among them are Canton, O.; Columbus, O.; Mount Vernon, Ill.; McKees Rocks, Pa.; East Chicago, Ind.; Hammond, Ind.; Michigan City, Ind.; Johnstown, Pa.; Pullman, Ill.; Hegewisch, Ill.; Schenectady, N. Y., and Lima, O.

The Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific is inquiring for 30 locomotives and the Lehigh Valley for five.

Public Rail Ownership Is Condemned

Public ownership ointment, suggested in Federal Railroad Coördinator Joseph B. Eastman's 20,000 word discussion of ills affecting the carriers, is poisoned by one fly—experience of the United States and other nations along these lines—says Slason Thompson, railroad economist, in the current issue of Railway News and Statistics.

That fly spoils the otherwise interesting though unconvincing narrative in which Mr. Eastman marshals the troubled history of the industry he was sworn to regulate and protect fifteen years ago when he joined the interstate commerce commission, Thompson says.

Losses Tell the Story.

"There is no need for theory or logic to tell what brought the railroads to their knees at the United States treasury to make good losses of credit with banks, insurance companies and private investors," he says. "Declines of 48.9 per cent in freight traffic and 46.3 per cent in passenger travel, resulting in a drop in receipts of 50.5 per cent from 1929 through 1933, graphically tell the story."

During this same "distressful" period, he asserts, capitalization was frozen at 22 billions of dollars, investment stagnate at 26 billion, and dividends from operating income faded from the picture.

"Is it any wonder railroad credit took to the woods which refused to conceal its financial nakedness?" Thompson asks. "The railroads carried on, however, with the commerce commission refusing constant appeals for help."

Record of Other Countries.

Citing the United States' experience in government operation of railroads during the war period, which he asserts cost the government $1,500,000,000 and the public $4,314,000,000 through increased rates and revolving funds, Mr. Thompson presents a woeful picture of the history of other nations. He reveals the following:

"Germany, the model of all state administration of utilities, marked up a deficit of $15,890,308 in 1932 while paying her 600,595 employés an average of $843 a year, against $1,464 paid American railway employés; France in 1929 lost 140 million francs on its state railways; Belgium barely keeps out of the red by paying 90,806 workers only $573 yearly; Italy, with 144,906 employés, who earn an average of $777 yearly, fails to meet operating expenses by $10,108,198.

"Hungary in 1931 lost $5,118,803, Norway in 1932 had a pay roll averaging $853 per man and a deficit of $1,368,585, and Denmark registered a deficit in the same year of $6,266,862.

Receipts Under Interest.

"Australian railroads, stewing in the same juice of theory and logic, find net receipts substantially under interest charges alone, while wages vary from $691 to $1,161 per man annually," he says. "The government owned Canadian National in Canada was transformed into a first class carrier by Sir Henry Thornton, but has an unbroken line of deficits ranging from 40 to 100 millions a year, and suffers from an ever increasing funded debt, payable for the most part in gold, at 3½ to 6⅛ per cent."

Mr. Thompson charges the Eastman argument is further broken down by an admission that "there is no aggressive sentiment in favor of public ownership and operation nor is there little effective support in public opinion." He adds that the United States government's retirement from the railroad field left a scene of desolation, scrapped equipment, and broken promises that blasted the hopes of nearly a million stockholders.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 3.—The "dishonest manipulator" and the "crooked gambler" of the stock exchange must go, and the New York Stock exchange and "all other security markets" must be brought under federal regulation and control, Ferdinand Pecora, counsel of the senate banking committee, declared tonight at the annual dinner of the real estate board of New York.

Pecora advocated exchanges operating only under federal charters. All exchanges, he emphasized, should be "compelled to conform to certain standards set up by federal legislation and buttressed by administrative control through some commission or agency." He also advocated elimination of all inactive members from the stock exchange.

Pecora, pointing out that "no reasonable person has any desire to do away with legitimate market places" for stocks and bonds, said that all that was proposed was to "make those markets serve the public, and not a small group of brokers and operators who use the exchange as a place to make fabulous profits out of gambling transactions."

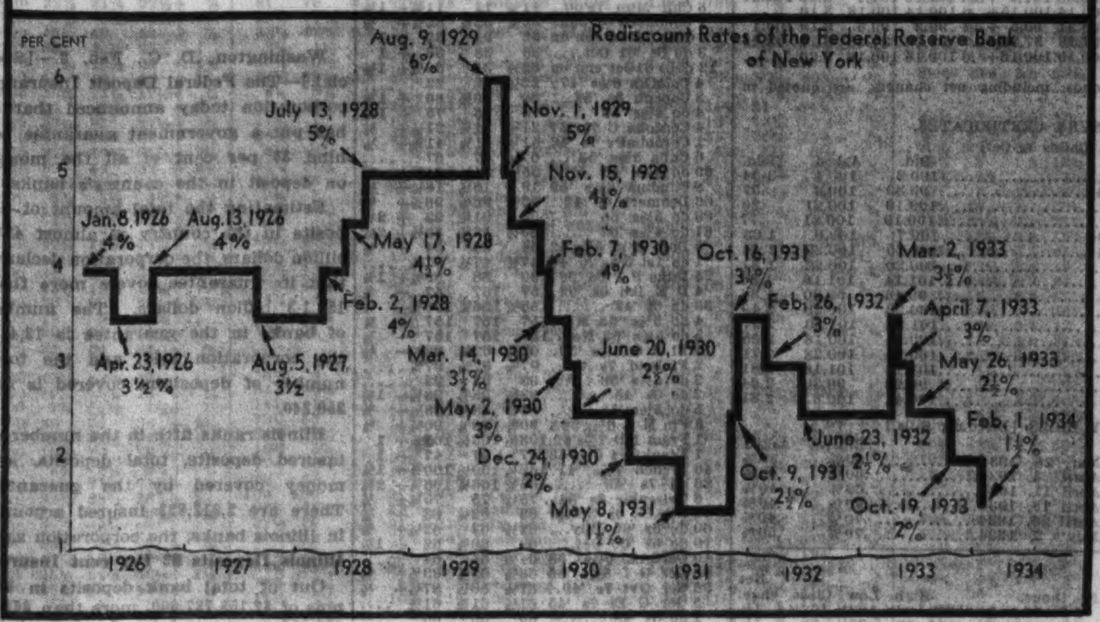
Changes in the Rediscount Rate of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York Since 1926



U. S. Exports Increase to Most Nations

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—Exports of merchandise from the United States were larger in December than in the preceding month to twenty-nine of the forty principal foreign markets, and the value of shipments increased $8,362,582 over November to a total of $192,618,809.

For the calendar year 1933, even more favorable results were shown, all but fifteen of the principal foreign markets took larger quantities of American products than in the preceding year, and the value of shipments increased $63,958,549 to a total of $1,674,974,574 for the year. Imports for 1933 were valued at $1,449,207,682, an increase of over 1932 of $126,434,134, according to revised foreign trade figures announced today by the commerce department.

Buy More of 29 Countries.

The value of United States purchases from abroad was larger than in 1932 except from eleven of the forty principal foreign countries selling their products here.

December imports were reduced from the value of those for November in the case of all but nineteen foreign countries. Despite smaller imports from twenty-three countries, however, the value of the month's total imports increased $4,712,766 over November to $133,217,842.

Among countries taking smaller quantities of American goods in December than in November were France, Germany, Canada, and the Philippine islands. All except the Philippines at the same time increased their exports to the United States. Canada showed a favorable balance of trade with this country amounting to more than $2,000,000 for the month.

Canada Buys Less from U. S.

Canada also was one of the few large markets for American products abroad which took less from us last year than in 1932, annual shipments to that country in the last two years being valued at $210,525,727 in 1933 and $241,351,492 in 1932. At the same time it increased its sales to the United States from $174,100,507 in 1932 to $185,124,647 last year.

The United Kingdom continued to be the best customer for American products, both in December and for the calendar year. For December Britain's imports from the United States totaled $43,878,239, compared with $33,564,225 in November, while for 1933 its purchases of American goods totaled $311,731,908, against $288,325,878 in 1932. Trade with Russia also improved over November and December, 1932.

Dollar Drops Full Cent in Gold Terms

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 3.—The wild scramble for American dollars, which characterized trading in foreign exchange markets the last few days, came to an abrupt halt today. American funds depreciated rather sharply in terms of the principal foreign currencies.

Sterling Gains Ground.

Against the British pound the dollar also lost ground, the sterling quotation moving ahead to $4.93½, an increase of 5¼ cents over yesterday's closing price.

The markets were kept in a turmoil throughout the day by feverish operations of speculators and the shifting of international balances prompted by the revision of the dollar's official gold parity.

More important, however, was the heavy bear raid which was said to be in progress against the French gold franc, the only leading world currency which has clung to gold throughout the recent trying years.

Franc futures were quoted at a discount of 4 points as a result of the desire of bear operators to take short positions in the currency.

Other Currencies Advance.

Other leading world currencies shared with the pound and franc the advance against the dollar. The Canadian dollar rallied to close at 99.18¾ cents in American funds from last night's price of 98.50 cents. The German mark moved nearly a cent to finish at 38.20 cents while the Italian lira advanced from 8.29 cents to 8.41 cents.

The price of gold in the London market was easier. The final quotation was 138 shillings 3 pence, against 139 shillings 6 pence yesterday. Approximately $5,000,000 of offerings were taken by agents believed to be acting for American interests. Based on sterling at $4.90½ the London price was equivalent to $33.91 an ounce or a spread of $1.90 from the official American price of $35 an ounce. The spread yesterday was only 19 cents an ounce.

STORE OPERATING COSTS EASE; JOB OUTLOOK BETTER

New York, Feb. 3.—(AP)—Improving conditions in the retail dry goods business prompted assurances from the controlers' congress of the National Retail Dry Goods association today of continued steady employment for the more than 600,000 employés of dry goods, department and specialty stores.

From a survey on gross margins and pay rolls in department stores in the twelve federal reserve districts, the fact was revealed that store operating costs were lower for the first time in four years.

For the three years ended with 1932 operating losses reached 6.4 per cent, the survey disclosed. By the end of 1933 the figure was reduced to 3.9 per cent.

The association report also found a "marked improvement" in gross margin in goods, the profit spread.

NRA RETRACTS STATEMENT ON UNION CONTROL

Implied Employers Rule Steel Units.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—(AP)—In reply to vigorous criticism from the steel industry, NRA retracted today a press statement implying all company unions are dominated by the employers, but stood fast on the right of the national labor board to call a worker election whenever it is satisfied a "substantial" number of employés in a plant wants it.

Further, a joint statement by Hugh S. Johnson and Donald R. Richberg, NRA general consul, said the rights of labor minorities to conduct negotiations of their own with the employer were not abridged by the latest Presidential executive order on the labor board, despite its statement that representatives elected by a majority of workers "have been thereby designated to represent all the employés . . ."

Cause of Reference.

This reference was inserted, it was indicated unofficially, to prevent either side from claiming the election unrepresentative because its adherents stayed away from the polls.

The point had caused a furore in industrial circles where fears were entertained that the order would lead to "closed shop" unionization of plants wherever the unions might show a bare majority in an election.

The NRA statement said selection of majority representatives does not restrict the legal rights of smaller groups or individuals to deal separately with the employer, but that "as a practical proposition" neither labor board nor plant management could be expected to deal with "an indefinite number of employé representatives expressing every possible variety of opinion."

Clears Way for Board.

The Presidential order was issued Friday night to clear the way for the labor board to act and obtain recognition for employés under the collective bargaining section of the industrial law, particularly in cases like the Weirton Steel company dispute. NRA's announcement of it to the press said: "The President's order is the direct result of the growing tendency on the part of industrial management to build up company unions in their plants. These unions are operated by employés representatives chosen by the employer rather than by the employés themselves."

Protests came immediately and the next night the Steel institute in New York issued a statement calling this a "flagrant misrepresentation of fact. We regard it as a violation of public trust . . ."

Answer to Protest.

Today's answer to that was:

"Insofar as the statement in the press release might be read as saying that employés' representatives in all company unions are chosen by employers it was not so intended as there is no evidence that such is the case. Nor is it true that employés if permitted to act in their own free choice, may not select a company union [meaning local plant union]. The principal purpose of the order was to insure that the choice be free—not to influence the choice between any particular form of employé organization."

Only a brief answer was made to the Steel institute's charge that the national labor board is biased, and that came from Senator Wagner, the board chairman:

"The board heard all that argument last autumn and went right on stick-

Profit Biggest Lure, Security Activity Shows

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

The chance to profit is still the compelling lure to business men that it has always been. The federal trade commission's report on security registrations, issued yesterday, covering applications in the final months of 1933, shows that enterprising business promoters were willing to go ahead under the stringent provisions of the new securities act when a fair profit prospect was in sight.

Estimated proceeds of securities offered in December under the new act were $62,542,175 on a total of 41 registrations. This was behind the November total, but ahead of October. The cumulative total for the last three months of the year was $173,455,000, representing the estimated gross proceeds from 129 issues registered under the act.

Trusts, Liquors Lead.

Securities of "investment and trading companies" and "distilling and spirituous liquor concerns" top the list in the December totals. Issues of companies in chemical and allied fields were a close third in the December figure.

It was in these fields that the best chances of profits were found. With the opening up of the liquor trade through repeal there was a chance for profits in the legitimate liquor business which had been closed up for more than a decade. With the securities markets regaining life after a period of quiet the investment and trading companies found use for new capital and brought out issues of their securities.

The bulk of offerings were in common stocks. Of the estimated total proceeds of 62½ millions in December approximately 53½ millions were raised through the sale of common shares.

In the entire manufacturing group there was an upturn in December registrations to a total of $19,241,895, compared with $17,129,800 in October and $12,276,529 in November.

Register Treasury Holdings.

Extensive registration of treasury stock was one of the features of December applications. This type of registration made up $9,375,462 of the total. Such stock had been previously authorized but had not been offered because of market conditions or because companies had no use for additional capital.

Some $3,811,660 of stock was registered by companies which they were disposing for others. This was not included in the total as it represented no new financing. This in part represents the resale of stock of distressed holders which the companies did not want dumped on the open market.

The difference between the gross and net proceeds of offerings made in the three month period was $24,012,000, or 13.8 per cent of the gross figure. This represented the amount spent in the selling and distribution of the securities. This selling cost was lower in the December offerings, amounting to 8 per cent of the gross proceeds.

PINCHOT SAYS UTILITY CHARGES ARE EXCESSIVE

New York, Feb. 3.—(AP)—Gov. Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania declared today in a radio address that public utilities have been overcharging the consumer 500 million dollars a year.

"Not all of them, but most of them have been pirates in the full sense of the word," he said. "It is high time the American people recognized that fact and took strong measures against any further robbery by these modern buccaneers."

"I believe the day of the utility domination is approaching an end," Gov. Pinchot said. "When the Tennessee Valley authority was established, a new era began for the consumers of the nation. The government stepped in."

"If the utilities will not allow regulation to work," he added, "they will force the state and federal governments to take over the gigantic electric monopoly and serve the people."

STOCKS RESUME RISE; WEEK-END TRADING HEAVY

Many Issues at New Highs for Year.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 3.—The new bull movement on the stock exchange clicked into action again today after its one-day recess and many new high prices for the last two years or longer were written into the record.

Trading was unusually brisk for a week-end session, especially in the final hour, when long strings of specialties, merchandising shares, motors, aircraft, amusement and other issues appeared on the tape at steadily advancing quotations. Net gains of 1 and 2 points were numerous and well distributed. The ticker was distanced several minutes toward the close.

Commission and wire houses reported heavy buying orders from speculators who had been on the side lines for weeks. A sudden about-face in foreign exchange rates, resulting in a slump in the dollar against both sterling and franc, provided the chief impetus for the revival of buying enthusiasm.

Steels, Rail Equipments Rise.

Prediction of increased operations in the Youngstown district during the coming week gave a spur to steel shares and the railroad equipment group continued to make capital out of the Nickel Plate's big locomotive order and prospects of equipment orders by other lines as a result of the improving outlook for the carrier systems.

Reports from the automobile manufacturing centers telling of increased employment tended to overcome what nervousness may have been occasioned by labor troubles in the industry early in the week. Both General Motors and Chrysler were bid up to new highs for the movement. Independent motor shares and those of the accessory manufacturers were turned over in large volume at increasing prices. Big scale buying in General Motors was viewed as more than ordinarily significant in view of the meeting of the directors for dividend action next Monday.

Fertilizer Issues Buoyant.

Fertilizer shares were prominent on estimates that the sales of fertilizer in eight southern states embracing the chief cotton growing secion were the largest in January for any month since 1930.

Government action on sugar to aid the industry was reflected in a strong market for American Sugar, which reached a new high for the year. Cuban, American and other issues of the group were also active and strong.

Metal shares, particularly those of the gold and silver mining groups, were bid up actively due to the international scramble for gold. U. S. Smelting rose to an all-time high and Alaska Juneau, Dome, McIntyre and American Smelting enjoyed spirited demand.

In the so-called farm stock division Montgomery Ward starred anew, adding about 2 more points to its gain of yesterday. The issue closed at 32⅞, as compared with its previous 1933-1934 high of 31¾. The company's favorable earnings are making its stock a prime favorite with the speculative fraternity. Sears-Roebuck moved up nearly a point, as also did Case Threshing Machine.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 3.—The listed bond market made a remarkable showing today, both from the standpoint of activity and price appreciation. The turnover, amounting to $17,426,000 for the two hour trading period, was the second largest on record for a Saturday, being exceeded only by that of Dec. 27, 1919.

Interest in the market seemed to have been stirred by reports that the gold rush to America was gaining momentum. It was also reported that repatriated funds were going into loans as well as stocks and that foreign capital was seeking refuge under the modified gold standard of the United States.

Average Best Since 1931.

The buying of domestic corporation bonds accounted for the major part of the activity today, although United States government foreign loans were unusually active for a Saturday. The domestic corporation issues were bid up fractionally to 8 points and CHICAGO TRIBUNE's average of forty issues carried to the highest level since Jan. 26, 1931.

Rail led in activity with many secondary loans gaining 1 to 2 or more points.

United States government long term issues climbed 1-32d to 18-32ds point to further new highs on the current movement on a turnover of $3,612,000. Yields on the long term issues now range from 3.14 to 3.49 per cent.

Big Liberty Sale.

More than $1,300,000 of the uncalled Liberty fourth 4¼ bonds sold in the advance of 6.32d point.

Leading foreign loans moved irregularly. French government bonds dipped 1⅜ to 2¼ points, Swiss government 5½s fell 1⅞, and Canadian government loans were off fractionally. German issues and most of the Belgian issues pointed slightly higher. Advances and declines in the Latin American list were about evenly balanced.

Prices were strong in the curb exchange list.

Foreign Bonds

There is one element common to all foreign government bonds. Their investment positions depend upon two factors—willingness and ability of the borrower to pay.

United States obligations of foreign governments must be paid in United States dollars. Therefore the ability to pay such obligations depends upon the ability of the foreign government to obtain American currency. It can purchase American dollars in three ways—by selling more goods and services abroad than it purchases, thereby building up foreign credit balances (paying in goods); by export of gold, or by borrowing abroad, which is merely postponing payment.

Unless the borrower is a heavy gold producer, it must eventually build up a favorable balance of trade to pay foreign debts. Continual outflow of gold without a compensating inflow otherwise must eventually deplete its gold reserves. Since the stability of a nation's currency depends upon its gold reserves, it cannot afford to permit complete exhaustion of its gold stocks.

With the collapse in prices in 1929 and the drop in international trade, coupled with drying up of international borrowings, many nations were "on the spot." Those that had a slim favorable balance of trade saw their favorable balances contracting in terms of gold because of lower prices. This was especially the case with countries that were primarily producers of raw materials.

The first step usually was to limit imports in an effort to increase the ratio between exports and imports. With all nations reducing imports, however, exports had to drop. There remained only one step—the countries locked up their gold. In other words, many abandoned the gold standard.

The treatment accorded bonds by foreign governments varies. In a number of cases, such as Chile and Peru, complete default exists. In other cases payments are deposited in the central bank in their currency in blocked accounts. In some countries, such as Hungary, these blocked accounts may be used in the country of issue.

Brazil, on the other hand, has been paying interest charges in long term notes. This is tantamount to forcing borrowers to loan their interest to the government, but apparently represents a sincere desire to afford as fair treatment as possible under the circumstances to its creditors.

Another method is payment of interest coupons in dollars based on the exchange rate of the issuer's currency (Uruguay). Germany pays a portion of the interest in American dollars and the remainder in scrip which is purchased by Germany at a discount at a price set by the German authorities.

Bonds of the Home Owners' Loan corporation were quoted yesterday at 98 bid, 99 asked.

REPORT 36% OF BANK DEPOSITS NOW GUARANTEED

Federal Plan Covers More than 15⅓ Billions.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—The Federal Deposit Insurance corporation today announced that it has put a government guarantee behind 36 per cent of all the money on deposit in the country's banks.

Estimating the total amount of deposits in the country at almost 42½ billion dollars, the corporation declared that its guarantee covers more than 15 1-3 billion dollars. The number of banks in the guarantee is 13,434, the corporation said, and the total number of depositors covered is 54,250,240.

Illinois ranks fifth in the number of insured deposits, total deposits, and money covered by the guarantee. There are 2,912,823 insured accounts in Illinois banks, the corporation said.

Illinois Deposits 32 Per cent Insured.

Out of total bank deposits in Illinois of $2,158,787,600, more than $691,433,800 is covered by the federal insurance, according to the corporation. This makes 32 per cent of the state's deposits insured, slightly less than the 36 per cent average for the country.

The federal insurance covers each account up to a limit of $2,500. All banks which are members of the federal reserve system are automatically members of the insurance corporation. In addition more than 7,000 banks not members of the federal reserve system, have been admitted to the insurance fund after being examined.

"The temporary insurance fund, which has been in operation a little more than a month," E. G. Bennett, director of the corporation, declared, "and the directors naturally are pleased with its success to date.

No Subscribing Bank Closed.

"So far, no bank which is a member of the insurance fund has closed, and, therefore, we have not had to pay out any of the corporation's fund to reimburse depositors.

"We believe that the mortality rate among our insured banks will be low. This is due to the fact that, before inauguration of the temporary fund, 5,814 banks, both federal reserve member and nonmember, were strengthened financially to a considerable degree through sale of their obligations to the Reconstruction Finance corporation."

WAIVE DEPOSITS TO REORGANIZE WEST SIDE TRUST

In the first 24 hours in which waivers were available about half a million dollars of deposits were waived in favor of reorganization of the West Side Trust and Savings bank, S. K. Stearn, secretary of the depositors' committee, announced yesterday. The committee expects to have a total of a million and a half dollars signed up by tomorrow.

Mr. Stearn criticized A. A. Mueller, chief state bank examiner under State Auditor Barrett, for refusing to give the committee the names of the 25,000 depositors of the bank. The committee reached all the persons it could without the list.

"The spontaneous response to our recommendation that waivers be signed is indicative of the fact that the 25,000 depositors of this bank wish to follow the recommendation of the RFC, the national bank examiner, and the controler of the currency at Washington," Mr. Stearn said. "They regard the action of Mr. Mueller and his superior, Mr. Barrett, as nothing less than an attempt to force upon the bank a political receiver."

BRITISH BANKER CRITICIZES U. S. RULE OF TRADE

Head of Lloyds Opposes National Planning.

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Feb. 3.—A warning against "arbitrary interference" by governments in industry was expressed by J. Beaumont Pease, chairman of the Lloyds bank, in his annual address to shareholders. The speech reflected the impatient attitude of most British bankers toward state regulation and national planning. It gained importance from the fact that the Lloyds bank is the third largest in Britain, with deposits of £365,700,000.

Mr. Pease permitted himself only one direct reference to President Roosevelt's policy when he said:

"On one side of the world old experiments are being tried out afresh as if they were new discoveries."

"Watch with Sympathy."

Other countries, he said, "watch with sympathy—unable yet to be convinced that the outcome will attain the measure of success hoped for—yet with some bewilderment the contradictory nature of the methods employed and with some anxiety as to the possible repercussion of these experiments on themselves."

But when it came to the subject of state regulation, Mr. Pease assailed indirectly almost every aspect of the Roosevelt program. He deplored the fact that "evidence of deliberate planning in industrial and financial affairs and of arbitrary interference in these matters accompanied by a large measure of restriction of personal liberty had been a feature in recent years in many other countries besides our own."

Expects More Criticism.

The present movement toward planning, he declared, was a tendency which "must be carefully watched, and doubtless will be increasingly criticized."

"In our present state of disequilibrium between production and consumption and even more, perhaps, between one productive industry and another, it is necessary that some comprehensive policy and conscious planning should be adopted," Mr. Pease admitted, "but I do not believe any government or any bureaucracy is capable of shouldering the heavy responsibility of saying how the industries of the nation should run or that those industries mean be active and prosperous when confined in a straitjacket designed not by those who must bear it but by theorists who think they have a genius for planning other peoples' clothes."

Bokum & Dingle Observe Fiftieth Anniversary

General agents, local sales forces, and policyholders of the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance company yesterday observed the fiftieth anniversary of Bokum & Dingle, local general agents, at a luncheon meeting in the Palmer house. Since formation of the agency in 1884 a total of $175,000,000 of insurance has been written on Chicagoans, the assemblage was told.

Folds-Buck Incorporated Under Illinois Statutes

The company will be headed by James R. Buck and William H. Wildes and will maintain offices at 135 South La Salle street.

SUGAR.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—(AP)—There was no change in the spot sugar market today, but, following the further advance in futures, offerings were comparatively light, with holders generally asking higher prices. However, a sale was confirmed of 30,000 bags of Puerto Rican to a local refiner due Feb. 19 at 3.30c, but no more was around in nearby positions below 3.35c. New high levels for the movement were established in the futures market where under further covering and active Cuban buying prices advanced 3 to 6 points. Realizing checked the upturn and caused partial reactions, the market closing 2 to 5 points net higher. Sales were 24,500 tons.

WOOL MARKETS

BOSTON, Mass., Feb. 3.—The market for greasy wools in Boston has been mostly very slow during the past week. Scattered sales of limited volume were reported on practically all grades of territory wools and on the medium and low grades of fleeces. Fine fleeces and Texas wools were quiet. Quotations were generally steady to firm. Spot foreign wools were inactive but steady as foreign markets were inclined to ease. Demand continued fair on several types of wools suitable for the woolen trade.

WHEAT PRICES TURN HIGHER ON BETTER DEMAND

Corn and Oats Register Fractional Gains.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Strength in commodity markets and stocks and monetary developments brought in sufficient public buying to send grain prices higher yesterday.

Wheat closed at net gains of 1 to 1⅛ cents; corn, ⅜ cent; oats, ⅜ to ½ cent; rye, ¼ to ½ cent, and barley ¾ to 1¼ cents a bushel. Cotton gained about $1 a bale, and sugar, hides, rubber, and cocoa all scored moderate advances.

May wheat closed at 92¼ to 92⅜ cents, and July at 91⅛ to 91¼ cents. Corn closed at 52½ to 52⅝ cents; oats, 38⅛ to 38¼ cents; rye, 62⅞ cents, and barley 52¾ cents.

Winnipeg wheat gained ⅛ to ¼ cent, and Liverpool was unchanged.

Interest in July Option.

July wheat here attracted more attention, with persistent buying by a leading commission house due to the unfavorable crop comments from the southwest. Near record breaking temperatures for this season of the year in parts of Kansas, Oklahoma, and eastern Colorado were regarded as unfavorable for the growing crop. Normally the outlook for the new crop starts to become a major market influence late in February or early in March, and trade comment is rapidly shifting from monetary discussions to the prospective crop.

According to a number of market observers there is now little disposition on the part of wheat traders to attempt to discount prospective monetary developments due to the inability to determine with any degree of accuracy what the effect will be on grain prices.

Expect Spring Wheat Cut.

With both the American and Canadian governments committed to reduction in wheat acreage for 1934 the trade expects a marked decrease in the spring wheat area.

Corn, oats, and rye moved erratically yesterday within relatively narrow limits. Trade was of a local character. In the last thirty days May corn has sold largely between 52 and 53 cents. The market is regarded as in a rut and in need of new influence to bring about a decided change in the price.

Receipts at terminal markets of late have not been large, but ample for requirements.

BRANFIELD BID FOR WHELAN DRUG CHAIN REJECTED

New York, Feb. 3.—(AP)—Referee in Bankruptcy Irwin Kurtz today instructed the Irving Trust company, as trustee in bankruptcy for the United Cigar Stores of America company, to reject an offer made by the Branfield corporation for the Whelan Drug Stores, a subsidiary of United Cigar Stores.

Kurtz told the trustee to coöperate with the United's reorganization committee in making a bid for the Whelan stores if Referee Oscar W. Ehrhorn, to whom the case has been referred, should insist on proceeding with the sale on Feb. 10, the deadline set for acceptance or rejection of the offer.

A representative of the Irving Trust at today's hearing told Kurtz that the Branfield corporation's cash offer of $5,179,000 would mean that creditors whose claims were allowed might receive only 35 to 39 cents on the dollar.

BRITISH PREPARE FOR TRADE WAR WITH FRANCE

Demand for Restoration of Import Quotas Refused.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 3.—An Anglo-French trade war will be declared within a few days as a result of France's refusal to restore the recently imposed import quota cuts on British goods.

The French reply to the British ultimatum threatening retaliatory duties if this country is not give equal treatment with the United States and Belgium was received in London today. Immediately experts of the board of trade and the foreign office went into a huddle to consider the contents.

Details of the reply were not disclosed, but it was regarded as thoroughly unsatisfactory.

Has No Alternative.

It was decided at today's consultations that the British government is faced with no alternative but to proceed with the policy announced by the president of the board of trade, Walter Runciman, in the house of commons Monday. Runciman then warned that if the cuts are not restored 100 per cent within ten days additional taxes will be imposed on French imports sufficient to cover the losses to British traders.

The time limit expires early next week, but it is understood that due to the change of the French government and the necessity of careful consideration in drafting the schedule of new duties action may be delayed a short time. The respite is only a matter of days, however.

Protest French Ruling.

Meanwhile the Federation of British Industries tonight sent a strong protest to the British government against the French action in forbidding the application after Feb. 5 for any further licenses in connection with the new import quotas.

The federation warns that the measure will have disastrous results on British interests and will increase the uncertainty prevailing in the last month. "The introduction of the new restriction," the federation adds, "can only have the effect of helping speculative applicants for licenses and preventing regular customers from securing supplies of British goods."

REVISE OIL CODE TO SAFEGUARD SMALL REFINERS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—(AP)—Secretary Ickes, the oil administrator, tonight announced cancellation of one section of the oil code and issuance of new regulations to assure adequate supplies of crude for small refiners, at the same time preventing excessive withdrawals of crude from storage.

Ickes also announced appointment of J. Howard Marshall, member of the petroleum administrative board, and R. Gordon Lowe, an attorney of the board, as his representatives on the board of governors and executive committee which will supervise operation of the gasoline stabilization pool provided for in the recently approved purchase agreement.

In another action he ordered a paragraph added to the code to require manufacturers of used or reclaimed oil to brand their products so as to show clearly that they were made from used oil.

COMMODITY PRICES RISE TO NEW HIGH LEVELS FOR SEASON

Commodity markets in general forged ahead last week with new high levels for the season established on cotton, rubber, and butter and egg futures. All commodities were higher for the week with the exception of hides. There was some increase in speculative interests in the markets, although the aggregate trade in grains was not large and prices as a whole held within narrow limits. ing to its work and will continue to do so."

However, there was strong evidence pointing to early reorganization of the board to increase its effectiveness. Wagner's senate duties have cut to almost nothing the time he can give the labor board, but even more serious has been the absence of other members from its sessions. Frequently industrial disputes have come up with no representative of industry present. Hearings have been conducted with William Green, president of the Federation of Labor, presiding and with none but labor members on the bench with him.

At other times when important decisions were needed, it was impossible to round up enough members to vote them.

It was expected tonight that President Roosevelt, having provided clear cut authority for the board to act, would seek to have its machinery adjusted to function properly.

Order Interpreted.

The Johnson-Richberg statement pointed out that neither the industrial act nor the President's order granted workers a right to a labor contract:

". . . the right of collective bargaining is not the right to obtain a specific contract, because a contract must be the result of an agreement, and neither employés nor employers can be compeled to enter into a specific contract. But it is to be assumed that if both employer and employés are assured that the representatives of the employés have been selected freely and without coercion to represent the desires of a majority of those affected, then any contract resulting from such collective bargaining will stabilize employment conditions and produce the most satisfactory relations possible between employer and employé."

REVEAL DETROIT BANK ASSETS EXCEED LIABILITY

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 3.—(AP)—Receivers for Detroit's two closed national banks today revealed that assets of the two institutions exceeded liabilities by $70,995,300 on Feb. 11, the last day of business before the Michigan bank holiday.

The report, authorized by the controler of the currency, was the first made public since the First National bank and Guardian National Bank of Commerce were placed in the hands of conservators last March.

After writeoffs in the First National roughly placed at $30,000,000, the report indicated, book assets totaled $468,615,208, compared with liabilities of $415,539,382. The receiver for the Guardian National said that institution had book assets of $131,132,808 and liabilities of $113,213,334.

PLAN FOR U. S. TO TAKE SILVER FOR GRAIN EXPORTS

House Coinage Committee Studies Dies Bill.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—(AP)—With the understanding that the administration wants to do something more for silver soon, the house coinage committee today outlined a broad schedule for its study of the Dies bill, under which the treasury would accept silver in payment for exported farm surpluses.

The committee adopted a special resolution to request testimony by the secretaries of agriculture and treasury; James H. Rand of the committee for the nation; Prof. George F. Warren, one of the President's monetary advisors, and George N. Peek, who heads the new organization which is trying to expand foreign markets.

Hardly had that resolution been adopted when Secretary Morgenthau wrote Representative Dies [Dem., Tex.] that he would be glad to appear before the committee.

May Accept Silver Above Market.

Dies' bill now before the committee would set up a new board which would try to dispose of American farm surpluses abroad, accepting in payment silver at not less than 10 and not more than 25 per cent above the world price. He also has introduced a measure which would broaden the present domestic silver purchasing plan by letting the treasury buy other silver it was convinced had been received in payment for American goods sold abroad.

Meanwhile other house groups continued to organize in the hope of obtaining silver legislation this session. Dies said before a bill was approved by the coinage committee it will be referred to the President, but added that "congress is determined to do something for silver."

Farm Leader Praises Plan.

Dies referred to testimony before the committee today by John A. Simpson of the Farmers' National union to the effect that the United States had lost its European market and must sell its exports elsewhere.

"Half the world uses silver" Dies said. "We can't export to that part of the world now. We've got to do something to increase their purchasing power by raising the price of silver or become a second rate nation like all the other nations that do no exporting."

Simpson praised particularly the section of the bill under which the treasury, after accepting the silver, would give silver currency to farmers in payment for the commodities they produced.

"That," he said, "puts out some real money. A lot of people have been taught to believe that paper money is fiat money. Well, that's all we've got now."

SALE OF ST. PAUL STOCK YARDS TO RAIL FAVORED

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—(AP)—An interstate commerce commission examiner recommended today that the commission approve acquisition by the Chicago Great Western railroad of the St. Paul Bridge and Terminal company and the St. Paul Union Stockyards company, but recommended that the purchase price be reduced so that earnings would average 6 per cent.

The Chicago Great Western had agreed to purchase the property of the two companies for $2,500,000. The examiner found that the value of the properties is not as great as the proposed purchase price would indicate and recommended that the price be reduced to $1,667,000.

CITIZENS' ACTION FINDS CITIZEN HASN'T CHANCE

Learns Bosses Pick Own Candidates.

John Citizen can do nothing to influence the party councils if the party bosses don't choose to be influenced, he learned from Ald. John S. Clark at the first public meeting of Citizens' Action Tuesday evening at Hyde Park Baptist church.

Ald. Clark, finance chairman of the city council, had been invited by Organizing Chairman George O. Fairweather to address the meeting as a "physician" prescribing for the ills of the body politic. He made the statement following a question from the floor asking how the public may insure that a good servant be retained in office.

He had concluded his address with the plea that the public should have confidence in their political leaders until they show that they no longer deserve it.

"The Democratic party leaders have failed to put up Miss Sears for county commissioner again. How can her supporters make their wishes felt in the party councils?" came swiftly from Mrs. Eric W. Stubbs, secretary of Action and former president of the Cook County League of Women Voters.

"Nothing Can Be Done."

Ald. Clark replied that such things will happen and that nothing much can be done about it except for such a candidate to run independently. Mrs. Stubbs asked again how the public was to make its voice heard in the party councils, pointing out that few independent candidates can be elected.

"If you're asking me how to acquire political influence, all I can say is that I inherited mine," replied Ald. Clark. "My father was alderman in my ward before I was born and I grew up into the job."

Mrs. Savilla Simons then rose to present Mrs. Sears' record on the county board as she had studied it on behalf of the Cook County League of Women Voters.

"I think Mrs. Simons has shown why Mrs. Sears was not renominated," offered Frank F. Harris of the Kenwood Improvement association. Ald. Clark left the meeting without further comment.

A movement to launch a campaign for Miss Sears' support was stemmed by Mr. Fairweather, who presented a slate of projects drawn up by the directors of Citizens' Action for approval by the meeting.

Slate of Approved Projects.

Unanimously approved they are as follows:

1. Continue the present plan of appointment of the county assessor and the two members of the board of appeals. This is to be accomplished through legislative action at the forthcoming special session of the legislature. The effect will be to minimize political interference with an administrative function.

2. Require immediate independent audited reports of the operations of the county treasurer, of the city treasurer, and of all other financial officers of the local governments. Require also reports of their activities by chief executive officers of local government.

3. Improve the electoral law, providing for a permanent registration plan, a corrupt practices act, making officials in the party system, such as ward and precinct committeemen, ineligible for elective or appointive office, and making an elected or appointed official ineligible for any other office.

4. Provide a job analysis of the various positions to be voted for in the coming primaries, in order to inform the voters as to just what will be demanded of candidates for office in those offices and so enable them to compare the candidate's qualifications with the demands to be made on him.

Public Service Consolidation.

5. Furthering of the principle of consolidation and coördination of the public services, with particular reference to the park consolidation measure soon to be voted for.

6. Furthering the adoption of the provision for a constitutional convention to be voted for in November. If approved, to secure delegates with an eye to securing the most intelligent draft of a new constitution. To participate in outlining the principles to be embodied in the constitution itself.

7. Furthering the plan for prompt adoption of a revenue amendment to the existing constitution.

Kenneth D. Leigh, as chairman of the community committee on liquor control, pointed out the presence of taverns at 57th street and Harper avenue and 55th street and Woodlawn avenue, where saloons were not tolerated in the days of Hyde Park's preprohibition aridity. He estimated that as much as $5,000 might be needed to fight the encroachment of liquor vendors in the district,

On Board of Directors.

Citizens' Action has completed its board of directors, Mr. Fairweather announced. The executive committee is composed of Mr. Fairweather, organizing chairman; L. J. Harris, vice chairman; Mrs. Stubbs, secretary; Glen Leet, executive secretary; J. V. Hays, treasurer; Mrs. Simons, Jerome Kerwin, Mr. Lehigh, Orin F. Nolting, and Earl Shilton.

The board of directors includes, besides the executive committee, Arthur Barnhart, Dr. W. E. Post, O. H. Boenicke, Gordon Ramsay, J. V. Parker, O. E. Peterson, Dr. P. M. Oliver, Miss Mary Herrick, Warren Gorrell, Miss Mary B. Gilson, H. F. Gosnell, Walter L. Gregory, Thomas J. Hair, George McKibben, Philip P. Sachs, Kenneth C. Sears, T. V. Smith, Harold F. NATION'S YOUTH TO UNITE FOR BIRTHDAY FETE

17,586 in Chicago to Participate.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

Chicago Boy Scouts, 17,586 in number and representing 730 troops scattered throughout the city, are looking forward eagerly to the movement's twenty-fourth anniversary observance which will start Thursday and continue until Feb. 14. Similar demonstrations will be held throughout the United States.

R. DOUGLAS STUART.

A feature of the celebration will be the mobilization of all Boy Scouts in America Saturday morning for the reception of President Roosevelt's special radio message with its challenge to service.

R. Douglas Stuart, widely known industrial leader and president of the Chicago council, Boy Scouts of America, who has been active as an official in the movement since its beginning back in 1910, said the coming anniversary promises to be the most interesting in the history of scouting.

President to Address Scouts.

"The week," said Mr. Stuart, "will be celebrated by troop and community Scout programs, including parents' parties, father and son banquent, mothers' parties, as well as hundreds of special church services dedicated to the Scouts. The big event will be President Roosevelt's radio broadcast from the White House to Boy Scouts next Saturday morning between the hours of 11 and 11:30 o'clock, Chicago time.

"Chicago Scouts will mobilize at more than 700 points, by individual troops, packs and ships with their leaders to listen to the broadcast, and make plans to carry out the request for service which the president will make at that time."

Mr. Stuart said it was gratifying to have witnessed the development of the Scout program in Chicago during the last 24 years. He explained that, despite the depression, membership in the movement was larger than it had ever been.

Appeals to All Boys.

"Recent years," said Mr. Stuart, "have brought the inauguration of the Sea Scout program for older boys, and the Cub program for boys from 9 to 12, thus making Scouting available for boys from 9 to 18, after which they may become leaders in the activity."

Mr. Stuart cited among scouting's strong points the fact that its program appeals to all boys and supplies camping and hiking activities particularly needed by city boys. "It solves," he said, "the leisure time problem by providing directed activities which boys may carry on in their own neighborhoods."

Chicago's cost, Mr. Stuart said, of $6 per year per Boy Scout was the lowest in the country and offered a splendid opportunity for public spirited citizens to invest in the welfare of youth.

"All will agree," said Mr. Stuart, "that one of America's major problems is to train more adequately its youth so that they shall be men and women of character—prepared for their responsibilities of participating in citizenship.

Returns Yet to be Received.

"As a great national agency supplemental to the training of the home and school and church, the Boy Scouts of America has been growing in our midst for 24 years—interesting and challenging the energies of our boys.

"The true returns to America have not yet been received. It has only been a few years since the first scouts reached their place as men in the important work and industry of the nation. As men with scout training reach posts of responsibility, the greatest returns to the nation in character and citizenship will be felt."

Mason Phelps is chairman of the executive board of the Chicago council; James B. Forgan Jr., Lawrence B. Robbins and Alfred W. Stern are vice chairman, and A. Watson Armour is treasurer.

Each Boy Scout unit in the city has been asked to select one outstanding and completely and correctly uniformed Scout or Cub or Sea Scout to represent them at Saturday morning's mobilization in the City hall chambers. Mayor Kelly, Judge John P. McGoorty, chairman of the civic service committee, and Perry A. Lint, scout executive, will address the group at 10:45 o'clock. At 11 o'clock, the President's address will be heard.

SOUTHWEST PLANS

The Southwest district executive committee has completed plans for anniversary week and also for spring training of scout leaders and the summer camp program. 65 YEARS TOGETHER

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES ORCHARD.

An "ad" in THE TRIBUNE immediately after the fire of October, 1871, brought Charles Orchard to Chicago within a week to help rebuild the devastated city. Tuesday he and Mrs. Orchard celebrated their 65th wedding anniversary at their home in Lemont.

Mr. Orchard, who, before his retirement had been in the creamery business, was attracted to Chicago from the east by the "ad" offering bricklayers $5.50 a day. In the east he had been working for $4 and the young man saw an opportunity for both profit and adventure in the west. After working on the construction of several loop buildings, he and Mrs. Orchard moved to Lemont where they have resided ever since.

The Orchards' five children, their grandchild and several old friends dined with them to celebrate the anniversary and they had a flood of telegrams and letters of congratulation from all over the country. Married in Bristol, England, whence they came to this country as bride and bridegroom, they are both 85 years old, Mr. Orchard being three weeks her senior.

W-G-N COMPLETES PLANS TO REPORT BASEBALL GAMES

Bob Elson to Make Trip to Training Camps.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

With ground hog's day safely passed baseball talk again figures prominently in the sessions of the hot stove league, for spring is not so far in the offing. And so W-G-N announces that arrangements have been completed for broadcasting all home games of the Cubs and White Sox. The contract with last year's sponsor has been renewed. Bob Elson again will report the contests and will make a trip to the training camps to get the advance dope on teams and players. The season opens April 17, a week later than usual. The practice of broadcasting crucial out of town games, initiated last year, will be repeated this season.

Bernice Taylor, W-G-N's prima donna, is considering an offer from Bohumir Kryl, the noted director, to go on a coast to coast tour as featured soloist with his symphonic band. We would like to have her turn him down.

Beg Your Pardon.

Guy Lombardo is NOT looking for a girl singer. Once more we make this announcement in response to a request from Guy who is answering around forty letters a day because of printed reports that he wants a feminine voice. The report originated with an eastern publicity bureau and was erroneous. A girl is singing with the orchestra on the Wednesday night commercial, but she is hired by the cigar sponsor. Incidentally, she fits pretty well with the Lombardo music.

* *

Kate Smith won a name from the Winnebagos at Sioux City that fits her shape. It's Homb-O-Goo-Wing-Ga and it means "Glory of the Morn." Guess the Indians think Kate's theme song is "When the Morn Comes Over the Mountain. . . . Phil Duey, Jack Fulton Jr. and Hoagy Carmichael were all in college together at the University of Indiana.

Gershwin on Air Tonight.

If you don't get to hear George Gershwin play his "Rhapsody in Blue" this afternoon at the Auditorium, where he appears with James Melton and Charles Previn's orchestra, you can catch him repeating it on the air at 6 o'clock tonight with Ted Weems. . . . Rumors persist that Enric Madriguerra and his fine tango band will succeed Richard Cole at the Palmer house. . . . The King's Jesters are in top form these winter evenings and mornings. . . . Their art is something closer than close harmony.

* *

The question of whether Fred Waring is going highbrow or Marion Talley hotcha will be answered when the two appear together on the new flivver show at 7:30 tonight. . . . A report is out that Helen Hayes will do a regular broadcast series to start before Easter. . . . Al Jolson will be back on the air with Whiteman next Thursday. . . . That's Lennie Hayton leading the Troubadours band. . . . The latest word concerning Harry Horlick is that he wants a girl at least as good as Jessica Dragonette who can sing in rhythm with his orchestra.

A Suggestion for Dorings.

Wish the Doring Sisters, best legato singers on the air, would use a more distinctive radio signature. "Blues in My Heart" is not symbolical of the best things they do. . . . Harry Sosnik, like Paul Whiteman, can pick gal singers. It was he who first gave Deane Janis a break. He also picked Adele Girard, the young daughter of the late Victor Herbert's concertmeister, who delights them at the Edgewater Beach.

A Veteran of Movieland.

This Earl Burtnett chap is a real veteran of sound pictures. Starting in with "Broadway Melody," Burtnett's orchestra did the musical accompaniment for more than 30 pictures, including Mary Pickford's "Coquette," "Puttin' on the Ritz," and "The Great Gabbo." Earl was recalling the lush days of 1928 last week. It was a whim of James Cruze that 22 bass viols were needed in a certain picture [though two was enough for recording purposes]. They were used 20 hours at $10 an hour each. Yes, $4,400. Earl is an admirer of Clyde Lucas, another veteran picture musician.

* *

Lief Erickson [not the explorer] has been signed to sing with Ted Fio-Rito on the new [old] smoothie show. Fio-Rito and his lads have just finished a movie, "Hot Air," with Ginger Rogers and Dick Powell, who will be the master of ceremonies on the new show. . . . Leopold Stokowski is in Hollywood doing some research work in the movie colony. He is directing his east coast radio activities by wire. . . . When informed by NBC that 52,700,000 persons would be listening to her, Gertrude Kappel, Metro Opera soprano, exclaimed: "It is frightening." Miss Kappel does not know that NBC sometimes exaggerates. We doubt whether there could have been a single person more than fifty million!

Gertrude Stein's Opera.

A few words concerning Gertrude Stein's curious methods may keep many listeners from dialing out when her opera "Four Saints in Three Acts" is presented over CBS at 9:30 Tuesday evening. As all Stein followers know her motto, or signature phrase, is "Rose Is a Rose Is a Rose." Well, her libretto is no easier or harder to understand than that. Here's the text from one of the choruses:

"Let Lucy Lily Lucy let Lucy Lucy
Lily
Let Lily Lily Lily let Lucy Lucy Lucy
Let Lily. Let Lucy Lily."

But then it's no worse than scat singing!

LONE RANGER WITH A LITTLE DOGEY

Here is the entire company which presents "The Lone Ranger," the western story series of broadcasts which are heard each Monday, Wednesday, and Friday night on W-G-N at 7:30 o'clock. The productions are presented with many sound effects and a brilliant musical background. Each sketch is a complete story written by James Jewel. The cast includes (left to right) in the background: Ruth Dean Rickaby as Ma Carsons, John Todd as "Tonto," the Lone Ranger's Indian companion; The Lone Ranger, Charles Livingston as Steve, Bud Yeager as Cowboy, J. Montgomery, William Flagg, Jack Lawrence as Bill Carsons. In the foreground: Elinor Flynn as Nancy Carsons, Malcolm McCoy as Jim Brandt, and Fred Reto as Sagebrush. The identity of The Lone Ranger is not disclosed. The cast will present a sketch known as "Sundown" tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock.

"LAVENDAR AND OLD LACE" NEW SERIES ON W-G-N

A new series of half-hour transcribed programs titled "Lavender and Old Lace" will be inaugurated on W-G-N on Thursday evening from 9 to 9:30. The series will also be heard on 29 other stations throughout the country.

The orchestra will be under the direction of the distinguished composer and conductor, Gustave Haenschen. The list of artists who will appear includes such well known radio stars as Frank Munn, tenor; Madelon Gist, soprano; Bertrand Hirsch, violinist; Lucien Schmit, cellist; Daniel Lieberfeld, pianist and organist; Alfredo and Gomez, piano duo, and the Fiddlers Four. The programs will be made up of old and familiar music and songs.

Mr. Haenschen, who is the musical director of World Broadcasting system, also conducts the "Album of Familiar Music" program, which is heard on an NBC network every Sunday evening.

"Washington in Midwest," Topic of W-G-N Address

Dr. James Alton James, professor of American history at Northwestern university and a trustee of the Chicago Historical society, will speak on W-G-N Friday at 4 o'clock, on "Washington in the Midwest."

Fred Allen Says

Dear Larry: We understand the Fire Chief said to Graham MacNamee at the latter's wedding: "From now on the program's going to be different, Graham." Things certainly are improving . . . two red ink companies are in receivership . . . Hollywood, I see, is going to do Shakespeare . . . I would suggest a theme song, "Did You Ever See a Midsummer Night's Dream Walking?" The Scotch radio stars are impatient to have television . . . it will save sending photographs to admirers. Admiral Byrd found little America just as he left it . . . broke all records for leaving anything on ice. Cordially,

FRED ALLEN.

EASTER SUNDAY TORNADO STORY ON 'HEADLINES'

The story of the Easter Sunday tornado disaster which destroyed a large part of Omaha on March 23, 1913, will be retold on "Headlines of Other Days" program at 9:35 tomorrow evening by Quin Ryan. More than 150 persons lost their lives in this disaster.

Edna Levine, a Chicagoan, who was living in Omaha with her mother and father at the time of the tornado, will b presented by Mr. Ryan on the program to tell her own story of the disaster.

SCALAWAGS TO LAUNCH SUNDAY SERIES TODAY

Uncle Quin's Scalawags will appear on the new schedule of programs on W-G-N starting today. The famous trio of youngsters, Donnie Dreamer, Jean and Wishbone, together with Uncle Quin, will appear at 10 o'clock each Sunday afternoon starting today, immediately after the reading of THE TRIBUNE Comics.

In this new series of half hour performances, a series of educational broadcasts have been arranged. Donnie Dreamer, the leading character, plays the part of a boy dreaming of the various stunts and experiences the average child likes to imagine with themselves as the leaders. On the program today, Donnie, Jean, and Wishbone will take their audience back to the days of Rip Van Winkle and recreate his fantastic story.

2 Hocky Games on W-G-N Schedule for This Week

Two hocky games are on the W-G-N broadcast schedule for the week. Tonight at 9:45 the final period of the Chicago Blackhawks-Boston Bruins game is to be broadcast, while on Thursday the Detroit Red Wings and Blackhawks game is to be presented at the same hour.

Powder Cleans and Whitens Teeth—as nothing else can

THERE is nothing known that will clean and polish teeth so quickly and leave them so gleaming white—as POWDER.

That is why your dentist, when cleaning your teeth, as you know—always uses powder.

As it is only the powder part of any dentifrice that cleans, a dentifrice that is ALL POWDER just naturally cleans best.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder is ALL POWDER—100% cleansing properties. This is more than twice the cleansing properties of tooth pastes.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder cleans off all stains and tartar, and polishes the teeth in a harmless and practical way that leaves them sparkling—many shades whiter. Free from all grit or pumice, it cannot possibly scratch, or injure the softest enamel.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder keeps your teeth REALLY CLEAN and clean teeth mean firm, healthy gums, freedom from pyorrhea and the least possible tooth decay.

Once you use powder you will never go back to a less scientific way of tooth cleansing. It leaves your teeth feeling so much cleaner, your mouth so refreshed, and your breath so sweet and pure.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder is not only doubly efficient, but it costs only half as much to use. Even a small package lasts twice as long as a tube of tooth paste.

DAUGHTER RESCUES MOTHER FROM THE WASHDAY BUGBEAR

[ADVERTISEMENT] [ADVERTISEMENT] [ADVERTISEMENT.]

(AN ACTUAL EXPERIENCE FROM REAL LIFE)

"Perfectly Clean and Sweet-Smelling Clothes"

MRS. JULIA WINKLE
Wilmette, Ill.

"It was nothing short of marvelous how quickly and easily I did my wash the first time I used Oxydol. Since then I have used nothing else. It is vastly superior to any other soap I've ever used in that it requires so little time and effort to obtain perfectly clean, sweet-smelling clothes."

MRS. WINKLE is another housewife whose past ideas of fast washing and white clothes have all been changed by this new laundry soap discovery.

Why don't YOU try it? No matter what soap is your present favorite, try this latest scientific discovery.

OXYDOL is made by the same people who make famous Ivory. It's the latest, improved laundry soap invention of Procter & Gamble experts. And does these things no other soap can do or has ever done.

NRA

Cuts washing time 25% to 40% in tub or machine, and thus saves many hours of labor.

Gets clothes 4 to 5 shades WHITER, by Tintometer test, than other soaps. Whiter in ONE washing than ANY other soap can get them in TWO to FOUR washings!

Yet it cannot fade or injure either color or fabric. Special elements are so blended in it as to protect colors against fading. Even cotton prints and children's dainty frocks are safe. And it's so kind to hands that you're amazed at its power to clean clothes!

It works without back-breaking rubbing. For it works by dissolving dirt. OXYDOL SOAKS dirt out in 15 minutes. So you never have to scrub and boil clothes clean.

Thick 3-inch Suds in Any Water

The new, improved OXYDOL will make thick "soft water suds" in any water, hard or soft. Without added "softener" or washing preparations. This is why:

It is specially fitted to water conditions in each district where it's sold.

Water in this district, for example, has been tested for "hardness" by expert chemists. And the OXYDOL you get here already contains just the right amount of softener to fit it.

You can see the results in the suds. OXYDOL multiplies 500 TIMES in suds! Which means at least twice as much "soap action" as from old-style soaps.

We knew it had to be better to win women from older ways. So we made it better, and now we urge you to try the new, improved OXYDOL in your own home. We promise you'll save hours of labor. You'll get clothes 4 to 5 shades whiter, without scrubbing or boiling.

You'll have no more fading colors; no "soap streaks" after ironing; no soap-bitten, red hands. And OXYDOL is economical. By actual test, a regular 25c package will do the work of 8 to 10 cakes of bar soap or 2 to 3 times as much flakes!

Accept FREE Trial

Send your name and address to Procter & Gamble, Dept. 2-2 , Box 1801, Cincinnati, Ohio, and we'll see you get a regular 10c package (enough for 2 full washings) absolutely free. Or to avoid delay—get OXYDOL today from your own grocer.

STREAKY
BY GUS EDSON
I DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO WITH THAT BOY SINCE HE WAS PUT OFF THE HOCKEY TEAM— HE JUST MOPES AROUND— WON'T EAT A THING! I'M WORRIED SICK OVER HIM—
YES, I KNOW— HE FEELS VERY BADLY ABOUT IT. I'LL GO FIND HIM AND TALK TO HIM—
STREAKY—
WHY DON'T YOU GO SEE THE COACH AND EXPLAIN — HE'LL UNDERSTAND, I'M SURE HE WILL NO— HE WOULDN'T LISTEN TO ME BEFORE —AND HE PROBABLY WOULDN'T EVEN SEE ME NOW WELL IF YOU DON'T GO TO SEE HIM I WILL!!
OH NO— NOTHING DOING! I WOULDN'T LET YOU DO THAT—JEANIE, WAIT— HEY JEANIE — COACH
WELL, WHY ARE YOU HERE— SIT DOWN MISS—
WHY, ER, THAT IS— I CAME TO EXPLAIN HOW IT WAS YOU THOUGHT I THREW THAT HOCKEY GAME A FEW WEEKS AGO—
AND IN THE NEXT BOOTH, TWO MEN WERE TALKING ABOUT HOW BUZZ SAWYER HAD BROKEN A RIB IN PRACTICE— BUT WAS GOING TO PLAY ANYWAY
THEY SAID HE DIDN'T WANT IT KNOWN AS THEY MIGHT KEEP HIM OUT OF THE GAME
—SO NATURALLY I WENT EASY ON HIM DURING THE GAME—— I DIDN'T WANT TO BE THE CAUSE OF HIS BEING HURT ANY MORE THAN HE WAS — HONEST, COACH —
'STREAKY DIDN'T TRY TO LOSE THE GAME—
FEB. 4
YOUR STORY IS VERY TOUCHING STREAKY— BUT A BIT FAR FETCHED. THE LOSING OF THAT GAME LOOKED TOO DELIBERATE. IT WOULD BE IMPOSSIBLE FOR ME TO REINSTATE YOU. GOOD DAY—
--THAT'S JUST THE KIND OF THING A KID LIKE THAT WOULD DO. THAT STORY HE TELLS-- I WONDER--

BETTER LOOK OUT_ THE SIOUX IS BAD MEDICINE!
MY PONY HAS GONE LAME BUT—I HAVE JUST THE MOUNT FOR YOU OVER THERE
THERE YOU BE, MY OLD JENNY_ NOT EXACTLY A HOSS, BUT THE NEXT BEST THING PILE ON,
I THINK YOU'D BETTER GIVE UP THAT RAID ON THE SIOUX.
SO THAT'S BROKEN-WING, YOUR NEW MAMA, HEY—
NOW, BUCK!

What Makes Skin Smooth—Wrinkle-Free?

TWO REASONS!

1 Active Oil Glands in Under Skin
2 Natural Moisture in Outer Skin

You have Two Skins. You need Two Creams—a different cream for each skin

THE APPLE TELLS THE STORY

SMOOTH—GLOSSY | SOFT—SPONGY | WRINKLED—DISCOLORED

1 At its peak, the inner and outer skin of the apple are both firm and smooth—perfect!

2 A little past its prime, the inner tissue of the apple has shrunken away from the outer skin.

READ THE STORY of the apple above!

Amazing, that your skin, too, which consists of two skins—is subject to changes like those!

But there is a way to keep it smooth . . . gloriously free from dreaded lines! That way is to give each of your two skins the different care it needs.

To Avoid Wrinkles, keep your Under Skin firm—Long before the first telltale lines begin to show on your face, changes are taking place in your under skin that will surely produce them.

Begin early to help this under skin. When its oil glands begin to fail, you can supply the oils that keep it firm and young. You need an oil cream that goes down into the under skin. That is exactly what Pond's Cold Cream does.

This delicious oil-rich cream penetrates to the very under skin, brings it just the oils it needs. Your skin feels toned, renewed—way down. Actually firmer—and fresher. Soon you can see the little lines smooth out. You feel and look years younger!

Use this satiny cream for cleansing, too. Because it goes so deep, it removes every particle of dirt and make-up—frees your pores thoroughly. No wonder it is so refreshing, invigorating!

To Correct Dryness—What to do for your Outer Skin—Here it's an entirely different need! Not oils but natural skin moisture is needed to keep this outer skin from growing rough and dry and chapped.

Pond's Vanishing Cream is made especially for the outer skin. It is greaseless. Instead of oils, it contains a marvelous substance that prevents loss of skin moisture—actually replaces lost moisture.

You can test this yourself by a single application of Pond's Vanishing Cream on dry chapped skin! The roughness is smoothed away! Your skin is pearly looking. And Pond's Vanishing Cream will keep it that way. It will hold powder and rouge smoothly for hours!

Send for the samples offered in the coupon below. Or go right out and buy yourself a small jar of each of these famous creams. In a few days begin to know the joy of what they can do for you. See your own skin growing daily clearer, smoother, lovelier!

ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Roosevelt, of Washington, though not yet 20, has started her Pond's Régime. She guards her skin's Youthful Freshness with Pond's Cold Cream for her Under Skin and Pond's Vanishing Cream for her Outer Skin.

The Countess of Warwick, one of the most admired women in British Aristocracy, keeps the transparent loveliness of her skin with Pond's Two Creams.

"Pond's Cold Cream is marvelous for bringing out the dirt from the pores. Pond's Vanishing Cream keeps my skin from getting dry and coarse and naturally holds powder perfectly."

For your Under Skin—Pond's delicious Cold Cream. Or, Pond's new Liquefying Cream if you prefer a cream that melts more rapidly into the skin.

Miss Anne Gould, lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jay Gould, describes for you the Two-Skin Treatment Society Women use

These are her own words:

"I know women who use dozens of preparations on their face. They spend hours night and morning applying all these different things to their skin. Yet they are not beautiful! Their skin looks worn-out—lifeless—long before its time. I am convinced that those women have actually hurt their skin with all that overattention!

"I believe there is a sensible basis for keeping one's skin beautiful—to find out what the skin really needs, and then give it those things in absolutely reliable preparations. This is what I do:

1 "Every Night, I cleanse my skin to its depths with a cream the whole world knows you can trust—Pond's Cold Cream. It's a delicious soft melty kind of cream that has a way of coaxing out every speck of make-up, powder, and dust from your pores. I wipe it all off with Pond's Tissues. Then I go all over face and neck with Pond's Cold Cream a second time. I pat it in to bring up the circulation. This makes any skin feel young deep down, and from inside out! Then I wipe that off, too. (Sometimes I use Pond's Liquefying Cream. It's a grand cleanser, too, and goes equally deep.)

2 "Next, Pond's Vanishing Cream for overnight. It is greaseless, light. Makes you look and feel fresh, and never soils your pillow. And smooths and softens the skin divinely. I apply it liberally over face, neck, arms and hands, and I use it all the time to keep my elbows soft and white.

3 "In the Morning, and during the day when needed, I just repeat this performance. A Pond's Cold-Cream cleansing, then Pond's Vanishing Cream. This last is the grandest foundation cream ever. It makes your skin so smooth. And it holds powder amazingly. There isn't any simpler, surer way of caring for skin than with these Two wonderful Creams."

Raymond J. Mura, N. J.: "Made $12.00 the first three hours." Albert V. Moyer, Pa.: "I made from $10.00 to $20.00 clear profit a day." G. V. Budaus, Tex., tripled his former income of $20.00 a week and cleared $55.00 to $65.00 a week. These exceptional earnings show the amazing possibilities of my plan.

We want men who will have at least a six months' program, who will work for smaller money to start with if they can be making a good income, based on their greater knowledge of this business, six months from now. If you will come with this permanency of idea in your mind, you will see how much better you will do at the end of the second six months.

We want family men who have made up their minds to get into something that will become better, and will provide all the comforts their families need. We don't care what your past work was if you are ambitious, and if you will learn this business the way it can be learned—by steady work. WINTER TURNS FAMOUS BLUE DANUBE WHITE

This Should Settle Arguments

HOG PRICES RISE $1 IN 8 DAYS ON FEDERAL BUYING

Lambs Also Gain Sharply to Top of $9.65.

Hogs and lambs led a spectacular rise in the livestock market during the week. Cattle were slower on the upgrade, but all species on final sessions were in higher price brackets. Top hogs soared $1 in eight days.

The meager hog supply offered yesterday cleared quickly at the high quotations established Friday. The top and general average prices held at $4.50 and $4, respectively. Tops in the east reached $4.90.

Including the processing tax of $1.50 per cwt., top hogs are costing packers 80 per cent more than a year ago and 100 per cent over the 54 year low in December, 1932. Farmers say that cattle and hogs are nearer to paying out at the current production costs than they have been for many months. Producers have for weeks been liquidating light hogs and pigs, claiming they needed $4.50 for hogs to bring the market in line with the price they could obtain for their corn on loans from the government.

Federal Buying Main Factor.

Federal buying was primarily the cause of the sudden spurt in hog prices last week. The government threw orders for 10,000 additional hogs a day on the market when prices threatened to break severely as a result of the processing tax increase. At the same time there was a drop in receipts and buyers were hard pressed to fill the orders for the relief corporation. During the week approximately 135,000 hogs were bought by the government at all points.

Lambs soared to a top of $9.65 during the week, the highest February price in four years. The average price of slaughter lambs for the week at $8.90 was highest since May, 1931. Old sheep are at the highest winter levels in four years.

Cattle Improve Least.

Cattle showed the least improvement. The average price of beef steers, however, at $5.50 stood highest since last October, and was 11 per cent above a year ago. It was learned yesterday that the relief corporation will again be in the market for canner cows tomorrow. The new order is for a total of 68,000 head which will be bought at the rate of 3,400 daily, five days a week for the next four weeks. In the four weeks' buying program ended last week packers bought a total of 46,000 cows for the relief corporation.

COTTON HITS NEW HIGH LEVELS; BUYING ACTIVE

Buying of cotton was more aggresive yesterday and prices advanced to new high levels on the present upturn. At the top, prices were about $1 higher, with the close around the best figures. Profit taking sales were well absorbed.

Sales of cotton goods for the first three weeks in January exceeded production by 200,000,000 yards, it was reported yesterday. Unfilled orders are the highest since July. This is a better situation than the high point in 1929.

Closing trades on futures in Chicago were 16 to 21 points net higher, with other markets up 15 to 19 points. Spots in New Orleans advanced 20 points, or $1 a bale, to 11.75 cents; New York, 15 points to 11.95; Houston, 15 points to 11.60, and Galveston, 15 points to 11.65. Prices:

LARD RISES AFTER EARLY LAG; BELLIES ADVANCED

Trading in lard and meats was limited early yesterday, but later the advance in grains and cotton brought in buying orders. Lard futures were 2½ to 5 cents higher on the active trading months. Cash lard, regular, held at $5.80, or the same as on Friday, while loose lard advanced 5 cents to $5.12½, the same as for leaf lard, which was unchanged.

Cash bellies advanced 12½ cents to a level of $7.12½, while futures were 7½ to 10 cents higher on new contracts.

Shipments of lard for the week were 4,787,000 pounds, compared with 3,425,000 pounds the previous week and 1,753,000 pounds last year. This was said to be largely old business as new buying was only moderate. Prices:

THE TOUGHER THE JOB
THE BETTER
WE LIKE IT!

NOTHING exhilarates our information experts like a really tough job. You should have seen their eyes glow when, some time ago, we got a letter asking for no less than eight utterly different pieces of information. What was the name of the school superintendent in a small town in Illinois? Was there a magazine devoted to real estate in Florida? Was there an association promoting the interests of Mexico? And so on and on.

Two days later we had the information on its way to our inquirer. It just goes to show you that you can't be too harsh with us for feeling a bit chesty now and then.

Giving information, no matter how varied or voluminous, isn't the only thing we can do for you. Oh, no. Try us the next time you're taking a long auto trip and you're not so sure about the best routes. We'll pick 'em for you. In 1933 we did this for more than 28,000 motorists. We go to no end of pains to see that you don't get lost—no matter how far you're driving.

Last year we performed more than 1,450,000 services for the public. More than 1,000,000 of these services were free. Call us up or come in and see us, the next time you think we can be of assistance to you. That's what we're here for.

Canned Milk Is Magic Basis of Tasty Desserts

When Caramelized, This Food Is Nourishing and Temptingly Rich.

BY MARY MEADE.

A WAVE of the magic wand, and lo! Any one of a hundred taste-teasing desserts tumble out inside of ten minutes! And, if you dare to play the skeptic, prove it for yourself. Let the magic wand be a can opener, and with it perform upon the source of all these hustling desserts, a can of sweetened, condensed milk.

All you need, in addition, are a few tips on means and manners, and a scattering of assorted extras in the way, perhaps, of a lemon, an egg or so, some crackers or cake, and a bit of fruit or chocolate. All aboard? Then buckle on the apron and we're off!

From Healthy Cows.

You're at least on speaking terms with this thick sweet milk, of course. It comes, as a rule, in only one size cans at your retail grocer's, and each tin surrounds 1 1-3 cups of milk. This milk is something like its first cousin, evaporated milk, but sweeter. It's made from milk contributed by well fed and healthy bossies. This milk has had over half of its water removed and pure sugar added. If you want to invite it back into almost its original form, add to the contents of the can three and a half cups of water. What you have achieved is the equivalent of fresh, whole milk, plus sugar.

But bring on the 10 minute desserts! First asking for a debut comes:

BAKELESS LEMON PUDDING.
1 1-3 cups [1 can] sweetened condensed milk
Juice of 1 lemon
1¼ cups crumbled graham crackers
2 eggs, well beaten.

Put all together the condensed milk, lemon juice and eggs. At first the mixture will be thin, then, as the lemon grows intimate with the milk, you'll find it quickly thickening. When thick, fold in the cracker crumbs, and turn neatly into sherbet glasses. Serve this as is, or dash the top with whipped cream and a nutmeat or two. If time allows, chill before serving.

Use for Dried Cake.

But, maybe what's worrying you just now is what in tunket to do with the plain, dried cake the crowd couldn't handle before it staled. Yes? Then seize ten minutes before dinner and whip together:

FROSTED GRAPE PUDDING.
Layer of plain dry cake
1½ cups grape juice
½ cup lemon juice

Arrange the layer of cake in a serving dish and over it pour evenly the grape juice, allowing it to stand until absorbed. Meanwhile, stir the lemon juice into the condensed milk and blend until it thickens. When both parts of the pudding are ready, pour the custard over the cake, chill, and cut in squares to serve. You see, there's the advantage in these dishes, of cornering the creamy goodness of whipped cream with little of its fattening qualities.

Caramelizing the Milk.

But now let's take a tack to leeward and try a bit of caramelizing. It's a trick which sweetened evaporated milk does to perfection. And, since so many recipes call for the caramelized milk, a lot of canny meal managers are now caramelizing several cans at once all in one kettle, then storing it away for future use. Here's how to caramelize sweetened condensed milk:

Duck one or more unopened cans of condensed milk into a kettle of boiling water and continue to boil for three hours, carefully keeping the cans well covered with water. Take out and chill, then use, or store for future need. Or, if you are the happy owner of a pressure cooker, caramelize the milk in its can at 15 pounds pressure for 50 minutes. There's a slight trick, also, to taking this smooth caramel pudding from the can. It's done this way. After chilling, warm the can by dipping it in hot water for a minute. Now punch a hole in the bottom and remove the top with a can opener, cutting below the edge of the rim, starting at the seam. Turn out the pudding onto a platter and slice with a knife dipped in hot water. Serve each slice with a topping of whipped or plain cream.

It has a straight skirt, a fitted jacket, a silk blouse and scarf, and a vest of wool. ● Center: Maggy Rouff uses a new material to make this suit—wool alpaca. She fashions the blouse of satin. A ruffled jabot of the material borders the skirt. The belt, revers, collar, and cuffs of the jacket are also of satin. The suit without the coat is shown at the rear. ● At right: Three views of a tweed suit by Mainbocher. The skirt and vest make a jumper that is over a blouse and skirt of crepe de chine. LATEST SNAPSHOTS FROM PARIS

Schiaparelli's fur called ondatre, which is shaggy and silvery, is the smartest and newest sports fur. Half the Famous Forty wear it. It is as flattering and silvery as silver fox.

Evening slippers made of kid with pretty stamped-in patterns of gold, silver, or platinum are the latest.

Long scarves of taffeta, or stiff faille silk with the ends striped in rainbow tones of velvet, are a Worth novelty. They tie in a big bow under the chin.

Spring to See Them Paraded Everywhere

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—(Special.)—Suits are engaged by the Paris style moguls to repeat their winter triumphs in spring, 1934. New tailleurs are being groomed and made ready to replace the fur-trimmed jacket and skirt of the snowbound months of January and February.

The suit will keep its place, too, at the head of the new categories into which it intrenched itself this winter: that is, dinner and evening clothes styles. Schiaparelli's quilted silk dinner suits were a hit this season, and Mainbocher's ankle length suits of wool garnished with fur and satin blouses, too. The cape that made a fourth piece to Schiaparelli's suits is called again to make a fourth in spring suit fashions.

Jumper Motif In.

Four pieces to a suit will be quite common in spring. The suit with a vest making the fourth piece was strong this winter and in spring styles it is getting along famously. The fur vest for early spring, worn with a heavy satin suit, is a Worth entry. Patou's cunning shrunken vests that don't make the waistline and so show their printed silk blouses at top and bottom are chic variants of the suit and vest fashion of winter.

Mainbocher has a new way of adding a vest to his spring sports suits. He cuts it in one piece with the skirt, making a sort of sleeveless jumper dress that is worn over a silk blouse; and that is topped by a suit jacket.

Spangled Suits Tailored.

Suits for early spring will look tailored, even when they're spangled all over and worn for formal evening. They will have varied jackets, from hip length to three-quarters, and will be fitted and also straight and beltless. Most of them have straight skirts, but look out for the suit with its skirt flared to the front when spring really comes.

Suits will be made of sleek wools, of tweed, and of silk and satin. Real sports suits can be just a little bit noisy and made of checkered material, plaid stripes, etc.

From Lame to Cotton.

Blouses would fill a book. They are going to be the controlling factor in deciding whether your suit is dressy or practical. The simple suit of sleek wool can be a lot of things in your life. You can wear it with a lamé blouse and make it dressy. You can wear it with a gay waist of striped necktie satin or of rustling taffeta. You will want a blouse of pastel colored jersey.

Pastel blouses may also be dressy when they're made of lace, as Callot Sœurs do them. Blouses of men's shirting cottons are on tap in Paris to wear with simple suits of the runabout kind. Worth's handkerchief linen shirtwaists that are crossbarred with two colors are intriguing items in blouse fashions.

Scarves Done in Satin.

Scarves are inseparable from the suit mode. Spangled and lamé scarves for dressy wear, gaudy chenille and taffeta scarves are worn a lot in Paris. Augustabernard puts scarves of pastel pink jersey on rough tweed suits that have pastel pink wool jersey blouses. Striped satin scarves are a feature of the Mainbocher collection. Printed silk and patterned wool scarves are all over Paris, and lots of them have some metal thread pattern in their weave.

Fur scarves will, of course, be worn, as usual, and the scarf of fox fur, worked to look like anything but a simple skin with head and tail in place, will undoubtedly be first on the list of furs to go with tailored suits. At the moment the fox scarf made of beige, gray, and other light colors seems to menace the supremacy of the silver fox. Fox made into a big ring and thrown back over the shoulders is a popular scarf here. Lanvin uses it.

Black-and-White Reasserts Its Claim to Chic

By Rhea Seeger.

BLACK and white, the most dramatic combination you can wear, the most soul satisfying contrast ever evolved. It's equally effective in the swank of a clinging evening gown knowingly outlined with snowy white, in the crisp refreshing frills that descend down the facade of a sleek afternoon dress, or in the prim and effective white tailored trifles that decorate casual tweeds and wools fashioned into interesting street costumes.

Try as you may, you simply cannot resist black and white or white with black. True, you rebel perhaps twice a season and try the charm of other combinations, but the clever clothes hound snuggles into a black frock frosted with white with an appreciative sigh of relief. Nothing is so subtle, nothing so smart as the age old get-together of clear sparkling white with black.

They're Charming for Street Wear in Spring.

The new spring collections are featuring this contrast splendidly . . . from slim new street suits and three piece costumes of thin or not so thin black wool, super-smart one piece affairs, clever new two piece costumes also of midnight black with snowy white, to mysterious long filmy black "sheers" for dinner and dancing and stately shiny black satins combined with Grecian draperies of white at the top.

Four more than interesting and individual "black and white" combinations have been sketched from a collection featured in a smart boulevard shop. Three are afternoon dresses that can be worn for street without a coat later in the season. The fourth model is one of the newer black sheers sketched at the upper left . . . its very deceptive simplicity is hard to copy . . . fashioned by a wizard, the long, fluttering silhouette is perfection! The yoke is made of soft chiffon, white roses forming a square outline. This is the perfect dress for double duty, for dinner, theater, and late dancing.

Cat's Whiskers Adorn Somber Neckline.

White rick-rack braid of the narrowest width edges the ruched hipline trimming and the shoulder seams and tiny bow tie of this one piece dress illustrated in the center . . . a frock to be avoided by plump shoppers who know better than to accent already visible hiplines with such a daring treatment. It's demure, different, and can go places all day long.

Upper right . . . white soutache braid has been revived . . . it goes merrily around and around this dress from the shoulder to the hipline . . . it's doubly effective because of its extreme simplicity.

Fine Furnishings Add Beauty, Charm to Dolls' Houses

DOLLS may entertain in the greatest style these days. There is not one item of furniture that is not to be found to appoint the rooms of modern doll houses. Juvenile housekeepers may take pride in their homes, for furniture may be had to fill every room, no matter how spacious the dwelling.

Living room furniture comes upholstered in any number of fabrics; in fact, the same materials which are used to cover the suites of adult homes. There are grand pianos, too, and tall and gracious clocks to dominate the nice corner near the hall. Diminutive tables come decked out with tray, decanter, and glasses. Low chairs and hassocks are made for the snug places near the fireplace, as well as hooked rugs, hand made, to spread on the earth. One astonishing item is a silver sconce, ready for flowers, to hang on the wall.

Bathrooms are not overlooked, either, and they're in the latest mode. Tubs are "tile" and have showers attached. There are also tiny mirrors for above wash bowls. Bath stools are another useful article for the comfort of dolls.

And, for doll kitcheneering there is nothing missing. The refrigerators are stupendous, except for the fact that they don't keep anything cold! But they look like the real thing. And "electric" toasters for the breakfast nook are nice.

Electric appliances for children run the gamut of household needs, especially modern households. There are dishwashers, mangles, washing machines, and toasters.

Plymouth Women Knit Garments in Jail Quarters

WOMEN employed in Plymouth, Mass., under the Civil Works administration to do knitting for the poor, will do it in jail. They have committed no crime, but the town selectmen decided the jail was the most available place for working quarters.

ANCIENT CONTRASTS THAT STILL STARTLE

Turkish Deaf Mutes Want Army Service

ISTANBUL. — (AP) — Turkish deaf mutes are joining the parade of military enthusiasts who have been much in evidence in Turkey since the republic's tenth anniversary.

Calling the campaign of Turkish women to be admitted to regular military service a challenge to themselves, the deaf mutes met here in convention and petitioned the government to enroll them in obligatory military service the same as all other Turkish men.

HOLLYWOOD LIKES PANSY PURPLE

HOLLYWOOD fillips to fashion: Jean Harlow thinks that pansy purple is God's gift to platinum blondes and, being as platinum as it is possible to be, she has strong ideas on the subject. One of her most dramatic gowns is a sheath in pansy purple velvet, with elbow length sleeves of chinchilla, no less.

Joan Crawford likes trick makeups. One of her newest ideas for evening is fingernails, toenails, and lipstick, all in the same vivid shade, worn with a black frock and much cut out evening sandals.

Madge Evans goes for shorts, as all the tennis players in warmer climates do, but hers are knitted. They're pearl gray, worn with gray and blue polo shirt.

Lupe Velez is knocking lookers-on for loops with a bathing suit of crimson striped in red, the brief trousers topped by a brassiere, cut all in one piece. Braided straps cross the bare back and actually "anchor" on the bodice in front with silver anchor clips.

Shoe Shining Stands Acquire New Graces

SHOE shining stands will no longer lurk in basements and closets. The new models are swank enough to do bedroom and bath proud. They're small triangular cabinets mounted on legs [with rubber feet] and done in black and white and the softest pastel green with a stencil design on each side.

The top is a footrest with a wedge at the strategic spot where the heel begins to keep the shoe firmly in place against the onslaughts of the brush.

A FRIEND IN NEED

Elderly People Find the Misfortunes of Life Especially Difficult; Any Service You May Offer Is Appreciated.

By Sally Joy Brown.

MISFORTUNE is our stock in trade, and we're pretty well used to poverty, illness and numerous other complications of life. Most cases can be adjusted to fit into one groove or another, and given the proper assistance. But occasionally we come in contact with a situation which makes us feel utterly helpless and, consequently, hopeless.

It is in the interests of such a problem that we depart from an established precedent today.

Unless a man or woman is fairly well balanced, and fairly well cared for, life after 60 is rather difficult. How much more so, then, for people who've lost their homes, their incomes, have survived or been deserted by their relatives, who are deprived of work by graying hair, and failing eyes or ears, or merely by years!

What are they to do? There are two obvious courses. One is securing, if possible, sufficient money to find a home in one of the numerous residences for elderly persons able to pay the required flat rate. These rates are, in many instances, extremely reasonable, but even the moderate sum necessary is often impossible for applicants. This leaves no choice but a public institution of some sort, such as was formerly known as the "poorhouse."

We have no criticism to make of such organizations, but an institution is an institution, and we can understand why a person, who formerly owned his own home and had a bank account, would rather do almost anything than become a public charge.

Such a man is Mr. X., an intelligent, well educated gentleman, with no relatives of any assistance to him. He possesses only a few little trinkets as proof of a formerly comfortable existence. He does not want charity, but he does want work and a home. Although he suffered the loss of one limb some years ago, and is past 50 years of age, he is hale and hearty and a fine gardener.

If some reader can realize how terrifying it is to be old, alone, and faced with destitution, and is willing to give this man a home and such work as he is able to do, I shall be happy to arrange an interview.

This letter speaks for itself.

"Dear Miss Brown: Will you please help me? I am 65 years old and have saved just the required fee for entrance to an old people's home. I have been accepted, as I have good references, and the organization will furnish everything with the exception of clothing. I am earning my living, at present, caring for an elderly invalid. The few dollars I earn keeps me clothed now but, when I enter the home, I will have no income. At my age, I don't need much and I am able to sew and mend my things, so they last a long time. I should be grateful if you can help me with clothing size 40. MRS B. N."

L. M. has requested an easy chair of some sort for his wife, who is tubercular. He is out of work and receiving relief, and is unable to provide a comfortable chair for her. Can you help him?

"Dear Miss Brown: I am writing to ask if you could help us secure old felt hats to be remodeled, or hat molds for the work. I have a class of unemployed women, and we should be happy to utilize such materials." "MRS. W. C."

From an organization doing fine work among the underprivileged boys in this city: "Could you help us in securing some wall show cases? We can use almost any size, but 6 feet high, by 6 feet in length, would be a good size. The boys make many interesting things in the art craft room, and it would be of advantage to exhibit them for other boys to see. J. H. W."

A case worker has requested a pair of ice skates, size 8, and some boys' books, for a 12 year old youngster whose mother is unable to provide for him, and whose father is dead. His life is rather dreary at present, and these simple articles would mean a great deal to him. If your son has outgrown his skates, won't you pass them on to R. S.?

FASHION goes backward in its flights these days. Necklines are more interesting in the back than in the front and so, often, are skirt lines, what with trains and panels. The backward trend, which is a contradiction of terms, extends even . footwear, if some of the advance notices can be believed.

In keeping with the extensive use of bows on the backs of dresses, a few of the new footwear styles include dainty little bows at the heels. We doubt very much that it will catch on, as a smart fashion, but it's coming up for consideration, in case you're interested.

In some of the styles this heel bow is of ribbon matching the dress in color, and is carried around the foot to the back through loops at the top of the slippers.

5019—Paris pattern for this shirtwaist frock is available in 14, 16, 18, and 20 year sizes and 40 inches bust measure.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Paris is simply raving over the shirtwaist frock, and every smart woman has at least one to wear now and later on in spring. The model from which our pattern, No. 5019, is made has the new and exciting front fulness, done with plaits that are stitched flat to below the hipline in the center front. These plaits make you look taller and slimmer, too, and are in the manner of Augustabernard, who makes many of her spring dresses with full length plaits at the front or back.

Flat crêpe silk, shirting silk, foulard or sheer wool can be used for this frock, and you can make it with the standing plaited collar, as shown on the larger figure, or with a shirtwaist collar, as shown in the smaller sketch. Put a narrow velvet ribbon tie around the neck and let it be in some pretty contrasting color. Get the buttons to match this tie and to contrast with your dress. If you pick dark blue, and dark blue is going to be very smart, have tie and buttons of white, bright green, or red. A brown frock goes well with the details of yellow or green, and if you want to make your dress in some lively or light shade put a dark tie and buttons on it.

If you make your collar plain, omit the plaited ruffles from the sleeves also.

CHINA CABINETS NEW IN MODERN DINING ROOMS

One Chicago store is showing three most attractive cabinets of this type. One is an antique maple with two shelves in the cabinet space underneath the open shelves. At the back of the open shelves the wood is applied in plank fashion in an unusually interesting way. A scalloped frame helps to make a picture of the interior and one can imagine how pretty colorful china or pottery would be arranged on these three upper shelves.

Another corner cupboard in nicely finished maple shows a handsome toile wallpaper lining backing the shelves. An unusual feature is a small drawer with a wooden knob placed above the lower cabinet section, with its solid wooden door. Again a scalloped frame sets off the simple beauty of the open upper shelves.

The third corner cabinet has a three drawer lowboy on which glass enclosed shelves are placed. Beneath these shelves are two small drawers for silver. A reddish finish has been given to this cupboard. Because of its nice proportions and simplicity of line, it is a remarkably good buy.

All three of these items have been reduced in price for the February sales.

GRACE AND UTILITY

There is nothing more welcome in the living room than a nest of tables. Ask the hostess who owns some! In mahogany or walnut, or painted woods, they are available at any good furniture or department store at prices that fit all purses.

When Wintry Winds Threaten Complexion Beauty, Bestow Attention on Precautionary Measures

By Antoinette Donnelly.

I'll say this for the great body of our women, they're learning the trick of seeing a cold winter through with more comfort than did women of a dozen years and more ago. They keep their skins better oiled with their cleansing creams, tissue creams, hand lotions, and so on. While I receive many inquiries about how to prevent and overcome the winter skin ills, they are not nearly so many as used to appear, proving the claim that, if the skin is kept well lubricated the rest of the year, there will be little, if any, cold weather trouble.

Of course, in the warmer months the skin supplies, for itself, a normal share of oil and lubricant, not a common enjoyment of the colder days. The exposure to cold and winds tends to dry out this natural oil. The remedy, therefore, is to supply more oil and lubricant in winter than in warmer months. An oily cream or lotion is needed by the naturally dry skinned ones. Leaving a film on overnight is advised, not merely cleansing, or massaging, and completely removing the lubricating material. Once the chapping is experienced, it is advisable to leave soap and water washing alone until the face is cleared of roughness and inordinate redness. If, after washing, the skin feels taut and drawn, it is better to stick to cold cream cleansing for a while. Or, if water must be used for its clean feeling, then make it only tepid water, never hot, and rinse in cold water. A good deal of face chapping comes from washing with very warm or hot water and applying no cold rinse afterward.

A foundation cream is simply imperative to the type of skin that chaps and becomes rough in cold weather. Also it is a good preventive.

Lipstick with a creamy base is best for the chapped lip victims. Try not to moisten lips with tongue, as it is this moisture which causes the trouble. If quite rough and chapped, the lips will have to be treated to a camphor stick, or one of the other marketed products for chapped lips.

If hands get red and rough in the cold weather, they have to be literally soaked in lotion. Before going outdoors a hand cream, that rubs into the skin, should be used. And at nights the gloves should be worn over hands richly covered with cream or lotion. Carry a supply of hand lotion to the office with you, so that you may rub it on after your repeated hand washings. There are fine preparations on the market. There's olive oil, a bit hard to rub in, but good, and a preparation made of equal parts of glycerin and spirits of camphor is an old and well tried hand remedy.

Any good, oily cream is recommended for arms and legs that chap. A few minutes massage should be granted its rubbing into the skin.

Neck and Waist Hold Attention in Style Field

By Clotilde.

THE lines of the dress, made by pattern No. 2740, are carefully designed to disguise overweight, and this dress should be very becoming to any one with a full figure. The sleeves are very pretty, and won't wear so quickly at the elbow as those that are close fitting all the way. The open part that extends beyond the top of the fitted wrist should be faced with the dress material. The upper edge of the lower bodice section and the front of the skirt, extending into a yoke over the sides and back, should have the edges clipped and turned under an even seam's width. Then, each part should be accurately pinned to the waist and skirt parts before the basting and stitching.

Navy blue printed silk crêpe with a red bow, black with white, eel-gray with dusty pink, or brown with beige are smart combinations. For dressier occasions Mexican clay, the new reddish brown shade, would be lovely.

Frock Is Suited to Misses or Matrons.

The tailored dress, made by pattern No. 3453, has slimming lines, is unusually smart looking, and is suited equally to the miss or matron. The raglan sleeves may be made long or short, and the fronts close in surplice fashion with the collar of a contrasting color, making a perfect neck finish. There is a yoke with a deep point at the center front, and this is one of the slenderizing details. The skirt preserves the straight line effect that is seen on most dresses today. Black silk crêpe, with the shawl collar of white crêpe, or a navy blue mossy crêpe, with powder blue mossy crêpe for contrast, will both be smart.

Isn't the dress, made by pattern No. 2513, an ideal design for general day wear? The soft cowl drape conceals undue bodice breadth, and the narrow tie belt adds a youthful effect. If you like, the sleeves may be lengthened with a fitted cuff, seen in the miniature view. The entire dress gives an idea of slenderness.

Designed for Woman of Heavier Build.

Pattern No. 2798 was designed especially for women of heavier build, and you can see at a glance how becoming it would be and how much the graceful jabot revers and crossover closing will add to slenderness. This dress, too, may have long or short sleeves.

A gray-green diagonal striped angora woolen made this stunning dress, and the trimming on the collar and sleeves was a toning of green woolen. The slight draping at the waistline is a graceful detail, and if you choose rather stunning buttons they will add greatly to the dress.

Suits Maintain Their Place in the New Paris Fashions

silk blouses. His trim suit with these details and a shrunken vest is shown at the left. Some smart women will start the spring in this suit. The original has a jacket and skirt of pale beige sleek woolen. The skirt is a straight four gore model with narrow bias bands o: the material set over the seams. The jacket is wrist length and fitted at the waistline. It also is trimmed with bias bands along the seams and at the sides.

The vest, made of the beige wool, is bolero size and buttons down the front on brown bone buttons. A brown and white printed silk blouse is worn under it. The blouse tucks into the skirt and has elbow length sleeves and a high draped neckline. At the waistline there is a beige leather belt with a gold buckle. The jacket, as you can see in the background, has two rows of brown buttons part way down the center back seam, which is covered by a bias band. There is a printed silk scarf.

Tweed Suit Brightened by Blouse of Old Rose.

In the center front is a sketch of a suit which Maggy Rouff has done in pastel blue wool alpaca. It is trimmed with bands of brown stitching. The skirt has a box plait panel at the front and back, the plaits released at the knees below stitching crosses. The sleeves of the hip length jacket are cut bishop fashion, with wide blue cuffs and narrow brown satin cuffs. The revers and collar are brown satin, and so is the short sleeved shirtwaist shown above.

At the right is a picture of Mainbocher's tweed suit. The original is made of mixed brown and gray tweed, with a gored skirt and vest in one. The revers of the vest button on the shoulders. A short sleeved blouse of old rose crêpe de chine goes under this, and there is also a second skirt, perfectly plain, with patch hip pockets. The tweed skirt and vest jumper slips off by unbuttoning the double breasted closing, and the old rose waist and skirt can be worn with the straight, hip length tweed jacket shown in the upper background. This jacket has a simulated yoke made of bands in a bow arrangement at the back along the shoulders.

Windows Provide Frames for Mode of Colored Glass

IT'S interesting to learn how many women are using one or more windows, nowadays, to display pieces of colored glass and small treasures in porcelain. Glass or wooden shelves are placed inside the window frame at varying heights, from the sill to the top of the window, and on them are arranged vases, or jars, or pitchers, or bowls of ruby, blue, green, or amber glass. Some people become avid collectors of Mexican hand made glassware, others of exquisite Venetian bottles, jars, or dishes.

In one of the loop stores is a display that is sure to yield a piece or two to an interesting collection. The glass is deep, vivid blue, and one may choose a pair of candlesticks, a pedestal fruit dish, or a low fruit bowl, a pitcher, a huge, round jar, vases, and other items. Placed advantageously in a window, with the light streaming through it, this blue glass is "a thing of beauty and a joy forever."

Russian Women Get Along Without Evening Gowns

WOMEN in Russia pay little attention to fashion. They go directly to the theater or opera from work and wear the same clothes.

Brimmed Hats, Turbans or Berets Are Good Companions for Knit Ensemble

HOW TO ORDER.

If you wish instructions for making the three spring hats illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Jean Macdonald, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago. Be sure to send name and address with your letters.

Amateur May Crochet Her Own Spring Bonnet of Cotton, Wool, or Linen.

By Jean Macdonald.

HATS are a favorite topic of conversation during the months of February and March when the long winter season has just about worn our spirits down to nothing. It is then that a new spring bonnet will not be denied.

Each spring brings forth its new millinery styles just as the quota of styles and materials for knitting and crochet work are brought forth.

Brims, berets, and turbans to suit one's individuality are shown in the new mode in today's illustrations. Materials with which to knit or crochet these correct hats to be worn with a knitted ensemble are a pleasure to select. Striking new linens and cottons are on the market as well as smart new wools.

Leaf green linen makes the good looking turban shown at the left. For those who can wear this type of hat the draping of a turban has endless possibilities. It may be crocheted quickly, easily, and inexpensively at home. The purple crocheted vagabond type is another one of those hats that is becoming and flattering to many women. It is trimmed with a tailored purple grosgrain ribbon. The rust colored beret at top, too, may be made of linen or cotton, but it is knitted. It is done in a clever new fashion on 4 sock needles.

Boucle Scarfs Thwart Chill Breezes of Spring

BOUCLE scarfs in cheery stripes are the things to use at the necks of spring coats and suits. Their lightweight wool offers just that protection against the chill winds of March that silk doesn't achieve.

The New Brother

By Eleanor Jewett.

Mother has been to a baby sale
And bought us a baby, pink and new—
We wanted twins, but she thought that one,
One at a time would have to do.

We asked for a baby with eyes of brown
And hair that would really and truly curl;
We didn't much care what else it had,
Or whether it was a boy or girl.

The baby she bought had no hair at all!
And instead of brown its eyes are blue—
And yet we love him and wouldn't exchange,
And if you could see him, no more would you!

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

Modern Coiffure Derives Inspiration from Cap of Motor Car, and It Has Graceful, Fluid Line to Flatter Hair.

By Eleanor Nangle.

WE found a brand, spanking new Chicago hair style again the other day, a coiffure most appropriately called "Streamline." And you'd never guess the inspiration for it. Nothing less than a motor cap!

Doris Lee Leeds, manager of the beauty shop in one of our State street stores, designed and named it. The idea was born of admiration for the sculptured, yet fluid lines of the headdress on the little metal head that served as motor cap for her own car.

Transferring this flowing line of beauty from metal to the human head was not without its difficulties, but when Mrs. Leeds, assisted by one of her hair stylists, finally worked it out, it retained every bit of its enviable beauty. It is an ideal style, as the photograph testifies, for the mature woman of distinction—and it is perfect for gray hair.

The coiffure is an achievement in more ways than one. It is the answer to the prayer of the mature woman for something distinctive, something flattering, and something new. It has no coyness; even the ringlets fall perfectly into the picture.

In her experiments with this hair style Mrs. Leeds found that it is best adapted to the type of hair that has body. Too soft, too fine hair does not lend itself well to the sculptured effect. But it is simple to achieve with hair that is naturally a bit coarse, or permanent waved, or naturally curly. In the latter case it is sometimes advisable to lacquer the hair at the top to preserve the necessary smooth line across the crown of the head.

It's been a motor minded week in Chicago—but who'd have dreamed that the "streamline" influence, so long definitly seen in fashions and in figures, would extend even unto the hair on our heads? And isn't it stunning?

Busy Executives Find New Clock Neat and Practical

AN attractive and useful clock for the busy executive is the clock that tells the time in direct numerals. It tells the time as it reads on time tables, cost sheets, and appointment cards: "Two-fifteen," "eight-twenty," "six-thirty." It will also save money. In fact, it will more than pay for itself in timing long distance telephone calls.

This remarkable clock has a rich brown metal case with bronze inlays and a face plate of genuine oxidized bronze with bright, decorative engravings. It has a sealed in, full synchronous motor. No winding, oiling, regulating, or cleaning is necessary. The mechanism is protected against dust by a glass dial.

The size of this clock is perfect for either a desk or for at home. It is 6½ inches high, 4⅛ inches wide, and 3⅝ inches deep.

It is reasonably priced, and will make an ideal gift for an active business man.

THIS WEEK IN THE GARDEN

Monday, Feb. 5.

The home gardener who has sufficient room should plan an orchard. Standard trees may be used on large areas, but the dwarf trees which require only a 12 foot space may be used on the smaller lot. Plan to have a few raspberries, currants, blackberries, a gooseberry bush or two, and strawberries.

The Jerusalem cherry plants that are now loaded with fruits must be kept moist and in a cool atmosphere if possible. Save a few fruits for seeds, as they germinate very readily.

Tuesday, Feb. 6.

Keep all plants that are received in flower from the florist in a moist condition.

The Christmas cactus flowering now should not get excess water or the buds may drop. The amaryllis bulbs are showing activity, the flower stalk appearing on many bulbs. Remove a part of the soil from old potted plants and replace with fresh earth and water.

Wednesday, Feb. 7.

If the trees in the yard are poor due to gas, smoke, or from any cause due to soil, try the tree of heaven [Ailanthus glandulosus] for it thrives despite adverse conditions.

Another small tree is the thornless honeysuckle [Gleditsia tiacanthos inermis]. It has fine foliage which gives it a light, airy effect. Pruning may be undertaken on all warm days.

Thursday, Feb. 8.

Rhubarb may be forced underneath the benches of the greenhouse or in the cellar of the home. Take good sized clumps from the garden and plant in light soil. The roots should be frozen before forcing, and after planting kept in darkness to obtain length of leafstalk.

Spray shrubs for scale. Ask the supply house for prepared lime-sulphur mixture and follow directions. Transplant the pansy seedlings into flats or boxes, give all the light possible and keep the soil moist. Later these should be placed in a frame out of doors.

Friday, Feb. 9.

Start a lily bulb for indoor use. The yellow calla provides unique flowers. The Saintpaulia or African violet is fine for the terrarium or for the window garden.

It is not too late to mulch outdoor stock. Use strawy material. Evergreen cuttings of mature wood may be rooted in the greenhouse. Make each cutting 5 to 7 inches long, place close together in sand in boxes, and keep in a cool temperature. The cuts will callous in 20 to 25 days, depending on the kind.

Saturday, Feb. 10.

Look over the roots, bulbs, or plants that are stored in the cool, dry basement or cellar. A too damp situation is likely to cause rot among dahlia tubers. Clean the gladiolus corms. Save the bulbils [small bulbs which are attached to the mother bulb]. Do not overpot the amaryllis bulbs or they will not flower well. These plants grow through the summer and rest during the winter. The hardy amaryllis is known as Lycoris aquamigera. Do not over water the succulents or desert plants.

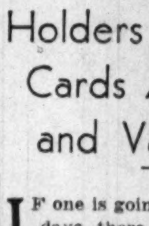
THE STAMP COLLECTOR

By Richard McP. Cabeen

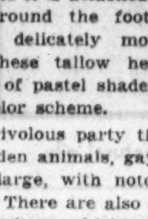
Mr. Cabeen will be glad to answer questions concerning stamps. A stamped, self-addressed envelope should be inclosed if personal reply is desired. Questions concerning value of stamps cannot be answered.

Each year Switzerland brings out a set of semi-postal stamps inscribed "Pro Juventute" (for children) which are sold at a slight increase in value with the excess going to charity. The 1933 set is shown—the three examples of charm represent the elements of the Swiss nation—a girl from Vaud for the French, one from Berne for the German, and one from Ticino for the Italian. The fourth stamp honors Pere Gregoire Girard a noted educator of the Franciscan order.

NEARLY all governments try to record the amount of mail matter sent out by the various departments and for this purpose provide either stamps of special design or envelopes with proper notification to the postal authorities insuring free transmission through the mails. Official or "penalty" envelopes, as they are called in the United States, are an invitation to stuff the mail bags, for there is no check whatever of the postal charges involved. From 1873 until 1884 the United States had a series of distinctive stamps for each government department, which came to be known to collectors as "department" stamps.

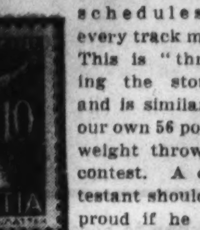


The majority of foreign official stamps bear some combination of the words "official" or "service," or of the letters "O. S." [on service], etc., but others bear inscriptions which are puzzling to the beginner. Among the words which indicate official character for stamps are these: Amtlicher Verkehr, franco bollo di stato, frei durch ablösung, hivatalos, O. B., pjonustu, and tjenste. Two such service stamps are illustrated.



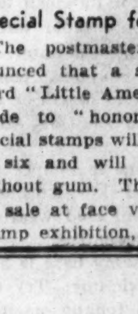
Copernicus Honored.

Nicolaus Copernicus, Kopernik to his countrymen, was honored by a series of two special stamps in 1923. Like other pioneers in scientific fields, this great astronomer did not at once convert the world to his theories; and concerning him Martin Luther wrote: "I am now advertised that a new astrologer is risen who presumeth to prove that the earth moveth and goeth about—not the firmament, the sun and the moon, not the stars—like as when one sitteth in a coach, or in a ship that is moved, thinketh he sitteth still and resteth; but the earth and trees do move and run themselves. Thus it goeth we give up ourselves to our own foolish fancies and conceits. This fool will turn the whole art of astronomy upside down; but the scripture showeth and teacheth another lesson, when Joshua commandeth the sun to stand still and not the earth."



Sporting Section.

This Swiss "Pro Juventute" stamp of 1932 shows a contest which is not found on the schedules of every track meet. This is "throwing the stone" and is similar to our own 56 pound weight throwing contest. A contestant should be proud if he can toss this Essex pebble more than two rods. It has been said that Henry VIII. excelled in such heroic contests as throwing the stone and the hammer and "casting the barre."



Special Stamp for Collectors.

The postmaster general has announced that a special issue of the Byrd "Little America" stamp will be made to "honor" collectors. The special stamps will be printed in sheets of six and will be imperforate and without gum. They are to be placed on sale at face value at the national stamp exhibition, which is being held in New York from Feb. 10 to 18, and will later be sold at the Philatelic agency in Washington. It has not taken very long for the new postmaster general to learn that collectors pay the engraving expense for all new stamps and donate enough more to offset the overhead of the department.

Alphonso XIII.

Alphonso XIII. of Spain, who lost his throne in the revolutions of 1931, appears on all of the regular postal issues of that country from 1889 to the end of his reign. The design shown here was adopted in 1900 and shows him at 13 or 14 years of age.

Holders for Place Cards Are Clever and Varied Today

IF one is going to have a party these days there is no need to worry about finding appropriate place card holders to dress up the table. No matter what the theme of the affair, there is a style of holder to suit the occasion.

With St. Valentine's day in the offing, one store is showing holders made completely of tallow, except for a bow of tulle on each. The base is heart shaped. On to it is attached the slender candle, around the foot of which there are delicately molded flower groups. These tallow hearts come in a variety of pastel shades to suit any table's color scheme.

For the more frivolous party there are grotesque wooden animals, gay in color and rather large, with notches to hold the cards. There are also cordial glasses of cellophane which would decorate the scene of any joyful gathering.

For parties with a winter motif there are to be seen, in the same store, graceful figures of papier mache. They skate and ski on bases of white, heavy paper. Not only are they graceful, but they are astonishingly lifelike.

FOLLOWING THIS MEDICAL ADVICE OFTEN ENDS ALL BOWEL WORRIES

If you want to
. . . relieve constipation gently and safely
. . . take the exact dose suited to your need
. . . avoid danger of bowel strain
—use a liquid laxative

Can constipation be safely relieved? "Yes!" say medical men. "Yes!" say thousands who have followed their advice and know.

You are not apt to cure your constipation with salts, pills and tablets, or with any habit-forming cathartic. But you can safely relieve this condition by gentle regulation with a suitable liquid laxative.

Why Hospitals use a liquid laxative

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can be thus controlled to suit your individual need. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The right dose of the right liquid laxative will bring a perfect movement, with no discomfort at the time, or afterward.

The wrong use of harsh cathartics may often do more harm than good.

In buying any laxative, read the label. If it contains doubtful drugs, don't take it. If you don't know what is in it, don't chance it. The contents of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is stated plainly on the label; fresh herbs, pure pepsin, active senna.

Its very taste tells you Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is wholesome. A delightful taste, and delightful action. Safe for expectant mothers, and children. All druggists have it, ready for use, in big bottles

Prove for Yourself by Making this Test

This test has proved to many men and women that their trouble was not "weak bowels," but strong cathartics

First: select a properly prepared liquid laxative. Second: take the dose you find suited to your system. Third: gradually reduce the dose until bowels are moving of their own accord.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has the highest standing among liquid laxatives, and is the one generally used. Any druggist has it.

Unhappy Home Often Cause of Child's Stealing

If Babyhood Is Past, the Fault Usually Rises from Inner Dissatisfactions.

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

WHY do children steal? a correspondent's postscript asks. The answer would, or rather could, fill a book.

"Why do children steal?" might mean different things coming from different mothers. The mother whose little boy of 3 takes an apple out of the basket at the grocer's and carries it away might be asking the question—yet when she calls his action stealing she is making a mistake. The baby boy has still to learn the distinction between mine and thine.

The mother whose little girl of 5 takes a bright hair ribbon at a friend's house and brings it home might be asking the question "Why do children steal?" but if she did she would be mistaken in using the term stealing, because the child's moral sense is not awakened at five. She may know she has done something she shouldn't, but that is because she has felt the force of disapproval and perhaps been scolded or punished for such actions. She knows the difference between mine and thine by that name— but she has not the moral angle o.. - To her it is not "wrong" —it is just disapproved of.

Small Child Does Not Really Steal.

But when a mother has a boy of 10 and asks "Why does my child steal?" she is being accurate in her language, because by that time a child does know he is committing an offense against society in stealing—he does know that he is doing something wrong.

Now considering these things, the question "Why do children steal?" has a different color and we can see that it must have different answers. Children steal for so many reasons.

The little child who is free to take an apple from his mother's basket in the kitchen has to be gradually taught why he cannot take whatever looks jolly and inviting at the grocer's. It is a gradual education and he absorbs it easily. He need not be scolded or punished or told he is naughty in the process, for the small child takes things because he doesn't know any better.

One Lad Stole to Make Up for His Loneliness.

Now we come to the more serious forms of stealing—where the boy or girl is older and where the fault has become habitual. One of the obvious causes is poverty and bad companionship. A boy may be drawn into a gang which gets its excitement out of thefts, and he may be afraid to stand up against their ridicule when he refuses to join their plans. But often such stealing has been traced to something awry in a child's home life—just as other behavior may be.

An interesting example of how this works out is shown in a case that came to one of the clinics. The story of it would be more interesting if told in detail, but there is not space for that here today. Briefly it reads like this:

The mother of the boy—a lad of 9 or 10—brought him to the clinic in great distress because of his habitual stealing. Much questioning and putting of facts together revealed this sequence of events: When the boy was quite small his father had died. There had been smooth going until the boy was 5, when his mother married again, a man who was not interested in him. The little boy began taking money then which he always spent on candy—a solace for his loss of interest and affection.

After a while the mother and the man separated — and the stealing stopped. Two years later she began to live with another man—and the stealing started again. The mother discovered it and was much distressed. She pleaded with the boy, scolded him, and punished him. This had no effect. The stealing continued because it brought with it so much attention—it forced his mother's solicitude. Then the second man faded out of the picture and the stealing ceased. When three years later a third man came into the woman's life the stealing began once again and it was then that the mother visited the clinic.

Now it may be that all this will seem too general to you if you are dealing with these "taking ways," as some one has called them. But the understanding of fundamentals is much more truly helpful to a mother and father than a multitude of practical details, because it develops in them an ability not only to deal with the trouble at hand—which in this case is stealing—but with other troubles that may arise.

"Hats Off" Is Motto of Men's Social Conduct

Questions pertaining to etiquette and correct social behavior will gladly be answered by Miss Helen Bartlett. For a personal reply, enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your letter.

By Helen Bartlett.

THE men and boys of the community seem to be coming in for their share of instruction lately and we hope they won't take offense. First we tell them what hat to wear and then when and how to raise it. But as long as some seem to need it, we'll keep up our nagging ways. Perhaps a few members of the clan will be convinced that it really is a charming gesture of courtesy, and a few others realize that a listless languid motion of a finger in the general direction of the hat brim is a lazy rendition of the custom and not a little disrespectful.

A gentleman extends, accepts, and acknowledges all courtesies, great or trivial, by a gracious raising of the hat, a stiff hat by the brim, a soft felt hat by the crown. And we mean raised, not simply tilted or tipped. Here are some of the specific instances when the hat raising custom is observed.

Hat Is Lifted When Lady Addresses You.

Need we remind you that your hat should be raised whenever and wherever a woman addresses you, indoors or out; when you meet and perhaps stop to talk to a woman on the street. You needn't keep your head uncovered all the time you are speaking to the woman and endanger your health by exposure to the elements, but you must raise the hat momentarily. If, perchance, you are walking with a woman and meet another man or woman who is known to either or both, raise your hat.

You must do the same when you greet an elderly man of your acquaintance, a superior in rank or office, a clergyman, or a gentleman of distinction. And again when the American flag is carried by, when the national anthem is played, when the cortége of a national figure passes, and in the presence of the dead.

Gesture Goes with Bus Courtesies.

The man who rises to give his seat in the bus, "L," street car, or whatever to a woman who is standing he lifts his hat. If this woman has a male escort he, also, raises his hat in acknowledgment.

Removing the hat when entering an elevator is a much mooted question. Some say yes and some say no. We'll be on the safe side and compromise. In the elevator of a public building or office building, it is not necessary unless a woman of your acquaintance is present with whom you exchange greetings and possibly casual conversation. In a club, hotel, residential hotel, or apartment building elevator, however, the hat should be removed.

Remember, it is the little courtesies quite as much as the great ones which help to complete the portrait of the perfect gentleman.

Hats off!

New Tableware Adds Charm to Child's Meals

Cheerful Dishes Brighten Drab but Healthful Diets for the Youngsters.

MAKING hygienic diets appealing to the children is always a domestic problem, but much is being done, these days, to help perplexed and distracted mothers along in this matter.

One of the Chicago stores is showing a novel line of children's tableware that would make the most pernickety youngsters yearn to come to the daily meals or children's parties, no matter what the menu.

The sets come in china or in nonbreakable composition. The former are in pastel shades and come in a variety of arrangements. Some consist of plate, cereal bowl and cup, and others have plates, cups and saucers. The chinaware is, almost without exception, decorated with figures and designs. Various animals, fairy tale characters and cheerful scenery are all used.

One type of composition set is in the duplex style, that is, the large plate is divided, by means of grooves, into sections which are meant to serve for different foods. These come in high and pastel shades. Cups and bowls, matching, also come made of this ware.

Attractive tables may be set, complemented with fine linen, napkin rings and place card holders. The linen is of a lovely quality and has borders and corner figures depicting subjects dear to the heart of childhood. Napkin rings are animals and doll-like statuettes, with the china ring attached. The place cards are several inches high, are of wood, and are highly colored, with a groove to contain the card.

Another item to brighten the lives of the youngsters is the juvenile bookend. These are large, of china or wood, and have statuettes or animals in grotesque and comical positions.

Radios Take on New Functions as Furniture

Appear as End Tables, Night Stands, and Book Troughs; Some Portable.

"What's Wrong with Your Rooms?" a booklet by Edith Weigle, giving simple solutions to complicated problems of furniture arrangement, is 5 cents by mail. Three cents at the Tribune Public Service Office, One South Dearborn street. "Making the Most of the Dincite" is 3 cents by mail, 2 cents at the Public Service Office.

By Edith Weigle.

SO important has the radio become as a constant source of entertainment that now an extra set in the bedroom is no longer an occasion for comment. One of the most popular small models is one which requires no ground and contains its own aerial. It may be used permanently in one bedroom or carried to a temporary sickroom or elsewhere without any bother, for all that is necessary to tune in on any program you may want to hear is to plug it into any electric socket, either alternating or direct current being used.

Such a practical and good looking instrument is shown in the picture today. What a far cry this small cabinet is from the massive, bulky piece of furniture made to house the radio a few years ago! Manufacturers have made great strides in styling and construction. In 1934 there is a model that fits neatly into practically any period room, as well as into one that, like Topsy, "just growed."

One Chicago department store shows a most interesting line of radios made by a well known Grand Rapids furniture company. They are handsome pieces in themselves and give excellent performances as well. In this collection there is a mahogany Duncan Phyffe table model, the radio being concealed in the table; a good looking mahogany Chippendale style, an elaborate Louis XV. one in satin wood with painted decorations in soft green, a walnut type in Queen Anne style, another in the manner of William and Mary furniture, a smart Directoire type and a small but sturdy early English model that is intended for a room done in oak.

Radios Done in Maple to Match Early American Room.

All these cabinets are carefully styled pieces of furniture: End tables, night stands, book trough tables, lamp stands, consoles, etc. They are exactly the thing the decorators were clamoring for a few years ago.

Even the early American maple room may now have a radio in keeping. One eastern manufacturer is making small, neat cabinets in maple, ready to hold any average sized radio and styled for the living room and the bedroom.

And modern furnishings, too, may add an appropriate radio. One of the largest manufacturers offers a new superheterodyne chest model, light and compact, styled in the modern manner and set off by pleasing contrasts in natural wood finishes. The two tone blended finish is hand rubbed with wax. The dimensions are: 9½ inches in height, 13⅝ inches in width, and 8 1-6 inches in depth, which make it ideal for the book shelf, reading table, or for limited spaces.

One Comes Disguised as a Mantle Clock.

An 18th century English mantle clock was the inspiration for another table type of radio. The case is most good looking with an arched top and a bronze handle attached to it. It harmonizes beautifully with mahogany furniture of the colonial or federal styles and may be placed on a small pedestal table where it is as much a thing of beauty as a mechanical contrivance. Its measurements are 18 11-16 inches in height, 14½ inches in width, and 10¼ inches in depth.

All the radios mentioned today are made by well known companies and may be bought in Chicago stores and throughout the country.

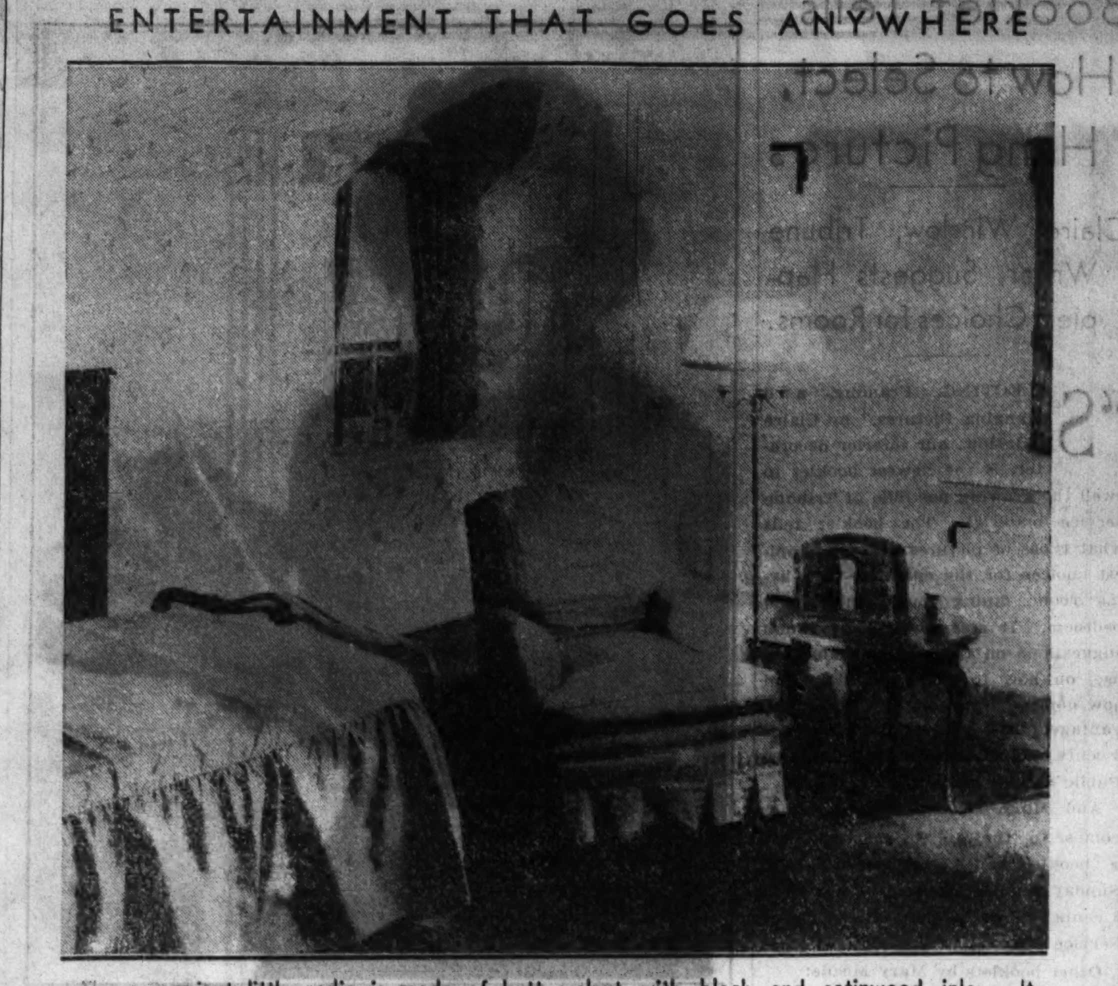
ENTERTAINMENT THAT GOES ANYWHERE



This convenient little radio is made of butt walnut with black and satinwood inlay. It illustrates the present day trend which is toward well styled pieces of cabinet work, as well as finely toned mechanical instruments. Radios nowadays are good looking pieces of furniture.

Comfort Is First Requisite of a Good Mattress

Springs, Likewise, Should Coax the Sleeper to Complete Relaxation.

If you are wondering just how to change the face of your furniture, woodwork, walls, or floor, write to Louise Bargelt, Home Builders' editor, Chicago Tribune, for the booklets: "Refinishing Furniture," 5 cents, 7 cents by mail; "Refinishing Woodwork," 5 cents, 7 cents by mail; "Refinishing Walls, Floors, Ceilings," 5 cents, 7 cents by mail; also "The Fine Art of Laundering," 3 cents by mail, 2 cents at Public Service office.

By Louise Bargelt.

IT sometimes takes more than a clear conscience to lure Morpheus, the god of sleep, to our side. It takes good sleeping equipment!

No bed is one whit better than its mattress and springs. Good looks and restful sleep are not synonymous. The most luxurious of down filled quilts will not keep us relaxed and sleeping peacefully if our springs sag and our mattresses have developed a hard and lumpy quality.

We spend some eight out of every twenty-four hours in bed and these sleeping hours affect mightily how we feel and act when we are awake.

We often hear some one say: "I don't believe I stirred an inch all night." But experts tell us that if we are an average person we do stir about quite a bit in our slumber! We toss and change our positions in the course of one night from twenty to sixty times.

Appearance of Mattress May Be Deceitful.

In this way many parts of our body are given a chance to rest, and our muscles are relieved from the onerous necessity of remaining in one position too long. Proper sleeping equipment, if we select it carefully and well, can actually coöperate with the body. Good springs will determine somewhat what positions the sleeper can most easily assume, while good mattresses will determine in like measure the ease with which the quieting, healthful positions can be maintained.

There are certain details to keep in mind as mental stock for reference when it comes to the purchase of any new sleeping equipment.

There are mattresses and springs available of excellent make at a reasonable cost. But appearances can be deceitful; an article may look all right but what its "innards" are no one knows excepting by reliance on the good name of the store one buys it from or on the manufacturer behind it. In many stores and shops a purchaser can be shown the construction of the springs and mattress he is considering if he will ask. He can see of what material the padding is, whether hair, felt, or padded, and how tied and inclosed the spring coils are if he is buying that type of spring. In brief, he can make sure he is getting his money's worth.

Box springs, well manufactured, are deservedly popular. They can be heavily padded, tied, and, inclosed, and practically any type of mattress may be used with them. There are also the same type of springs which are uncovered and cost less. If you are choosing a felt or hair mattress or a kapok select a box spring of softer construction than when you are going to use an innerspring.

Coil Springs Give Well to Weight of the Body.

Open coil springs give well to the weight of the body and their coils often number close to a hundred for a full size bed. If a person is heavy there are the double deck open coil springs of heavy gauge wire. There are also flat springs manufactured but the box springs and open coil springs are far in the lead in popularity.

When it comes to mattresses the inner spring should be mentioned first because of its great vogue. A high per cent of all the mattresses sold at the present time are of this type. The buyer may choose a multiple unit inner spring or a one piece spring unit.

With the multiple unit there are literally hundreds of small coil springs, each inclosed in a separate fabric pocket and firmly tied together. These springs are covered with heavy upholstery and quilted padding. Some types show side ventilators to afford free circulation of air.

Some States Make Poor Bedding Illegal

With the one piece spring unit of inner spring mattresses the coils are less numerous and heavier. They are not individually incased but the whole spring is covered with some sort of sturdy sheeting and then upholstered. Where from 400 to 800 and 900 coils are employed in the multiple type, a much less number is used with the one spring unit. This latter can now be had in quite inexpensive models.

There are other fine makes of mattresses and springs at varying prices. A good name is one of the best guides. Indeed the good name of shop or store or manufacturer is more important than one might imagine since many inferior and some times even old unsterilized materials are put into extremely cheap mattresses.

Good bedding factories take every precaution to manufacture goods which are healthful and sanitary and which live up to the claims made for them. That there are factories which have not always done this however, is proved by the fact that many states have passed laws to control and regulate bedding production and even to force manufacturers in some instances to ticket their goods to show whether a mattress is padded with new material or old material.

Horsehair Mattresses May Be Frequently Renovated.

There are mattresses of horsehair which many people still prefer to any other type for their comfort and durability. Mattresses of this sort may be "modernized" every four or five years by the "picking" process. This is merely to separate and loosen the strands. Some horsehair mattresses have a greater proportion of tail than mane hair in them—an excellent mattress to buy if the person to sleep on it is heavy. If the person is thin he may like a mattress with more mane hair in it than tail hair.

Less expensive mattresses are often given some hog hair along with the horse hair. An all hog hair mattress isn't entirely satisfactory as it can get hard and lumpy.

If one has a cotton mattress which is of fine grade cotton, it will be felted—and a good mattress. A less expensive cotton mattress will not have all of the best sort of cotton in it but will have cheaper cotton mixed with the good. However, if it is properly felted, it is a good type of low cost, durable mattress. A wholly cotton mattress of the cheapest sort of cotton and not felted, is one of the most inferior varieties of mattress.

Covers Now Have Their Own Charms.

Kapok is also used for padding and while it is not so enduring as some, it is a good mattress to consider where cost must be reckoned with—and kept down.

Covers for mattresses grow more attractive in their pretty patterns. You can choose a sateen which is handsomely flowered or plain, or a light, happy looking damask. There should always be a substantial pad on the mattress. A washable white one is the least expensive to buy and to maintain. A mattress cover which is also washable and which buttons securely on is a good investment.

Ventilation has crept into the pillow as well as the mattress field. You can ventilate your new pillows all you wish. As for the kind of pillow, down is the best, down and feathers next, all goose feathers next, and lastly still other types of feathers which are heavier and less expensive, such as chicken, duck, etc.

Sheets Confine Their Color to Borders.

As for bed linens, we are seeming to lose our passion for colors. Or perhaps just confining it to a stop hem of the sheet instead of allowing bright hues to spread over the whole sheet. And we can be in style and have our sheets plenty large now, too. Bed ensembles we now can buy, with blankets and quilts to go together in perfect accord and harmony. Beauties they are, too, to suit any type of home—and almost any size of purse.

But again we must keep in mind that as far as our mattresses and springs go it isn't beauty that plays the major rôles. It is service—and comfort. That is what we want when we spend our money for new bedding equipment, for one good mattress and springs will last several times longer than a poor combination. Hence its purchase has a budget angle as well as a rest angle and before making any choice we should consider the purchase from every side, buying always with thoughtful deliberation as well as our allowance will permit.

IT'S INTERIORS THAT COUNT

Items to Beautify the Room in White

NEW items for rooms in which chaste white prevails are crowding the shops. One may now purchase virginal book-ends, tall and dignified looking, inset with a print of dusty brown; white ash trays trimmed with gold; calendar pads and cigaret boxes in snowy metal.

In the way of vases there are opalescent glass containers which catch and reflect the light in myriad rainbow hues. Some are gracefully shaped bowls and urns, while others imitate the funnel-like lines of the cornucopia.

Pictures Should Suit the Room They Are Hung In; Entrance Hall Ought to Have Dignified Drawings

"Selecting, Framing and Hanging Pictures," a new booklet by Claire Winslow, shows how to beautify your home with pictures; what ones to choose for entrance hall, living room, dining room, study and bedroom. It is 3 cents by mail, 2 cents at the Public Service Office, 1 S. Dearborn street. "Color Magic in Your Rooms" is 5 cents by mail, 3 cents at the Public Service Office.

By Claire Winslow.

MANY people who would like to bring more beauty into their homes by means of pictures hesitate because they do not know what ones to select nor how to hang them. They are a trifle timid, feeling there may be certain rules on the subject which they are likely to break. Or they are unfamiliar with what the market offers and do not know the great range of colored and black and white etchings, reproductions of oil paintings, water colors, prints, wood blocks, quaint silhouettes available at astonishingly low prices.

Or perhaps they are puzzled about the matter of framing. It may even be they are laboring under the delusion that "pictures are not being used any more."

Pictures are just as much a part of the cultural delights of homes as are books and music. However, if one feels no response whatever from looking at a beautiful landscape, a copy of a world famous painting, or a charming little water color, it would be foolish to hang one's walls with them.

Living Room Should Have Pictures of General Interest.

In answer to questions frequently asked about the selection and hanging of pictures we offer the following suggestions:

For the entrance hall it is customary to choose more or less impersonal subjects, for this is the most public place in the house. As a mirror is almost an essential here, one might flank it with a pair of Japanese prints in black or natural wood frames, or with two flower or bird or botany prints.

As the entire family and its friends gather in the living room, pictures of general interest are hung there. Landscapes, marines, reproductions of masterpieces, black and white and colored etchings, mezzotints may be chosen. As an oil painting, a water color, and an etching each represents a different medium in art, it is best not to hang them in close proximity to one another. They should be grouped with their own kind or hung on separate walls.

Nothing Massive or Gloomy Has a Place by One's Bed.

Years ago one saw all sorts of dismal pictures in the dining room. There was the inevitable painting of vegetables and fruits with a very dead fish in the foreground, which filled the space above the sideboard; there was a lonely stag, or a black steel engraving or two. Not so today. Now one sees light, colorful flower paintings or reproductions; colored prints of hunting scenes, or of quaint Dickens' characters. Or perhaps a panel of gorgeous silk brocade or hand blocked linen is used as a wall decoration.

Pictures for the bedroom may be of a more personal character. Here is the place for family photographs, enlarged snapshots of one's vacation days, or for delicate pastels, water colors, etc. Nothing massive, dark, or gloomy should find a resting spot on the walls. Pairs of flower prints in pure white or natural wood frames; Godey's fashion pictures and lovely color plate illustrations from 18th century French and English publications are popular subjects. These latter can be found, unframed, in the art departments of some of the large stores, in book shops, and at art dealers'.

Good Moderns May Be Had in Reproductions.

Of course, modern furniture calls for modern pictures. It is possible to get excellent color print reproductions of some of the works of Gaugin, Van Gogh, Dufy, Marie Laurencin, and others at astonishingly low prices now, and when adorned with modern frames they are the perfect accompaniment to contemporary furnishings.

Extremely simple frames are now being used on all types of pictures. Natural wood moldings are excellent on many etchings, on Japanese prints, birds and botany pictures, etc. Pure white frames are in vogue, too, and it is easy to create them at home. Simply paint your old frames white. [That is, if the colors in the picture warrant it.] Often a frame is tinted to harmonize with one of the predominating colors of the picture.

We'll be glad to answer questions on selecting, framing, and hanging pictures. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your query.

Pictures of the same or nearly the same size look best when hung in unit groups. Here one sees an interesting arrangement of framed Currier and Ives prints hung over an early American sideboard. They are all framed alike, and are charming in themselves, and most appropriate in their setting.

The Lonely, Silent Brooder Is Poison Only to Himself

By Doris Blake.

A SILENT brooder!

You're not one, we hope, for a dire fate threatens those persons who isolate themselves and brood over their troubles.

"Better go on a rampage," warns a family counsellor. "Better break up the china, break up the furniture, in a glorious emotion release orgy, than let that intense flame of hurt feelings go on gnawing at your vitals.

It Is Dangerous to Nurse Grouch.

"The most dangerous thing on earth to nurse is a grouch, a mad, a hurt, a wrong, real or fancied. If you have a genuine cause for resentment, talk it out, work it out, get it out of your system. But don't brood inwardly, sourly, bitterly. No one is hurt by this indulgence, but the victim himself or herself."

The one, against whom the grievance is held, may be totally unaware of his offense, and never will know unless you spill it out to him or her and get the atmosphere cleared up.

We'd Better Check Up on Dispositions.

Well, perhaps we're all guilty, at one time or another, of nursing the grudge, or the real or fancied wrong. Anyway, it's a habit we'd better check up on. If we find that we're given to brooding over what some one said to us, or some one did to us, we'd better watch out. It appears that all we get for our pains is an ugly face, the product of an inbrooding disposition, and the threat of a permanent mental sickness.

Interests are the panacea, interests outside of the work in which one is employed. The failing is sometimes a characteristic of women in business, who permit their work to "get them," so that there is no time for diversion or other interests. With women, at least, this type of business person, and the housewife who lets the four walls close in on her, are the worst offenders. The home woman, who keeps her mind occupied as well as her hands, is not likely to fall victim to the ingrowing habit that consumes and destroys healthy emotion. The business woman, who can get out of her machine-setting of the day, and revitalize her emotions in an entirely different use of them, is bound for a longer, healthier, and more successful future in her work.

Each Person Is His Own Physician.

First, it is a matter of recognizing that brooding emotions are poison. Whether there appears to be cause for the resentment or not, it's poison to the system just the same. Then, realize that there's only one physician on earth who can heal the ravages, and that physician is you and no one else.

The trouble with most of us is that we want to dictate life on our own terms, unreasonable terms, too. Unless we get a few good knock down blows reasonably early in youth, we go on thinking that compromises must come from the other side. The inbrooders are notorious for their unwillingness to compromise with things as they are, with people as they are, and with themselves as they are.

Escape, then, from this self-centered existence is the need. Contacts are invaluable. Seeing more of people, learning more of their lives, is the thing for which to struggle. Forcing oneself to get out and make contacts becomes imperative.

Reading Is Aid in Escaping from Self.

Then reading is of immeasurable aid. Read the papers, read magazines, read books. These are easy escapes from self. Lose yourself in what you read. Don't keep the upper layer of your mind crowded with your personal grievances, nor any part of the mind. There are people who read with the eyes only. Get something out of what you're reading. Determine that, as an escape from self, you will get a better, more kindly philosophy out of books, magazines, and papers.

But get away often from the scene of your work. Get outdoors! The mere business of dressing to go out, and then going out, offers a temporary release from the ingrowing disposition. You have a patient on your hands, and you're the physician, and everything you can think of and do to get away from the "sick atmosphere" in which the personal grievance thrives, the better.

Brooding Is Cause of Sour Face and Heart.

The poisonous quality attached to the inward form of living, of which we're talking, is seen in the lethargy with which suggestions for a changed mode of doing things are met. If you can't be pursuaded to go out and meet people, or go places just to see things, to read something worth while, you may set it down that the poison has already made deep inroads in your system, that you're already a mental case, a suspicion that will ostracize you more and more.

That ill feeling you nurse isn't your husband's doing, nor your boss', nor a co-worker's, nor a sister's or brother's. It wasn't what one of these may have said or done to you that's reduced you to the difficult person you now are. It's your willingness to dwell with your troubles and disappointments that's soured your face and heart.

There's no time for such indulgence. Devote less sympathy, even though you may be in the right, though you may have been deeply wronged, for no one wants to hear your troubles. Less do they want to see the perennially troubled face.

ROSE AND PRIMROSE

By Nancy Cabot.

"ROSE AND PRIMROSE" is a good example of simplicity in floral patterns. The design is a new one, with most attractive lines and a charming decorative effect. Quilt connoisseurs are as pleased with this new block as they are with the ever popular old ones. The original of "Rose and Primrose" was appliqued in rose, yellow and light and dark green, with a touch of blue.

For a quilt pattern of this design, send five cents in stamps or coin to Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, printing your name and address clearly. Or call at the Tribune Public Service office, One South Dearborn street.

GOOD Morning:

For Greenland is Greenland and London is London and when the twain meet—as they do in this movie—pity the poor Eskimo!

I was quite a-flutter over the prospect of viewing "Man of Two Worlds," because I had been hearing so much about Francis Lederer, the Czech who, in it, makes his American cinema debut.

"What a man! What a lover!" had exulted the press notices, and reviews of his stage work in "Autumn Crocus" were most intriguing.

So—me go watch handsome Czech play noble Eskimo. (When you see the film you'll appreciate how I got like that.)

—AND—found Francis Lederer, as one Aigo, to be just a male Lupe Lupez. A beautiful, simple child of nature, happy and carefree—and a master hunter of the frozen north. Lupe never hunted in the frozen north that I know of—but skip it.

Why Eskimos Leave Home.

Eskimo dream of she. O, MUST go see. . . ! Leave wife? And baby

Miss Hepburn Changes Mind, Drops Chicago

By Charles Collins.

KATHARINE HEPBURN is an actress of many surprises. Her latest stroke of the unexpected is a sudden change of mind in regard to a suddenly announced Chicago engagement. A week ago a contract was signed for her appearance in the Erlanger theater in "The Lake" during the fortnight beginning Feb. 18. Last Friday word came from the Erlanger that the booking had been canceled.

This is a keen disappointment for the playgoers who started running toward the Erlanger with money in their hands to buy tickets shortly after the crack of dawn last Monday. Whether it is a permanent disappointment or not remains to be seen. The stage has become so erratic in the conduct of its business that its future events may be discussed only on a "when, as and if" basis.

At the moment Heppie in "The Lake" is a vanished hope for Chicago. She remains, however, the most stimulating personality of the theatrical season, and is always worth talking about. As nearly every one knows, she is the wonder girl of the year's cinema output. She made a flying start in "A Bill of Divorcement," in a rôle that started Katharine Cornell up the ladder of dramatic fame; she went into high speed in her second picture, "Christopher Strong"; she became a sensation in her third, "Morning Glory," and as Jo in "Little Women" [another old Cornell rôle, by the way] she climbed to the steps of that high cinematic throne upon which the inscrutable Garbo has been firmly perched for several years. "Little Women" is a current affair in the cinema houses, and another Hepburn film, "Spitfire," is completing and awaiting release.

Heppie Has Red Hair, Green Eyes.

This brief but blazing motion picture career, which began in October, 1932, has been recorded at length by Mae Tinée in THE TRIBUNE and by a thousand other chroniclers of Hollywood achievement. The whole world now knows that Miss Hepburn has red hair and green eyes; that she is 23 years old, 5 feet 4 inches in height, and that she weighs 110 pounds. Also that she calls Hartford, Conn., her home town, is a doctor's daughter, an alumna of Bryn Mawr college, and the wife of a Philadelphian who, until lately, was anonymous.

The story of Miss Hepburn as an actress on the legitimate stage, however, has not been told in detail. Hollywood placed her under contract when she was a player with only one hit on her record—a young Amazon in "The Warrior's Husband." This was a satirical frolic among the ancient Greeks—a modern piece in the "Lysistrata" pattern—and the Hepburn vitality, the strange, entrancing Hepburn beauty, the bold, half-boyish Hepburn manner captivated Broadway.

Stage Career of Cinema Heroine.

That was her first victory. Before "The Warrior's Husband" she had been an ambitious frequenter of the producing managers' offices, much like the girl she characterized in "Morning Glory," finding an engagement now and then, but often losing the job. She recently told a New York interviewer:

"I was something of a record holder at getting kicked out of plays. I was thrown out of 'Death Takes a Holiday,' and 'The Animal Kingdom' and 'The Big Pond' and a lot of other things."

"The Big Pond," 1928; acted briefly on tryout tour; staged by Alfred Knopf.

"These Days," 1928; minor rôle; staged by John Golden.

"Holiday," 1928; understudy to Hope Williams; staged by Arthur Hopkins.

"A Month in the Country," 1930; small part and understudy; staged by the Theater Guild.

"Art and Mrs. Bottle," 1931; important rôle in support of Jane Cowl; staged by Macgowan and Reed.

"The Animal Kingdom," 1932; rehearsed leading rôle but was dropped out of the cast.

She has not yet appeared on the Chicago stage.

B'way Critics on Their High Horses.

Her experience as an actress has been short; she cannot be expected to have the technique of a Duse or a Bernhardt. The New York critics, in rendering their verdict on "The Lake," seemed to feel that a wonder girl of the cinema ought to be a second Duse or Bernhardt to win their praise, and so they told the world that the amazing Miss Hepburn was "not yet really much of an actress."

They conceded, however, that she was a personality who commanded attention. In trying to add her up Richard Lockridge of the New York Sun testified:

"It is evident that her face is one almost impossible to forget, that she has rare bodily grace, and that all her movements are expressive. It is also obvious that the total of her attributes, i. e., the final impression she makes, is infinitely greater than can be expressed by mere addition."

BERLIN.—The world's largest open air theater, with a seating capacity of 35,000 and a stage for 2,500 actors, and part of the world's largest sports stadium, is nearing completion and will be ready for this summer's tourists. It had been planned originally to open the theater in connection with the 1936 Olympic games. Work has been pushed so that the opening ceremonies, which will be elaborate, can be held soon. With the best stage directors and actors available in the reich, the German authorities are preparing for this summer's open air festival plays in Heidelberg castle and for a series of historical plays in Marienburg castle in eastern Germany, as well as in a large number of old towns. The Heidelberg plays, in particular, are intended for the benefit of foreign visitors.

Broadway Show at the Palace; Variety Bills

"FIFTY MILLION FRENCHMEN," a musical comedy of three years ago that had a long run on Broadway but never reached Chicago, is now the stage entertainment at the Palace theater in a production under the auspices of Anatole Friedland. This piece tells a romantic story with an American newspaper man in Paris as its central figure.

The new vaudeville program at the State-Lake theater, which opens today, contains Frances White, former musical comedy star; Eddie Lambert, stage and screen comedian, assisted by Kay Whitmore; Verne Buck's stage revue, with the State-Lake ballet; Betty Jane Cooper and the Lathrop Brothers in a dancing revue; Glenn and Jenkins in "Working on the Railroad"; Ames and Arno, called "Two Social Errors," and Aussie and Czech, billed as "A Dash of Argentine."

Ted Lewis, nicknamed "the high-hatted tragedian of jazz," is the chief merrymaker on the current program of stage entertainment in the Chicago theater. His band is the focus of a show called "The Happiness Follies of 1934."

Will Mahoney, comedian who dances on a xylophone, is featured on the current vaudeville bill at the Uptown theater. Mark Fisher's orchestra; Serge Flash, Billy Severin, Ding Bell, and Harlan Hassberg are also present.

Estelle Taylor, the cinema star, leads the variety show now offered by the Marbro theater. Others on the bill are Audrey Wykoff, Ross and Ayes, and Harold Boyd's Jig-Saws.

The Southtown theater's vaudeville show is composed of Jackie Heller, young singer and protégé of Ben Bernie; Wilton Crawley, trombonist; the Ortons, aerialists, and the Three Lees, acrobatic dancers.

People's Opera to Be Staged on Huge Scale

IT has been considerably in the news of late that the People's Opera company will give the first of a series of performances next Saturday night at the Chicago Stadium. The first attraction will be "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci," and among the important persons of the cast are John Charles Thomas, Anne Roselle, and Carmela Ponselle. Jacques Samoussoud is the director.

It is promised that the presentations will be on an elaborate scale. The stage, 150 feet wide by 100 feet deep, will take care of a chorus of 100 and in addition will be augmented in "Cavalleria Rusticana" by eighty-five members of the Ambrosian choristers of St. Ambrose church who will sing the "Regina Coeli." The orchestra will number sixty.

Movie Reveals Love Problems of One Eskimo

So—Eskimo goes—and, of course there is the devil to pay. For White Goddess is fiancée of White Man, which makes Eskimo sick indeed. . . .

Back home, at last, sails the wretched visitor, who has learned about civilization to his sorrow. You're very much afraid he'll go over the side of the boat.

Finis.

Lederer Portrays Aigo Charmingly.

I feel that most of "Man of Two Worlds" was California made.

As for Mr. Lederer—he emerges triumphant as an actor. As demonstrated by him, Aigo's naïveté is charmingly and touchingly real. You shudder to think what some of our players would have done with the rôle—but Lederer manages even to eat shaving soap without appearing ridiculous.

Characteristically splendid in the parts of the kindly explorers who unintentionally do Aigo so much harm are J. Farrell MacDonald and Henry Stephenson. Elissa Landi is convincing as the well bred English girl who at last finds the young barbarian and his strange devotion more than she can stomach. Steffi Duna is most appealing as the sad, adoring, inarticulate, bewildered little wife of Aigo.

"Man of Two Worlds" is, as you have surmised by this time, a sort of northern "Tarzan" story.

See you tomorrow.

London Wants "Follies."

Edward Laurillard, a London producer, now in New York scouting for new plays for London production, has entered into negotiations with Lee Shubert for the rights to a London production of the current "Follies." He has seen every edition of the "Follies," beginning with Mr. Ziegfeld's first show atop the New York theater building, and states that the present "Follies" would be an "undoubted hit in London."

Showboat Grief

To the Dramatic Editor:

CHICAGO, Feb. 1.—Some time ago the board members of one of the Chicago charities discussed with the showboat Dixiana people the possibilities of a benefit for their cause. I was very much interested in seeing something develop along that line, but evidently they are having some difficulties in obtaining permission to open. Consequently it has not been possible to enter into any negotiations for a possible date for charity purposes.

I have noticed newspaper items which to my mind indicated no valid reasons for refusing them permission to operate the same as any other legitimate theater venture. I happen to have an acquaintance with some of the people interested in this boat. I consider them able and experienced men, and consequently I do not understand the reasons for the delay.

R. A. AISHTON.

Star Mimic at College Inn; Cabaret Bills

Miss Santley Imitates Famous Theater Folk; Colosimo's 25th Year.

PLAYGOERS who saw Cecilia Loftus and Elsie Janis in the prime of their gifts for mimicry are not likely to get excited over the plain or garden variety of "impersonator." However, there's a lady named Zelda Santley on the floor show program at the College inn who is getting plenty of admiration from the young moderns and the cabaret experts.

Zelda is a natural mimic with a large repertory. She never imitates a character whom she does not know "in person," and she seems to have a wide acquaintance among the people of the stage and the radio profession. Her subjects include Mae West [of course], Greta Garbo [naturally], Joe Penner, Zasu Pitts, Helen Morgan, Jimmy Durante, Lyda Roberti, Ben Bernie, Groucho Marx, Katharine Hepburn, Maurice Chevalier, Ethel Waters, and Ted Lewis.

In addition to Miss Stanley, Frankie Masters, band leader and impresario of the show at the inn, offers Edith Griffith, pianist and singer; Jack Powell, singer; the Six Lucky Girls, in the old-time can-can dance; Doris Hurtig, also a can-canner, and the Di Gaetanos, a ballroom dancing team who have appeared in Paris, London, Berlin, Monte Carlo, Cannes, Nice, Milan and Copenhagen.

● Colosimo's restaurant is celebrating its twenty-fifth anniversary with a new revue arranged by Arthur Kretlow. Among the entertainers are Derorida and Barry, modernistic dancers; Julia Lyons, "blues" singer; Dorothy Henry, acrobatic ballet dancer; the Countess Boriska, Sig. Barsony, and Enrico d'Alba, operatic singers; Del Estes, master of ceremonies, and Bob Tinsley's band.

● Even South Chicago has its floor shows. In the Café Venice, at 91st street and Commercial avenue, Maurice Sherman's orchestra plays for the dancers, and Joe Plotke and Rose lead a program of cabaret acts. Herbert Wellington is master of ceremonies.

● The Prima Rainbo garden illustrates an architectural principle that is neglected in most cabarets. It is strong on "lines of sight." The area for the floor show is elevated, giving an unobstructed view from every table. More than that, it has a spacious mezzanine balcony from which patrons can watch the proceedings without stretching their necks. The revue with which this night club opened several weeks ago, "Rainbo Rays," is still in performance.

● The dean of the old Majestic bar, a famous Monroe street rendezvous of the pre-prohibition era, now presides over the cocktail hour in Fred Harvey's Michigan avenue restaurant. John J. Coher is his name, and as a mixer of the old school he frowns at such sweet, effeminate concoctions as "sidecars," cloverleafs and Alexanders.

● The Edgewater Beach hotel, where Harry Sosnik's orchestra will continue through the winter, gave its annual Mardi Gras party in the Marine dining room last night.

Born on Stage

DOROTHY DARE, the dancing soubrette of Joe Cook's musical comedy, "Hold Your Horses," at the Grand Opera house, began to dance almost as soon as she could walk. Literally born on the stage—her mother and father were well known vaudevillians—in Dallas, Tex., she started as a child actress when she was only 3 years old. At the age of 7 she played in her first musical show, "Night Boat," with Louise Groody. She then became a featured child performer in vaudeville.

While still in her 'teens she began to receive featured parts in Broadway musicals and was soon in the soubrette class. Among the shows she has appeared in were "Hello, Paris," "America's Sweetheart," Peter Arno's "Here Goes the Bride," "Strike Me Pink," with Jimmy Durante and Lupe Velez, and Lew Leslie's "Clowns in Clover." After "Strike Me Pink" closed in New York Miss Dare became the dancing partner of Hal Le Roy on a vaudeville tour. She has also made several picture "shorts."

Miss Dare's hobby outside of the theater is pets. Her home in New York is a miniature zoo.

Needs No Cooking! Big Saving!

You'll be pleasantly surprised when you make up this simple home mixture and try it for a distressing cough. It's no trouble to mix, and costs but a trifle, yet it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water for a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, put it into a pint bottle, and fill up with your sugar syrup. The pint thus made gives you four times as much cough remedy for your money, yet it is far more effective than ready-made medicine. Keeps perfectly and tastes fine.

This simple remedy has a remarkable three-fold action. It soothes and heals the inflamed membranes, loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and clears the air passages. Thus it makes breathing easy, and lets you get restful sleep.

Pinex is a compound of Norway Pine, in concentrated form, famous as a healing agent for throat membranes. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

Hollywood Has Big Party for Gary Coopers

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Gary Cooper and his bride, Sondra Shaw, were given a royal welcome into the Hollywood fold on their return from their New York marriage and Arizona honeymoon, at a party given for them by Emanuel Cohen at his home, Misty Mountain. All the beauty and talent of Paramount turned out to do the couple honor, and the occasion was a notable one.

Misty Mountain is a beautiful estate on top of a mountain overlooking the panorama of Los Angeles and Hollywood. The interior of the house was gay with decorations of white flowers, huge floral pieces of larkspurs, gladiolas, tuberoses, white roses, and narcissi being over every fireplace and on the tables. Garlands of smilax, sewn with narcissus, were draped in the archways, and in the living room, over the orchestra hung a huge bell of narcissus. The affair was a dinner dance.

Dinner was served buffet style, guests finding their places at small tables, set at each place with a candlestick cuffed with narcissus at the vase and again half way up the candle, the narcissus being tied in place with silver ribbons.

Entertainment was exceptional, even for Hollywood. Dorothy Dell, in a black velvet evening gown, with long sleeves made off the shoulder with an epaulet of silver and rhinestones, sang several songs in her throaty voice; W. C. Fields juggled boxes and wisecracked; Jack Oakie embarrassed his mother by displaying her $25,000 pearl necklace and saying that she had asked him for one when he was in vaudeville; that after two years, he returned with the money, but when he returned she'd got a goiter and he had to go back for two more years. She said, expostulatingly, "I'm always the goat, but I haven't any goiter."

Carl Brisson, newly arrived actor from England, former European boxing champion, was introduced, with his brother, and wife. Gracie Allen and George Burns did some of their nonsense, Gracie quite cute in brown satin trimmed in gold lamé.

Gracie cracked: "You know my brother was held up the other evening; he was at a party and two men held him up all the way home." George answered, with something about her "talking with her hands for comfort when she has a sore throat; then she just washes her hands when she needs a gargle."

Lanny Ross held 'em spellbound with "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," and "Did You Ever See a Dream Walking?"—and Bing Crosby, to repeated applause, did a couple of numbers, including "Thanks."

Sandra Cooper, the bride, greeted her wellwishers in a backless evening gown made of heavy white corded silk, striped in scarlet and barred in black; the costume had a jacket with it, which she wore. She is statuesque, dark haired, with hazel eyes. Gary was quite the proud bridegroom and all smiles. The wedding cake was brought in, quite a size, and surmounted by images of Gary and his bride on horseback, accompanied by the three ranch dogs. It was quite striking; all the rest of the cake was white. Ice cream was served in shapes, just as at Aunt Lily's wedding, calla lilies, roses, cupids, and whatnots, you know what wedding ice cream always is.

Dancing in the living room was engaging some, while games downstairs attracted others. Mae West made quite a late arrival, all in white satin with diamonds and this and that extremely prominent. Ida Lupino appeared for the first time with her hair its natural dark color. Toby Wing, still platinum blonde, was lovely in black chiffon and taffeta barred with gold.

BitsaBOUTem

AND HOW Hollywood's bachelors have gone domestic! CARY GRANT and RANDOLPH SCOTT started it. They found themselves a hillside home and there they live with a middle-aged couple keeping house for them . . . GEORGE RAFT rented himself a house at the beach—but he got homesick and hustled back to his own apartment where folks could drop in on him oftener. His trainer lives with him and keeps things in order while a colored chauffeur pinch hits wherever necessary . . . W. C. FIELDS enjoys life in a large rustic home just around the corner from a golf course. An elderly pair who've been with him for years attend to his simple wants. But he's gotta have that golf course handy . . . CHARLIE RUGGLES has turned gentleman farmer. He lives in a Spanish house set back in a nest of trees, and his estate in the San Fernando valley consists of ten acres on which are some thousand citrus trees. A big yard for his dogs, an aviary for his birds, and a swimming pool complete this layout . . . JACK LA RUE tried rural life—but like George Raft he got lonesome. So he and his mother and four sisters moved back to town. JACK OAKIE and his mother have a Beverly Hills home, an old southern Negress who keeps them from getting thin, and a gardener who comes by the day . . . GARY COOPER moved to a Hollywood ranch home just before—but you know the end to THAT bachelor saga.

Two Good Plays Balance a Bad Pair in Gotham

"By Your Leave," Portraying Vacation from Matrimony, Most Successful.

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—The news from the eastern theater front this morning is both good and bad. Bad in the case of George Abbott's importation of a biographical drama written by an English schoolmaster named Gow with the life of John Brown as his inspiration. Bad in the case of a trivial farce comedy about a shallow lady who wanted to start a barn theater to improve the culture of her neighborhood and only succeeded in getting a lot of actors and a wild young playwright tangled in her hair and her apple trees. "Whatever Possessed Her?" would be the title of that one. What, indeed?

Good in respect to two light comedies dealing amusingly with the American domestic scene. One—and mark you this—in which a husband, suddenly faced with the fear that he is growing old, proposes to the missus that they split the family savings and indulge themselves in a week's vacation in town [they being suburbanites], during which each shall be permitted to do as he or she pleases with no questions asked at the end of the experiment. There's an idea for you! It is called "By Your Leave," and was written by two women, Gladys Hurlbut, actress, and Emma Wells.

The other is a witty social affair called "No More Ladies," presenting one of those comic grandmothers who flourished just before the wild younger generation began going sentimental on us. She is a bit dated, it may be, but so well written by A. E. Thomas that she is still awfully good fun.

Husband Gets the Worst of It in Marital Holiday.

As for the adventure of the young married couple who declare the week's moratorium in "By Your Leave," I cannot commend the trial entirely, seeing the men get the worst of it, but its possibilities will provide you with a Sunday supper topic for group discussion if you happen to be in need of one.

Henry Smith, having sighted middle age, is beginning to worry about it. He feels that he is losing his grip; that he is no longer attractive; that his wife, Ellen, has come to take him as he is taking her, for granted. His house is run too efficiently. His life is much too routine. He would, in a word, seek a change during which he may confirm the threat of his slipping.

Ellen Smith, on the other hand, is a little bored, but reasonably content. She accepts being bored as any wife and mother's burden. She is quite shocked when Henry suggests seriously that they split the savings account of $500, each take half, and go on a week's vacation. But in the end she agrees.

Professional Comforter Takes Her Job Too Seriously.

Henry gets an inexpensive hotel room and lets his friends organize a series of stag parties for him. From these he acquires some little sense of freedom and a big lot of headaches. Then he determines to make the major plunge. On the advance of a bachelor friend with an address book Henry calls up Lonely Hearts, Inc., and orders a Titian blonde, medium. The young lady arrives, is thoroughly business-like and eager, hoping thus to rise in her profession of paid comforter. She has, she feels, a mission. And she is so serious about it that, when she is in the bathroom getting into something flimsy and probably ravishing, Henry finds his hat and coat and runs home two days ahead of time.

And what about Ellen? Well, Ellen has taken herself a better room in a better hotel and gone in for a shopping spree. Afternoons she sees a good deal of a handsome explorer, David Mackenzie, an acquaintance of Henry's. About the time Henry is running home Ellen is falling seriously, not to say hopelessly, in love with romance, as the explorer explains it. Now, the last night, she is sure she should stay on to show her friend Chinatown and the Bowery, to toast a scone or two for him, and make him happy his last night in town. And she stays.

The experiment over, Henry and Ellen take up their routine lives again. Both are happy now. Henry confesses his utter failure as an adventurer in love. But Ellen manages some way to avoid positive statements.

"By Your Leave" excites much laughter. It happens that Henry's scene with the lonely heart lady is the high spot of the fun. After that the pace is down hill. But it is an amusing evening in the theater, thanks in good part to the cast. Howard Lindsay, co-author of "She Loves Me Not" and a director of parts, turns actor to play Henry. Dorothy Gish is the Ellen, and Kenneth McKenna, back from the pictures and the former Mrs. McKenna's [Kay Francis] divorce suit, plays the handsome explorer. Handsomely.

Comic Grandma of Pre-War Days Reviewed in "No More Ladies."

There is additional interest attaching to the promised success of "No More Ladies." It was written by the A. E. Thomas who years ago made a name for himself first as a star reporter on the old New York Sun when it was Editor Dana's pride and later as a deft and witty writer of social comedies beginning with "Her Wife's Husband" and coming down to "The Rainbow" and "Come Out of the Kitchen."

For some years now Mr. Thomas has been professionally inactive and what plays he has been able to sell have not done his earlier promise justice. With "No More Ladies" he comes directly back to the first line of native dramatists.

The comic grandma of whom I speak is played by Lucille Watson, a smartly spoken comedienne of other days who has for some years been living in Paris and has now been driven home, I hear, by the disappointing activities of the dollar in that former tourist haven. Her grandma is one who dotes on her highball, smokes her cigarets in a long tube because the doctor told her to keep away from tobacco, swears like a discreet trooper, and offers advice in love to two young things who need it badly.

CHANGES LIKE A CHAMELEON

Zelda Santley, well known as a mimic of stage and screen personalities, is now a featured entertainer in the cabaret show at the College Inn. She changes like a chameleon from Zasu Pitts to Bebe Daniels, without using makeup devices.

Gershwin Here to Render His Version of Jazz

By Edward Moore.

THE Red, White, and Blue club is presenting the best known American musician at the Auditorium this afternoon. He is George Gershwin, composer, pianist, a builder of new paths in the field of music, and, incidentally and for his own amusement, a painter.

This young New Yorker has had a career probably unmatched anywhere. He began by delighting the world with the melodies that he put into songs and musical comedies. He became a world wide rage. Tune after tune poured from his prolific pen, and they were good tunes, charming tunes, melodies that enchanted the ear and the sense of rhythm at the same time. Some of them will be heard this afternoon, "Lady, Be Good," "Strike Up the Band," "I Got Rhythm," "Man I Love," and several others.

Having conquered the popular world he conceived the idea of uplifting the popular world, not by turning his back on what he had been doing before, but by putting it to more elaborate uses. So there came the "Rhapsody in Blue," which is celebrating its tenth anniversary this year, wherein jazz and sustained melody walk in alternating moods. Paul Whiteman, under whose baton it was introduced—Mr. Gershwin at the piano, by the way—tells of how at the first rehearsal when the slow melody of the middle part came boiling up out of the orchestra he nearly fell off his stand with surprise. He has used it as a theme melody for his own radio concerts ever since.

Concerto Born of a Promise to Damrosch.

It was as popular as had been the shorter Gershwin songs. Almost every pianist able to play it did so, to say nothing of a great many whose hands were not able to grasp its difficulties. For it is tricky no end. But ever since then one has been able to notice a steady lowering of scornful eyebrows when the subject of jazz was mentioned.

Then came the Concerto in F. Mr. Gershwin says that he took a commission to write it from Walter Damrosch without knowing how he was going to do it. He had written the Rhapsody just as the music came to him without reference to formal construction. A concerto would have to be something different. So he bought two books on composition in the larger forms, started for Europe, read the books on the voyage, threw them away, and wrote the Concerto.

Once again he was its first soloist, Mr. Damrosch conducting. Since then it has been presented by the Boston Symphony, the Philharmonic under Mengelberg and Van Hoogstraten, the Milwaukee Philharmonic under Frank Laird Waller, the Minneapolis Symphony under Henri Verbrugghen, the Cincinnati Symphony, and the Pasdeloup orchestra of Paris. It is a brilliant piece about thirty minutes long, and the rhythms and melodies are unmistakably Gershwin.

"American in Paris" Both Program and Absolute.

He is to be soloist in both of these this afternoon and there is another extended piece of his composition, "An American in Paris," for orchestra without piano. This is perhaps as good a place as any to say that Mr. Gershwin is heading a large organization, the Reisman Symphonic orchestra, directed by Charles Previn, conductor of many of the Gershwin Broadway successes, and James Melton, tenor of radio and the concert stage, who sings cowboy and Negro songs.

Those who have heard "An American in Paris" will know that it is an attractive piece of music. Deems Taylor has given it a brief special analysis. He says that by the composer's own confession it is an attempted reconciliation between two opposing schools of musical thought.

"It is program-music in that it engages to tell an emotional narrative; to convey, in terms of sound, the successive emotional reactions experienced by a Yankee tourist adrift in the City of Light. It is absolute music as well, in that its structure is determined by considerations musical rather than literary or dramatic. The piece, while not in strict sonata form, resembles an extended symphonic movement in that it announces, develops, combines, and recapitulates definite themes. Only, whereas the ordinary symphonic movement is based upon two principal themes, 'An American in Paris' manipulates five."

Lily Pons, petite and greatly persuasive coloratura soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, will appear in a song recital at the Auditorium tomorrow night. She is announced to sing three arias from her operatic repertoire and several groups of songs, in which she is as adept as in opera. The recital is under the auspices of the Girl Scouts of Chicago.

Registering among the highly agreeable dinner concert programs, those presented by the Borino Stringed orchestra under the direction of S. Victor Tufigno at the Fred Harvey restaurant deserve mention. Here there has evolved an original idea to the effect that the Thursday evening programs are selected by well known musicians not connected with the organization. Rosa Raisa's name was thus appended to one, Gennaro Papi's to another. Others were by Rudolph Ganz and Eric DeLamarter, and in each case the list was excellently selected and excellently played.

VAUDEVILLE CELEB

WAVES VERSATILE BATON

By Edward Moore.

● Here is a man for whose job the word versatility seems a mild term. He is Verne Buck, orchestral leader at the State-Lake theater.

● Four times a day, five on Sundays, he goes into two completely different types of conducting. For the first half he is in the pit directing a vaudeville bill that goes through the widest range of music. A prima donna may appear in an operatic aria, perhaps the Bell Song from "Lakme." The next act may be a pair of tap dancers requiring torrid jazz, say "Turn on the Heat" or the "St. Louis Blues." They in turn may be followed by a classic dance requiring the Second Hungarian Rhapsody.

● All these must be read at sight and timed to the split second. For timing in vaudeville is all-important.

● Then Buck goes to the stage for the revue and becomes an entirely different Buck. Here he is the master of ceremonies. He clowns a bit. He becomes a showman.

THE VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

Mae West Overdone.

Dear Miss Tinée: I read with much amusement and approval the letter written you by "K. L." She has said just what I think. This Mae West business has been carried too far; in fact, to the absolute limit for people of finer sensibilities or even common decencies, especially when they have children of adolescent age to consider. What possible effect can all this have on them except to make them bolder, tougher, and more vulgar? How can all this vulgarity do them anything but harm? Miss West is reaping a harvest, no doubt, but what comfort can that bring her at such a price? She is acting the very acme of vulgarity, and if it is in contrast to her real life I must say she does it well. I know nothing about her, care less, and couldn't be hired to go and see her, but it does disturb me when I think my children may see her perform in even our own neighborhood theater. Her vogue will die out, but what about the thoughts it has implanted in growing minds?

I have read THE TRIBUNE for more years than I care to recall, but was thoroughly disgusted with it for the first time when I saw the pages devoted to this person. You have done your worst. I don't think you can go any further. I was going to stop taking the paper, but think it surely can only go upward from this time on. Of course I am always at liberty to stop reading it at any time.

Well, now I've said my say, I can only add, "Here's hoping."

Sincerely yours, E. C.

Her debut tea at home and the dinner dance her parents gave for her during the Christmas holidays were two of the nicest parties on the debutante calendar and besides these two large affairs she was feted at smaller ones by many of the friends of her mother and father.

Congress Rebels as White House Practices Deflation on Guest List

By GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(Special.)—Which is more important, a congressman's secretary or a congressman's constituent? That's primarily a personal question, I realize. And generalizations might be inaccurate. But this I do know, that congressmen who tried unsuccessfully to get their constituents in to the congressional reception at the White House were mad at their brother congressmen who sneaked (that's the word they used—it's not mine) their secretaries into the party and got by with it.

But let's begin the story at the beginning:

Because President Roosevelt obviously cannot stand for hours and shake hands, this year the formal receptions have had their guest list limited to a thousand. Which, after all, seems a fairish crowd.

In years gone by it was easy to call up the division of protocol and ask for an invitation for "Cousin Netty," who had just happened in from home, or Uncle Ed, or the Dorset twins.

But this year with the guest list limited a taboo had to be placed on these last minute self-invited guests.

● Now the congressmen read all this in the papers; heard it discussed. They thought it was an excellent practice—until it came home to them. It came home to them at the congressional reception. Many of the boys, so sure of their own social influence, went so far as to invite constituents from back home to "come down for the congressional reception—sure, I got a drag at the White House."

The home boys and girls arrived—with new stiff shirts, new taffeta gowns. Then the congressmen began to telephone the division of protocol. The gentleman in charge was extremely sorry and all that, but a rule was a rule and it simply couldn't be broken.

The congressmen were furious. One particularly enraged one told me that he had refused to go to the reception. He'd "show 'em"—had taken his constituents to the theater instead—and he insisted that at least fifty of his fellow statesmen had declined to attend the party.

And what made them even madder was the fact that many a congressman had calmly taken along his secretary (I suppose his wife MUST have been out of town and he had, by implication at least, passed the secretary off as his spouse to the doorman taking the "Mr. and Mrs." tickets).

● Mrs. Henry Morgenthau Jr., wife of the secretary of the treasury, has made her husband one promise—that she won't ever ask him to attend a

Culture Has Its Innings on the Social Scene; Music, Books, Art in Limelight

By COUSIN EVE.

A WEEK of beauty, of high thinking and remembrance, and moments of gay laughter. Of listening much to music, glorious music—the violin of Mischa Elman, the ringing voice of Dusolina Giannini singing at the University of Chicago, the fantastic Slav strains of "Coq d'Or" at our revived Chicago opera. John Alden Carpenter's strange poem of the ocean, "Sea Drift"; his swan song at the symphony concert before sailing to meet the spring at Algiers. Written partly in an eagle eyrie at Eze, hovering over the Mediterranean and exotic Monte Carlo, and finished in rockbound New England in an atmosphere quite other, it is a piece of cross-currents and contradictions, inscrutable, mysterious withal.

Forward thinking had many followers at the charming dinner Thursday night in Hutchinson Commons. Arranged by the newly formed society, "Friends of the Library," of the University of Chicago, it was not only a distinguished and memorable party but a beautiful one in which leaders in all walks turned out and candlelight played on fine heads, handsome faces. On the high stone ribbed walls of the Commons were great portraits of Charles Hutchinson, George Vincent, William R. Harper, John D. Rockefeller.

Raney Paints Book Lover's Paradise.

At the high speakers' table sat officers of the new group: Willoughby Walling, chairman in the absence of John S. Miller, president, off to Arizona; Vice Presidents William A. Nitze, Henry G. Gale and Mrs. Gale, James M. Stifler, Mrs. William Nitze, and Mrs. James Ward Thorne, a lover of beauty and creator of beauty, who has a wonderful library of her own collecting, plus President Robert M. Hutchins and Thornton Wilder, speakers of the evening, excellent bait to lure an audience.

Dr. Hutchins, handsomely browned in Georgia sun, began with this line: "Unaccustomed as I am to public speaking" (large laughter), then holding forth that the telephone book had been his main reading in the last five years; also that Prof. Wilder has no time for reading either. Every one in high good humor at whimsicality in high places.

Then was heard Llewellyn Raney, treasurer and spellbinder of the Friends. His was a discourse charming, rambling, even romantic, that left the mind full of pictures; book-loving groups at Oxford; again in Paris at the Bibliotheque Nationale; at Harvard, Yale, and Princeton, where lovers of books in the past have gathered around tables and talked to kindred souls. It all seemed so cozy, so happy, one longed to join a bookish group. One in Chicago he pictured with

EMPRESS JOSEPHINE STEPS OUT OF CHARACTER

The statuesque Mrs. Harold Strotz was a stunning Empress Josephine at the Grand Opera Masque ball. She was in white satin with sapphires galore and a sapphire blue velvet cape, but she stepped out of character long enough to smoke a cigaret and have a high ball in the Opera club, two things we're sure Napoleon's Josephine never did, at least, right out in public.

Desert Exciting to Vacationists in Southwest

Social Leaders Hunt Arrow Heads, Study Cacti, or Follow Old Cattle Trails.

PHOENIX, Ariz.—[Special.]—In all travelers to Arizona there lurks the spirit of adventuring. It takes but half an hour from the center of Phoenix to find endless stretches of desert and mountain ranges still unspoiled by the hand of man. That spirit of adventure coupled with days of continuous sunshine brings forth the urge for exploration and the days of the pioneer. Some search for arrowheads and bits of pottery—others study the various cactuses and desert life (as long as the rattlesnake is asleep for the winter), but for the great majority days in the saddle following the old cattle trails with chuck wagon grub cooked over an open fire fulfills dreams of romance and conquest.

For the guests who have succumbed to the romance of the west the Arizona Biltmore will have a roundup dinner Tuesday night in the bunkhouse. It will be a real test of whether one is a tenderfoot or has graduated from that class, for there'll be no frills or pampering. It is hoped that the long ride will work up such an appetite that beans and more beans on tin plates and oil cloth tablecloth will taste like food fit for the gods.

Afterwards there'll be a barn dance with all the old time square dances danced to the tune of the cowboys' fiddle.

Many Chicagoans Sign Up for Roundup Dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. James McMillan, who have proved themselves "regular fellows" have been rounding up the riders and dancers. The Cyrus McCormicks have already signed up and so have the Lester Armours and their guest, Patrick A. Valentine. The two Armour boys, Lester Jr. and Vernon, who are at school at Tucson, have managed to stay over for it. Mrs. T. J. Peterson and her daughter, Helen, will be there. So will the Joseph Watkins, Mrs. George R. Nichols, Mrs. C. L. Daniels, and Mrs. James E. Hutchins.

The Albert Gallun children are busy competing with the Addison Gardiner children. Both have been practicing up on their riding so they won't be left behind. Mrs. Gardiner arrived Saturday and Mr. Gardiner will be out later in the season. Miss Ann Pretzlaff is another who has graduated from the tenderfoot class. It has been unanimously voted that Mrs. Allan Van Wyck is the roundup belle. She is quite the most alluring picture imaginable in her levis, colored shirt, and Stetson. Charles Randall, who is a real old timer in these parts, will call out the Virginia reel.

To the cacti minded Oren Taft has offered a silver cup for the guest finding a sahuaro less than six inches tall. So far no one has been successful.

The Francis Neilsons have left for parts unknown for a week's trip. It will just be wherever the spirit moves them, probably to some of the old ghost mining towns.

On Monday afternoon Mrs. Franklin Martin will have five tables of bridge and tea for Mrs. Hugh Foresman and Mrs. Mark W. Cresap who are out for the season. Their husbands will join them later.

At the San Marcos at Chandler the tenderfeet and old timers are all being rounded up this week in a "frontier doin's" costume party which will portray Arizona in the days of the two-gun men. Judge and Mrs. Kenesaw Mountain Landis will lead the "doin's" as they are almost considered pioneers at Chandler. The John Levis will be at the party. So will Dr. Brown Pusey, Mr. and Mrs. Hobart Young, Mr. and Mrs. Arch W. Shaw, the Ira Darlings, and Samuel Lyndes.

The Landises have as their guest Mrs. John A. Stevenson, who motored out from Chicago. Mr. Stevenson will arrive later in the week.

Camelback Is Glamorous Place for Moonlight Ride.

There is nothing so enticingly lovely as a ride around Camelback mountain in the moonlight, which happens almost any moonlight night out at Jokake. The William Wieboldts are guests at the inn and will stay until spring. Miss Louise Burke was hostess at a luncheon at Jokake this week in honor of Mrs. Burridge Butler and her sister, Mrs. Rose Buchanan.

The "Bill" McGuires en famille have also succumbed to "going western" and in honor of the new Stetsons, boots, and chaps the Westward Ho had a chuck wagon dinner in the desert after a climb by horseback up Squaw peak.

WHEN TWINS MADE THEIR BOW TO SOCIETY

This isn't one debutante pictured twice; it's two who look so much alike it is difficult to tell them apart. They are Myrtle and Lilliam Lampert, daughters of the Wilson W. Lamperts.

Congress in Pet as White House Limits Guests

● Never were tonsils so talked of as the ones which Ahmet Muhtar, the Turkish ambassador, recently lost. As dean of the diplomatic corps he is a distinct social asset at any party. As a rich and hospitable bachelor he gives the most elegant and expensive parties. So when the poor man went to the hospital to have his tonsils removed great was the lamentation. But he is back at his embassy now and social Washington—both those who give and those who attend parties—are praying for his complete and speedy recovery.

● Illinois' Henry Rainey, speaker of the house, is paying the penalty for having a magnificent head, a great shock of fluffy white hair, deep set eyes. Every artist, apparently, in the United States is making a beeline for the speaker's office, eager to make a portrait of Mr. Rainey's "interesting face." Mrs. Rainey, who is her husband's private secretary, greets the artist. But it is difficult for her to say "No," and she usually has an artist or two in the reception room giving her a sales talk, showing her copies of the portraits he has done of other celebrities.

One portrait of him has been done. It's good. Yes, of course, it shows him with the pipe he seems always to be smoking.

● Immediately adjacent to the house of representatives chamber is a reading room. Racks filled with copies of the daily newspapers stand in rows. Some wise person has placed all the southern papers at the end of the room nearest the Democratic side of the house. The New England papers stand in front of the door leading to the Republican side.

● By the way, if you are writing a letter to the President—and who doesn't in these days of democracy—don't bother to say "his excellency." Many use the title, but it's wrong.

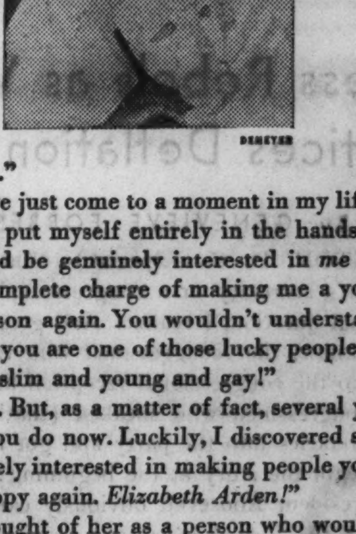
In the beginning days of our government congress set itself to the task of deciding on a proper title for the president. A joint committee of the house and senate brought in a report favoring the use of the words "his excellency." But the senate rejected the report. The subject went to a conference. The conference recommendation was this: "His highness, the president of the United States of America and protector of their liberties."

As soon as they heard that high sounding sentence some of the congressmen shrieked that it was much too British and smacked of the royal purple in this home spun country. So the report was postponed forever.

Later congress adopted a resolution suggesting this plain address: "To the president of the United States."

That's the proper one now.

"There comes a time in every woman's life..."



"Go on Jane..."

"Well, I have just come to a moment in my life when I would love to put myself entirely in the hands of some one who would be genuinely interested in me and who would take complete charge of making me a young and attractive person again. You wouldn't understand that, Anne, because you are one of those lucky people who just naturally stay slim and young and gay!"

"Thank you. But, as a matter of fact, several years ago I felt just as you do now. Luckily, I discovered some one who is genuinely interested in making people young and lovely and happy again. Elizabeth Arden!"

"I never thought of her as a person who would be interested in me!

"But she is!

To Elizabeth Arden you are a very important person!"

"What did she do for you?"

"She started with my face. When I saw what that first amazing treatment did for my skin...and for my age...and for my spirits...I got the 'Arden Habit'. I still have it."

"But what about your nice slim figure?"

"That was the next step. I was flabby, overweight and sluggish. She put me through a routine of exercises, rolling and Ardena Baths, and it was fun! I had really forgotten how it felt to be really exuberantly alive and well until I started kicking and stretching and wiggling on a satin mat, or lying in that marvelous Ardena Bath, which removes pounds and tiredness at the same time."

"Then you don't think it is too late for me?"

"Certainly not! Make an appointment right away with Miss Arden's Directress of Exercise for an interview, Superior 6952. And when you arrange for your face treatment be sure to ask about the Ardena Treatment in which they use that exciting new salve!"

Culture Has Its Innings on the Social Front

broad brush strokes, debating briskly, "What period would you have chosen?" The most ethereal and lovely of the diners (one fancied it was Mrs. Thorne) chose the age of rugged Samuel Johnson and Boswell. Another, a worldly lover of modern life, picked the age of Pericles, most splendid of all ages. And so on until Dr. Raney had charmed many into membership.

Following came the famous author of "The Bridge of San Luis Rey." Dead silence. Spoken rapidly in his usual concentrated manner, voice dropping at periods, we heard a fascinating thesis on the uses of a library, its patrons. Lovers looking into each other's faces—in this adjunct to the ice cream parlor—in search of love stories. Then cranks, astrologists, astronomists, cultists, the crank with his mind "like a warm lighted room." Then the average student, rushing to absorb for immediate usage Bryce's "American Commonwealth" or Dante's "Inferno."

Then followed the superior student, faculty members, research workers. A glimpse of old Babylon with its five million inhabitants, of whom with all its ancient culture only the names of its royal family survive. A delightful all too brief glimpse into the beautifully furnished mind of the great American stylist.

Thus Friends of the Library started on their way, aiming, we are told, at diplomatic aid in adding books to the University of Chicago's collections. And, to make a program for exhibitions, to locate distinguished book collections in Chicago, to report, and meet with congenial groups. It has been done in other cities. Will be done here.

Shaw Memorial Room Makes Dead Generations Live Again.

Among the several hundred diners were Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson Jr., John and Mrs. Stuart, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Dixon, Miss Naomi Donnelley, Thomas Donnelley, Mrs. Charles Dempster, Mr. and Mrs. Quincy Wright, J. Weber and Mrs. Linn, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Sherriff, Theodore Parmenter, Mrs. Otho Ball, Robert H. McCormick, Walter Ayer, Miss Elizabeth McCormick, Dr. and Mrs. Edgar Goodspeed, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Schutze, Mrs. Henry Gale.

At the Antiquarians of the Art Institute on Friday the memorial room to Howard Shaw was open. Receiving with Mrs. Potter Palmer on this occasion were Mrs. Shaw and her three tall, charming daughters, Mrs. John T. McCutcheon, Mrs. Clay Judson, and young Theodora, widow and daughters of the noted architect.

The memorial is of great dignity and beauty, a large, high room giving on McKinlock court with its fountain and clipped formal garden. A brightness almost of spring passed the windows and fell athwart the beautiful ancient wrought iron gates and their setting which are a part of the memorial. Spaced against the brick walls are old doorways of England, beautiful carved doors and pilasters, complete, each in its frame with bell pull. The steps, too, are there, the soft suave tones of age and use, the polish of old wood. One doorway is early American, with fluted pillars. One could fancy prim Pennsylvanians coming and going.

Indeed the thought of what manner of people had passed through all these closed doors was what intrigued me. Did they ever stop to consider how beautiful their front doors were? Especially the Chinese lintel at the end was charming. A wonderful memorial it is, and one worthy of the man who inspired it.

Tea Table Rescued from Oriental Obscurity.

Mrs. James Ward Thorne in black with white furs was doing tearoom honors and had arranged the table, which was a real tea table again after many years of being a Chinese temple, with brocade covers and every kind of garden and exotic art exhibit there is. There was a white cover and resplendent silver at both sides of the round table. In the middle a high round floral bouquet with every kind of spring flower. We return to normalcy again.

Mrs. Kersey Reed and Miss Florence Bartlett were pouring tea when I was there and Mrs. Frank Mulford, too, was assisting. Her collection of bead pictures was a part of the day's exhibition but hung so distantly one never did find them. Cases of curiously colored glass paper weights were shown in the main hall, some belonging to Oakleigh Thorne, Mrs. Palmer's son-in-law. On the walls were the primitive wall paintings Miss Bartlett had brought from ancient peasant huts in Sweden. Altogether this semi-annual reception of the Antiquarians was worth while.

Sunday was a lively day at the Casino. Three large luncheons were held at the same moment. Mrs. Hugh McBirney received her guests in the salon with its highly colored Aubusson carpet and purple velvet canapés. She is about to sail for Italy on the Savoia, to be gone until June, let the dollar rage and tear. Her guests of honor were Mr. and Mrs. Herman Gade of Paris.

Mrs. John A. Spoor and Miss Elsie McCormick received on opposite sides of the lounge. Mrs. Spoor's party was for Caryl, her charming daughter, Mrs. Thornhill Browne, here from Mississippi for a visit. Both ladies wore black velvet with white furs, orchids, and welcomed fifty guests, among whom were Mr. and Mrs. Morris Johnston, Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Adams, Mrs. Ralph James, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Gillette, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Thorne, Harold McCormick, Mrs. Charles C. Adsit, Mr. and Mrs. Hope Rogers, Mrs. Richard T. Crane, William B. McCluer, Bernard Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. James Hopkins, Mrs. Francis Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Aldis Browne.

William McCluer, having accepted two luncheons that day, found himself impaled on the horns of a dilemma at the last moment. Such are the penalties of popularity.

Miss McCormick to Rummage Among Old Russian Costumes.

Mrs. Crane was a happy figure at this party. A letter had come from her son, Cornelius, in Panama describing a scene off shore in the harbor quite vital to the Crane family. Two yachts were swinging away at the same moment, both headed for the Galapagos islands. One was J. P. Morgan's Corsair with its owner aboard, the largest yacht afloat. The other was the smallest yacht in commission, the Svaap of Mr. and Mrs. William G. Robinson, the former Florence Crane. All hands had dined on the Corsair the night before. Cornelius Crane wrote that the departure was a funny sight.

The Robinsons will go ashore on one of the islands and live in a shack belonging to some Dutch people who own the island. Penguins in dinner jackets and the black tie will be their neighbors.

Miss McCormick's luncheon was a farewell, as she is off to Russia for a good time among the storehouses of ancient costumes held by the soviet government. Her last find was in England, where she bought a brocade cover of large size in an old castle. This is reputedly made of a dress left behind by good Queen Elizabeth when she visited the castle for the night on a royal progress. Why Queen Elizabeth left the dress behind would be perhaps good reading, but the costume made into a bed cover has been rebuilt into its original form under Miss McCormick's guidance. Furthermore there exists a portrait of Queen Bess wearing a dress of this identical stuff, so that antiquarians feel convinced that there is no chicanery as to the queen having skipped out and left her finery behind.

Italy's New Envoy Gets a Gracious Welcome.

However, the glorious find was a fifth century Greek parchment magnificently illustrated with many exquisitely painted miniatures of a part of the Apochryfa, the fourteen books of the Vulgate not accepted in the Hebrew scriptures. This is an exact copy of a second century manuscript which has disappeared and for which scholars are searching. This find is Miss McCormick's rarest treasure. Among her Sunday guests were Dr. and Mrs. Edgar Goodspeed, the former being what one might call editor of the modern Bible.

His majesty of Italy's minister, Piero Parini, had a handsome dinner given for him Monday night at the Casino by the Italy Americans. On this occasion Herman Gade wore his high decoration, Star of St. Olaf, and the ladies displayed their prettiest frocks.

Augustus Peabody was a most expert presiding chairman in the absence of Chauncey McCormick. At once when it was time for speeches he unloaded the office of chairman upon Consul General Castruccio, who looked surprised and said something Italian like "the heck I am!"

Floridans Favor Parties with Fancy Touches

At Latest Palm Beach Affair Carnera and Loughran Do Shadow Boxing.

PALM BEACH, Fla.—[Special.]—Henry C. Pope of Chicago, who with Mrs. Pope and Mr. and Mrs. William H. Pope, is at the Breakers, is a trustee of the Warm Springs foundation in Georgia and has been greatly interested in the work because of his warm personal friendship for President Roosevelt. He took a table at the Everglades club for the President's birthday ball on Tuesday evening when many others of the Chicago colony attended to help this popular charity.

Arthur "Bugs" Baer was master of ceremonies and features of the ball were a gay nineties mining camp dance hall with bar, faro, and roulette layouts, society girls garbed as Mae West and Diamond Lil, singing waiters with long mustaches and other amusing features. No such spectacle ever has been seen in Palm Beach. Dining tables were covered with cellophane and decorated with white lacquered palms and ferns. Primo Carnera and Thomas Loughran staged a shadow boxing exhibition arranged by Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, chairman of the entertainment committee.

Mr. and Mrs. James G. Alexander and Miss Elizabeth Alexander of Chicago arrived to occupy the villa on Via La Selva where they lived last season.

Hospitality Expressed in Beach Parties, Patio Dinners.

Mr. and Mrs. Wolcott Blair were among guests at a beach party given on their beach by Mr. and Mrs. H. A. B. Widener II. and Joseph E. Widener. Every one wore beach ensembles or bathing suits.

Mr. and Mrs. George Alexander McKinlock attended a luncheon at Gulf Stream golf club, Delray.

Mrs. William W. Forrester of Chicago recently gave a dinner at the Patio. Guests included Mrs. Charles H. Randle, Mrs. Henry Lockwood, Mrs. Guy D. Randle of Chicago, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Fenner of Chicago, who will conclude their sojourn at Biltmore apartments and return this week to Chicago. Mr. Fenner caught a large sailfish on Saturday as did Mrs. Fenner and they are considering having them mounted to keep as trophies of their prowess.

George Rasmussen Jr. entertained a party of young people at the Patio for the opening when Clark and Deslys, English entertainers, were featured.

Bensons Are Guests of Albert Smiths.

Maj. and Mrs. Reginald Lindsay Benson, who were guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Barry Ryan Jr., at Opeka, now are with Mr. and Mrs. Albert Smith at their villa. Maj. and Mrs. Benson were named as patron and patroness for the President's birthday ball here and Maj. Benson was a member of the floor committee. He has been in South Carolina for a few days' shooting recently, returning here for the ball. Mrs. Benson, the former Leslie Foster of Lake Forest, is receiving much attention as is Mrs. Frederic McLaughlin, the guest here with her small daughter, Irene, of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Somers Roche at their home. Mrs. McLaughlin and Irene attended the swimming party given by Mrs. Edward Hines for her granddaughter on Thursday.

Mrs. Samuel Cole was among those at the formal opening of the Patio Friday evening and on Sunday was entertained at their cabana at the Sun and Surf club by Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Horton. Mrs. Charles H. Randle of Chicago with her daughter, Mrs. William W. Forrester, has taken a cabana at this club for the season and soon will be joined by Mr. Forrester, who returned to Chicago after the holidays.

Montecito Has a Fresh Influx of Chicagoans

Many Social Leaders Journey to Los Angeles to Attend Plays, Concerts.

SANTA BARBARA, Cal.—[Special.]—The start of the annual influx of prominent winter visitors from Chicago and the east, several unusual theater offerings in Los Angeles, and a bit of choice gossip concerning the rumored divorce plans of Mrs. Isadore Bragiotto, who until six months ago was Mrs. Edward Cunningham, socially prominent Montecitan, attracted the attention of members of the Chicago colony here this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence B. Mitchell and their young daughters were here from Pasadena over the week-end.

Mrs. Berkeley Brandt of Ojai Valley and her daughter, Miss Betsy Brandt, have as their house guest the former's sister, Mrs. A. I. Ullman of Chicago. The Brandts, accompanied by Mrs. Ullman, will sail Feb. 7 for Honolulu to spend several weeks.

Raymond Hardenbergh, son of Maj. and Mrs. Raymond Hardenbergh of Fort Hamilton, N. Y., arrived in Montecito for his annual winter visit. He motored west by way of Florida and Mexico.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis V. Lloyd, ex-Chicagoans, have as their house guest the latter's sister, Mrs. Horace Gray, who has arrived from her home in San Francisco for a winter visit.

Among Chicagoans and persons well known there who journeyed to Los Angeles for the unusual theater offerings were Mr. and Mrs. Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor, who enjoyed the symphony concerts; Mrs. E. Palmer Gavit, Mrs. William P. Lyman, Miss Pauline Thacher, Miss Evelyn Graves, Mr. and Mrs. William North Duane, and Mr. and Mrs. Stowe Phelps.

And talking of plays the Montecito repertory players, seeing a chance to jump into the black ink side of the ledger, staged a repeat performance during the week of the "meller-drama" "Sweeney Todd, the Demon Barber of Fleet Street," which proved the best bet of a week ago, to another packed house of Montecito socialites, sitting at beer tables.

Raymonds Caught in Spanish Revolution.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Raymond, who have been passing a part of the winter in Paris, will sail Feb. 15 on the Europa for New York and are expected to arrive at Santa Barbara about March 1.

While they were in Barcelona to witness the debut of their son, George Raymond, in opera, the revolution broke out anew and their stay in the Spanish city was one of excitement and thrills.

James Deering Florida Estate Open to Public

By Putney Haight.

MIAMI, Fla.—[Special.]—The gates of Villa Viscaya, the estate of the late James Deering of Chicago which borders on Biscayne bay in South Miami, have been thrown open to winter visitors. It was the first time since Mr. Deering began construction of his magnificent winter home and tropical landscapery that the uninvited have been welcomed. It took Mr. Deering twenty-five years to collect the scattered bits of agricultural units, textiles, art, and furniture, which he included in it and is said to have cost him probably more than $10,000,000, though not of that value today. It required five years to finish construction of the sixteenth century Italian palazzo which, with the formal gardens constitutes the centerpiece of the 187 acre horticultural paradise.

Chauncey McCormick announced the opening of the estate, saying that it is in the nature of an experiment for the winter only. He arrived in Miami from Chicago recently with Mrs. McCormick, who is one of the Deering heirs to whom the estate was bequeathed. Mr. and Mrs. McCormick have their winter home in Coconut Grove and neither they nor other heirs were inclined to occupy Viscaya as a residence. The announcement terminates a long campaign carried on by leading Miami citizens who believed that opening the famous palazzo and grounds to the public would be an attraction of great value to Miami as a resort and pointed out the benefits to Charleston of the public access to Magnolia and Middleton gardens and to Asheville of public access to the Vanderbilt mansion.

Tours of the estate are available under competent guidance and study of the vast collections of objects d'art in and surrounding the palazzo will be aided by a digest of authentic objects prepared by Robert B. Harshe, director of Chicago's Art institute, and Daniel Catton Rich, associate curator of art and sculpture.

Three Dinner Dances Celebrate President's Birthday.

Three elaborate dinner dances, each followed by a grand ball, fell to the lot of Greater Miami as its part in the observation of President Roosevelt's birthday and in aiding the Warm Springs foundation. One was held at Cinderalla ballroom in Miami, one at Roney plaza at Miami Beach, and one at the Biltmore at Coral Gables. In each of the units the Chicago colony of visitors was well represented. Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Bigler, Mr. and Mrs. Fred B. Snite, Mr. and Mrs. Howard L. Krum, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Krum, Albert D. Lasker, Dr. and Mrs. William R. Gillman, Mr. and Mrs. K. B. Moos, Mr. and Mrs. Peter T. Potts, Mr. and Mrs. Albert B. Dick, Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Dashiel were among those who participated in their various residential divisions.

Arriving at Miami and hurrying right through to Key Largo club to get started fishing at the earliest possible moment were General and Mrs. Robert E. Wood of Chicago. Other deep sea adventurers were Mr. and Mrs. George Voevodsky of Lake Forest, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Bede, and Mrs. Walter MacDonald.

Mrs. Frank Hoover, Mrs. Charles Wood, and Frank Hoover of Chicago, have come to Miami Beach for the season.

Huttons Yacht Has Sound Picture Theater.

Mrs. George Dulany Jr. of Chicago and Washington is with her mother, Mrs. Alexander Hughes at Miami Beach for the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Gould Hutchins, Chicago and Di Lido island, announce the marriage of their daughter, Eleanor Elise, to Alex Merrill Balfe of Miami on Jan. 18.

The Edward F. Huttons arrived early this week to take command of the Hussar, their 367 foot clipper, auxiliary yacht, in which they expect to do extensive entertaining while cruising the Florida coast and Caribbean this winter. Built in Germany, the craft first touched at an American port on Friday. It is practically a full rigged ship, luxuriously appointed in every conceivable way, even carrying a sound picture theater for which it receives a half dozen feature and news releases a week. When the Huttons have done with Hussar, she will be presented to the Naval academy at Annapolis as a training ship.

A burning sun and a radiant tropical full moon by night have conspired to crowd the beaches during the week. At the bath club and surf club many familiar Chicago faces are seen; among them Mrs. Gladys Pearson, Ronald Webb, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Young, Mrs. Lloyd Head, Thomas M. Howell with his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. Neil C. Hurley and their daughter, Florence; Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Dashiel, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Steiner.

I am going to Europe this summer and am told I shouldn't miss Palma. Just what is there to see there?—L. H. B.

Palma is a pleasant, lively little town on a bay of Majorca, in the Balearic islands. Scenes worth visiting there include the ancient house of the Bonaparte family, the gothic cathedral containing the tombs of the kings of Majorca, Belver castle, and the bull fights. Incidentally, the police of Palma are being taught English so that they may better look after the thousands of American tourists.

What is the meaning of the word maté, that seems to be so popular in South America?—F. C.

Maté is the favorite beverage of millions of South Americans. Made from the leaves of the yerba tree, and frequently called Paraguay tea, it is said to insure long life through its healthful effect on the arteries. It is one of the outstanding products of two states of southern Brazil.

Please tell me: Where and what is Willemstadt?—M. M.

It's a dutch treat for tourists to the Dutch West Indies; a city of tropic seas within the safest landlocked harbor of the Indies. It is the seat of splendid houses of old Holland architecture, along with innumerable bricked courtyards and tiled roofs, all in a riot of colors.

My wife and I are planning a trip to Yellowstone this summer and we are wondering what is the best time to go? Can you tell us?—H. J. P.

The park opens in the middle of June and closes in the middle of September. Almost any period within those limits is usually thoroughly delightful there. Once in a while the early tourist is inconvenienced by the snow in the passes, and by September it often begins to get pretty cool in the mountains. July and August, when the heat is worst in the cities, are perhaps the best months in which to go to the national parks.

When Chicago Was Young

Mid-Victorian Days on the Mid-Continent

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, June 3, 1883.

DEAR JULIA: We are having dinner this evening with Martha Junior and Sandy in their pretty apartment in the Ontario building, and as Will and Sandy haven't come in yet I'm sitting in the parlor, alternately reading and writing, while Martha goes about her housewifely duties. She is a good little housekeeper . . . most amusing, when I think how the maids and I used to pick up after her at home.

I have just finished reading the report in Sandy's church paper about the United Presbyterian denomination's having voted its approval of organ music in church services. I can imagine how Sandy, who belonged to the "U. P." church before he married Martha, will laugh about this. He is rather musical and always wanted to have the organ in church, but the older and more conservative of that denomination opposed it. One brother says, as quoted in the paper: "Before the organ controversy came into our church we dwelt together in harmony. Since last year all is dissension and division. I was taught that instruments were not sanctioned by the word of God, and I am now asked to renounce this belief."

Will wonders if the brother has never read the Psalms, in which David exhorted his Hebrew brethren to praise God on an instrument of ten strings and upon the harp with a solemn sound. Indeed, Will took quite a long time last Sunday to search out verses in the Bible which mention musical instruments. In Genesis, for instance, he found the invention of stringed and wind instruments ascribed to Jubal, "father of all such as handle the harp and organ."

All the talk about music in the United Presbyterian church makes me think of Will Carleton's verse, "The New Church Organ." Do you remember that? It begins:

"They've bought a new church organ,
Sue,
For all their fuss and search;
They've done just as they said they'd do
And fetched it into church;
They're bound the critter shall be seen,
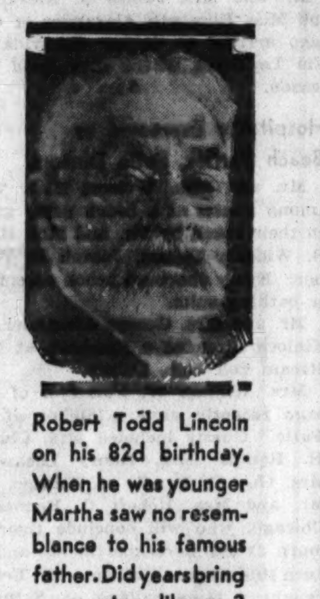
And, on the preacher's right,
They've hoisted up their new machine
In everybody's sight.
They've hired a chorister and choir,
Agin my voice and vote,
For it was never my desire
To praise the Lord by note."



Robert Todd Lincoln on his 82d birthday. When he was younger Martha saw no resemblance to his famous father. Did years bring a greater likeness?

My Will, who has just come in with Sandy, says he met Secretary of War Robert T. Lincoln at the Chicago club this afternoon. Mr. Lincoln had just returned from a fishing trip to Pelee island in Lake Erie with a group of Chicago men, including Byron L. Smith, Gen. Anson Stager, Gen. Phil Sheridan, O. S. A. Sprague, and A. F. Seeberger. Mr. Lincoln, whom we know well, doesn't resemble his father at all, though he is a delightful man.

Dinner is announced by Hilda and I must close. We four all send you our love. Ever as ever,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Echoes of "Footlight Favorites of Yesterday," at the Drake hotel last Sunday: Mr. and Mrs. William J. Chalmers, who brought the Lloyd Lewises, recognized every one of the players pictured on the screen, and Mrs. Chalmers thought she had seen all of them on the stage; Frederick B. Tuttle thought he had seen all but two or possibly three; Coe Glade of the Chicago Civic Opera company occupied a box and saw such singers as Jenny Lind and Patti on the screen; Carrie Reynolds of the company playing at the Studebaker theater liked the pictures of favorites of yesterday; Mrs. William Sickinger saw the picture of her sister, Mrs. Scott Hayes [Beryl Hope, who acted with Sol Smith Russell], and Mrs. Franklin M. Miller, the picture of her mother, Mrs. Louis Falk.

We want to thank every one who sent pictures and other mementoes of the players of yesterday and helped to make the show a success.

Party Visits German Nudists at Island Home

Couple Dons Clothing for Call of Californian and Scientific Group.

LOS ANGELES.—(AP)—The nude couples of the old convict island in the Galapagos know again the thrill that came to Robinson Crusoe when callers knocked at his door.

When the exploration cruiser Velero III. dropped its anchor recently at Charles island, 600 miles off Ecuador, the event was important enough to make Dr. Friederich Ritter and Frau Dore Strauch Koerwien don unaccustomed clothing and come down the old Black Beach road, built in forgotten years by forgotten men.

Welcome Capt. Allan Hancock.

Their welcome was for Capt. G. Allan Hancock, millionaire mariner of Los Angeles and Santa Barbara, and his guest party of distinguished scientists.

More important than the letters from home, necessities from civilization, and news of the world, as well as human companionship, was a little box that Capt. Hancock had carried with him.

It was a bit of material to enable Dr. Ritter to spend some time again at the profession that he left behind. And it meant for both of them, the doctor and the frau, restoration of teeth, both having been without them for many months. Ritter was a dentist before he came to this equatorial island four years ago, with another man's wife, to establish a Garden of Eden.

Calls Civilization "Mere Vegetating."

Sometimes twice a year they have visitors. Few craft come into these waters from the ports of civilization, which Ritter gave up saying it meant nothing, "mere vegetating."

Four years it is since the night in Berlin after a big party Dr. Ritter bade adieu to his wife and Frau Koerwien said goodbye to her husband and they went west to seek fulfilment of a desire that has been in the dentist's hopes for 25 years.

Palm Beach Now International Social Center

By Nancy Randolph.

PALM BEACH, Fla.—[Special.]—There is probably no other place in all these United States that is so distinctly of the international group of social resorts as this Palm Beach.

Not even New York itself is more exactly included in the itinerary of the notables who make a point of yearly visiting a certain number of cities and resorts all over the globe where the smart folk of England, France, and America foregather.

Internationally speaking, New York does not rate with London or Paris as a social center –but there is no denying that Palm Beach is set as high in the social list as Cannes or Cap D'Antibes.

As far as setting, loveliness, and climatic conditions are concerned, Palm Beach is easily without a peer. The waters of the Mediterranean, while lovely in color, are decidedly cold. The broad Atlantic off the coast of Florida is warm and blue and almost as gentle as a mill pond. Sometimes I have to stop and wonder whether this really is the turbulent Atlantic ocean.

Sports Achieve Perfection.

The days are a blaze of sunlight, the nights as calm and warm as any one might desire. The settings of the various vast estates are unreal, but no more so than the tropical displays of nature herself.

The international set finds everything here that it desires: A quiet harbor in Lake Worth for the white yachts that laze down from New York and even across from Europe; British Nassau is an overnight voyage out to sea, and quaint if somewhat turbulent Havana a few miles further to the south.

The polo at Phipps field is of international caliber, as is the tennis at the Poinciana courts and at the Bath and Tennis club; and the golf courses, green and well kept, are a duffer's delight—even the poorest golfer makes a good score on their flat surfaces.

At Bradley's the roulette balls whir and the dice rattle. The play is heavier than at any of the casinos on the riviera. The various bathing clubs—the Sun and Surf, Sea Spray, Bath and Tennis—all have rows upon rows of bright cabanas. And, while Florida officially is dry, the boats of Bimini bring in the liquid wealth that society demands.

Nobility of England, France, Russia, Ably Represented.

I have never known any resort quite so colorful as Palm Beach. One sees every one of note, from Amy Mollison, the flier, tooling about in her gray Mercedes, to such inveterate supporters of the riviera as Irving Netcher and his wife, the onetime Rosika Dolly.

British duchesses, Russian princes, and French counts and countesses are all a part of the winter colony that includes practically all the great names and great fortunes of America.

The magnificence of the private estates is breath taking — private beaches and pools, seaplane landings, huge garages, central switchboards with as many as nine and ten trunk lines, thirty and forty servants —indeed, one needs to see Palm Beach to realize how many vastly wealthy people are numbered in American society.

I have noticed this season that formality is going out. Everything smacks of sport, and the men are almost as colorfully clad as the women. Contrasting coats and trousers, bright neckcloths even in the evenings are the order of the day. The white mess jacket, while not prevalent, is none the less being worn. The dull black of dinner jacket and tail coat is almost a rarity.

As to who is here and who not, the list is a breath taking one, from the duchess of Sutherland, Lady Daphne Finch-Hatton, Grand Duke Dmitri and his consort, Princess Ilyinski, Mrs. Marshall Field, Prince George of Russia, and Joe Widner, to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Carnegie Phipps, Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury, Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Hutton, Claude Graham-White, and many, many others of truly international note.

Not only all of America of social importance is here, but most of the international set. We can well be proud of our premier winter resort.

Dead Doctor Heals Stomach Ailments

A weird story is told of a well-known specialist reaching from the grave to curb stomach suffering. Years ago this doctor created a prescription for acid stomach, gas pains, heartburn, indigestion, bloating, belching, and other symptoms when caused by excess acid. Then the good doctor died. But his name brought fame after death as one user told another of his wonderful prescription. In the past six years, 54,169 grateful persons have written letters telling of their recoveries. This prescription is now known to hundreds of thousands as the Udga Treatment. All stomach sufferers may have a free sample by writing to Udga, Suite D, Foot-Schulze Bldg., St. Paul, Minn. The seven-day trial box of Udga Tablets is sold under a money-back guarantee of satisfaction by all good druggists.

DETOURS

By Frederic Babcock.

THE urge to get away from it all was given an impetus last week when it was announced that any one with the price could now fly over the most remote jungles and game reserves of Africa and thus get hitherto impossible aerial views of the vast herds of wild beasts.

The flights are to be a part of cruises taking the tourists as far as Cape Town, and nearly a half of the 13 mile trip will be by plane. The first American party will leave New York March 3.

● But there are a great many who don't want—and think they can't afford—to get away from it all. In these times of shifting currencies and stabilization battles, business men who want to take a cruise and see something different are held back by the feeling that they must keep in close touch with their office. This often makes a long cruise out of the question.

One solution is a cruise to Brazil. Under a new arrangement the business man can have his mail delivered by air at seven ports in the course of the trip, and if he finds it necessary to return in a hurry he can fly back in not much more than no time.

(Husbands: Don't let the Little Woman see this item. She might insist on packing up your duds and hers and making a quick getaway for Latin-America. Especially when she learns that the whole thing can be done for less than $400.)

● Down in Miami the 1934 model deb must be an all-round athlete as well as a fluffy dancing partner if she expects to get anywhere in her pursuit of the male. This is said to be a typical schedule for a girl who has gone there to rest:

Up at dawn for a fast trip to an anglers' club by autogiro and a whirl at sailfishing. Back at noon, just in time for a dip in the surf and luncheon on the pool deck of a sun club. After lunch a sun bath on the sands and then a real workout on the tennis courts or on the golf course before dashing down the bay in a speedboat. Then cocktails before dressing for dinner, and after dinner, a bicycle party along the ocean drive by moonlight with pig sandwiches and beer at a barbecue stand, or a tour of the night clubs along Miami Beach. After that the rest of the night can be spent at a gambling ship or on a beach party.

● Travelers to the Mediterranean often wonder at the significance of the tower on top of Europa point, the highest bit of rock on Gibraltar. It's called O'Hara's Folly and the reason is that the Irish officer who built it thought he could stand in it and see, far beyond the horizon, the activities of the Spanish fleet in the harbor of Cadiz. Of course he was wrong, but the tower serves a purpose. From it one may get a look at two continents spotted with beauty and two seas dotted with ships from all over the world. Maybe it wasn't such a folly after all.

It's a Lonely Life for Istanbul Police

ISTANBUL.—(AP)—Istanbul policemen must henceforth be bachelors.

The city government has said that present married members of the force may keep their jobs and their wives, but that no married recruits will be hired.

Famous Series of Catacombs Being Explored

ROME.—[U. P.]—A third important series of catacombs, known as the Pretestatus catacombs, will shortly be added to the well known early Christian underground cemeteries of St. Calixtus and St. Sebastian on the Appian way just outside Rome.

The pontifical commission of Christian archeology is directing the operations of the workmen engaged in exploring and excavating this underground treasure house of early Christian art and history.

Pretastus, who gave his name to the catacombs, was, it is thought, an early Christian martyr, though some archeologists allege he was only the Roman landlord of the ground where the catacomb was built.

Treaty Aids Work of Archeologists.

It has remained for the archeologists of 1933 to bring the work to a conclusion. The thorough exploration of the countless early Christian tombs is really one of the results of the Lateran treaty between Italy and the Holy See and the concordat which gave the right in the catacomb to the pope. While the disagreement between the church and state existed in Italy, it was to nobody's interest to order a thorough exploration of these interesting catacombs since the property in them was a matter of dispute.

Object of Great Devotion by Faithful.

The Pretestatus catacombs were the object of great devotion of the faithful until the coming of the dark ages and the destruction of Rome at the hands of the barbarians. They then fell into decay and disuse as places of veneration. Landslides and the vandalism of the savage conquerors of Rome did their work with these early monuments of Christianity, and the price of neglect and the sackings of the barbarians was paid for in rifled tombs and ruined frescoes.

Birthday Party for Hull House Woman's Club

By Ruth DeYoung.

THE Hull House Woman's club, part and parcel of Chicago's century of achievement, celebrates its 41st birthday this week with appropriate reminiscence and ceremony.

On Wednesday afternoon the club members, two of them charter members, will gather in Joseph T. Bowen hall, near Hull House on Polk street at Halsted, for a birthday party highlighted by a minuet danced in Victorian costume. As club president Mrs. Jessie Dabe will be the hostess, assisted by the charter members, Mrs. Mary Hinekamp and Mrs. Rose Thornton.

"We started as the Hull House Mothers' club back in Chicago's first World's Fair year," explained Mrs. Philip A. Nash, the first vice president and chairman of publicity, yesterday with pleasant humor. "Then, after the club had been going for six months, it suddenly dawned upon the board that two of the most important members, Jane Addams and Mary MacDowell, were 'misses' and that it was hardly appropriate to style the group a mothers' club. Hence the change to 'Woman's Club.'"

Became Member of Illinois Federation.

Miss Addams and Miss MacDowell were, in fact, the founders of the club, which, at its organization, became a charter member of the Illinois state federation. As its name implies, it has been responsible for an untold amount of uplifting and constructive service these last 41 years. Funds raised go in a lump sum to philanthropy.

"We give to everything we can," Mrs. Edward Gegenheimer, a member, has said. "At the end of the year we are 'broke' but happy."

Last year the club completed a 2,000 dollar endowment fund for the maintenance of the Laura Dainty Pelham Memorial cottage on the grounds of the Joseph T. Bowen Country club at Waukegan. This home furnishes vacations and summer outings for mothers and children in the Hull House district.

The club maintains a linen chest from which the Hull House settlement's visiting nurses may draw for needy cases. It also contributes to the Park Ridge School for Girls, the Juvenile Protective association, the Chicago Woman's Shelter, the Light House, and the Frances Juvenile home.

Although the club membership was originally composed of women of the neighborhood, movements in the population of the city have distributed it today to all corners of Chicago.

Forum to Have Interesting Talk.

"Your 1934 Tax Bill," a question of paramount importance, at least to every property owner, is to be the topic of discussion at the meeting of the forum of the Cook County League of Women Voters at 2 o'clock Saturday in the Palmer house. The meeting will be a round table discussion by members of the major governments, who will explain briefly the 1934 budgets now in preparation.

Michael L. Igoe will represent the south park board, James B. McCahey the board of education, Emmett Whealan the board of Cook county commissioners, Ross A. Woodhull the sanitary district, and Simeon Leland the Illinois tax commission. Carl H. Chatters, executive director of the Municipal Finance Officers' association, will be the presiding officer.

The Chicago colony of the National Society of New England Women has planned a reception and luncheon for Mrs. Frederick Starr Pendleton, of Brooklyn, N. Y., the national president general of the society, on Thursday at the Blackstone hotel.

Mrs. Pendleton will meet the members of the Chicago colony at a reception at 12 o'clock. After a 12:30 luncheon Mrs. Anita Burnham, a member of the Chicago colony, will give her amusing and instructive lecture, "Round the World with a Suitcase." Mrs. Thomas J. Holmes is president of the local colony.

Invitations have been received for the 20th annual white breakfast of the General Henry Dearborn chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution at 12 o'clock, Feb. 12, in the Gold room of the Congress hotel. It is the custom of the members of this chapter to wear white to this annual breakfast, hence the descriptive name. All of the decorations are also done in white.

The Rev. Paul Austin Wolfe is to be the speaker this year, discussing the subject, "The American Scene." Helen Hedges is to give a musical program. Mrs. E. Julius Albrecht, regent of the chapter, and Mrs. William Montgomery Kelly will be the hostesses.

The few remaining members of the Grand Army of the Republic are to be guests this evening of the department of Illinois of the Woman's Relief corps, at a dinner and reception in the Louis XVI. room of the Hotel Sherman. Russell C. Martin of Los Angeles, the commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, and Mae G. Lincoln of Aurora, the national president of the Woman's Relief corps, will have places at the speakers' table. Mrs. Mary Murdoch is the chairman.

DESERVING OF A CUP OF TEA, AND MORE

Physically Fit Woman Tells How She Lost 64 Pounds of Fat

With This Safe, Sensible Treatment Approved by Reputable Physicians—She Did Not Diet.

Mrs. Leon Clute of Solvay, N. Y., writes: "I've been using Kruschen Salts for about a year and wouldn't feel physically fit without them. Originally I started the treatment for reducing—I weighed 206 lbs. Today I'm 140. This reduction was made without dieting—merely taking a half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast. I feel fine and shall continue to have Kruschen in the house at all times."

A jar of Kruschen lasts 4 weeks and costs but a few cents at leading druggists thruout the world—thousands of grateful people have reduced and enjoyed better health today because of this physician-approved, safe, effective treatment. Women are delighted because it leaves the flesh firm—no sagging skin.

Many people hasten results going light on fatty foods.

GET THAT KRUSCHEN FEELING

NOTE: Remember you lean and normal weight men and women that if you have no FAT to lose you can't lose WEIGHT with Kruschen Salts—Kruschen acts on fat only. You can, however, get that superb Kruschen feeling of glorious physical healthfulness as millions thruout the world do by taking your little daily dose of Kruschen—only as much as will lie on a dime in your morning cup of coffee or tea (you can't taste it).

This little daily dose of KRUSCHEN increases physical attractiveness keeps you feeling fit, fine and full of zest for the work you have to do—that tired feeling and shortness of breath disappear—old time ambition returns—your mind becomes keener—dull skin becomes clear—that nervous feeling will desert you—you sleep sound nights—it keeps stomach free from acidity and indigestion—keeps your liver normally active—billiousness, dizziness, headaches, auto-intoxication will no longer annoy.

Kruschen causes the gall bladder to function regularly and bile to flow freely—it acts on kidneys keeping them free from poisons and acids, and here's good news for millions: Constipation won't bother you after you have taken your little daily dose of Kruschen for two weeks—regular and blissful elimination will become a daily healthful habit.

By Eleanor Jewett.

THE two outstanding events of last week were the opening on Monday of the tenth annual Hoosier salon in the Marshall Field galleries and the opening on Thursday of the thirty-eighth annual exhibition by artists of Chicago and vicinity in the east wing galleries of the Art institute. The Hoosier salon is unusually fine this year. One beautiful and striking painting after another catches the eye. Edgar Forkner's still life in water color is a brilliant achievement and Curry Bohm's "Early Monday Morning" is lovely.

The Chicago artists' exhibit in the Art institute is of interest. It makes a decided contrast in its prize awards and even in its pictures which passed the jury to the Hoosier salon's successful canvases. Here is found what the optimist calls the "authentically American—an art not derived from foreign influences." The exhibit is well hung. Not over 15 per cent of the show is made up of landscapes; figure studies seem to have been given the preference. If landscapes are few marines are fewer, and there is an absence of nudes to be remarked. Also portraits are not in favor, as there are less than half a dozen strictly termed portraits in the entire exhibition.

Jury Seems to Favor Pictures of American Scene.

Prize awards are a fairly good index to the mind of a jury. The awards as announced last Thursday gave the Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan Art institute medal and $750 to the fine piece of sculpture, "The Dancer, Harold Kreutzberg," by Peter Paul Ott. The Mr. and Mrs. Jule F. Brower prize of $300 went to "Breakfast Table," by Charles W. Dahlgreen. The Joseph N. Eisendrath prize of $200 was given to "Coal Yards," by Aaron Bohrod. The Harry A. Frank prize of $150 went to V. M. S. Hannell for "Bouquet." The Clyde M. Carr prize of $100 was awarded to Laura Slobe for "Bleak Sabbath." The Chicago Woman's club prize of $100 was given to "Nude" by John Stephen. The Chicago Woman's Aid prize of $100 went to Elise Donaldson for "Walgreen's." The Municipal Art league prize of $100 was conferred on the sculpture "Marguerite," by Robert J. Wolff. The Robert Rice Jenkins Memorial prize of $50 was awarded to A. Kenneth Ness for "Shipwreck in the Morning."

Frederic Grant Reinterprets A Century of Progress.

Running these exhibitions a close second in interest is the brilliant display of recent paintings by Frederic Grant which has been focusing attention upon the Anderson galleries, 536 South Michigan boulevard, since its opening late in January. Mr. Grant was tremendously impressed by the vitality of color and dynamic design of Chicago's A Century of Progress Exposition. He determined to paint the Exposition and his current exhibit reveals his choice of views, which not only are marvelous in themselves but typify in each particular case the spirit underlying the entire spectacle.

Vibrant blues, reds, and brilliant yellows abound through these picturesque canvases. If it is the province of a painter to reflect the events and spirit of the time in which he lives, then Mr. Grant has achieved that here. There are 21 large paintings in the show. In another room some twenty of the small water color sketches which Mr. Grant made on the spot and from which he developed his larger pictures make an interesting group. They are charming.

Symbolizes Whole Fair in One Kaleidoscopic Abstraction.

Frederic Grant, as we all know, has an international as well as a national reputation as a dramatic colorist. His work is found in many private and public collections including the Metropolitan museum permanent collection in New York. Past exhibitions in Chicago have proved his genius for creating imaginative, decorative landscapes and his marvelous touch with still life. Paintings from Bali and the orient and other places abroad have given us colorful records of his interpretation of foreign atmosphere and beauty spots. All his skill and knowledge have been poured out in the present A Century of Progress paintings and the result is a magnificent success. The exhibit is one none should miss.

Possibly the finest canvases in the show are "Inner Court, Hall of Science," "Yellow Façade, Communications Building," "Design in Orange and Blue, Terrace of Fortune," "Carillon Tower, Hall of Science," "A Quiet Place, Gardens of American Radiator-Standard Sanitary Building," and "Blue Panels, Hall of Science." The "A Century of Progress" is an abstract and might best be described as a kaleidoscopic effort to encompass the whole Fair in one overwhelming gesture. It is clever and excellent in color.

"Will Haney," by Guy Brown Wiser, awarded the Ex-Service Man's prize in the tenth Hoosier salon.

Glaman's Prints Reproduce Charm of Glacier National Park.

Eugenie F. Glaman, known to a wide audience for the beauty of her etchings, particularly those with sheep as their subject, has been represented in the Chicago galleries, 220 North Michigan avenue, by a group of recent prints. Five of the etchings are of subjects at Glacier National park where the artist spent a short vacation last July. The mountains intrigued her to such good effect that the resultant prints are most impressive as well as being beautiful.

That Eugenie Glaman understood mountains as well as she does sheep may be considered settled when we learn that she sent a print from the first plate she finished, "Grinnell Mountain and Swift Current Lake," to the Society of American Etchers' exhibition in New York and it was accepted. This is in the nature of the accolade to the aspiring etcher.

L. O. Griffith, whose landscape paintings and color etchings are invariably a feast of beauty to the eye, has left Nashville, Ind., where for some time he has made his home away from Chicago, to go again on a painting trip through the south. The prospect of a spring exhibit of the canvases that will result from the trip is one to fill the lover of good painting with keen anticipation.

History of Beverly Hills Recapitulated in Murals.

Elizabeth Merrill Ford, Chicago artist, has completed an interesting group of murals for a shop, the Superior Tea room, 1755 West 95th street. The murals are historical in character and depict "A History of Beverly Hills, 1833-1933," in a colorful and imaginative manner.

The idea back of this project is excellent and with good effect could be repeated in various strategic points throughout the city. Probably other suburbs besides Beverly Hills have intimate histories which would lend themselves gracefully to the wit and skill of the imaginative artist. It is a suggestion that could readily be developed in conjunction with the CWA work. Portraits are stuffy pictures contrasted with any activity. How amusing if the schools in the various districts showed in mural decorations the events closely related to the particular part of Chicago in which they found themselves! There is scarcely an end to the choice of material the painter would find at his elbow.

Meanwhile these murals of Mrs. Ford's point the way. The Beverly Hills history starts with scenes from Indian and covered wagon days. It comes up through the first settlers, the first school, the first real estate activities, and the first local trains. Then the year 1900 presents neighborhood scenes, and from then on with a rush of civilized development various modern buildings are shown, residences and business blocks, and finally one discovers scenes from Ridge Park, portraying typical local activities of clubs, teams, and groups now existing.

The historical data for the murals were furnished by many old settlers, among them Mrs. Walter Heineman, Miss A. S. Barnard, Miss Howe, B. M. Barnes, J. William Howard, Miss Bernice Baker, and Mrs. Tally.

Most Sought-After Dinner Guest in the World

Heinz Tomato Ketchup is Present at More Tables Throughout the World Than Any Other Condiment

Each day millions of hands grasp bottles of Heinz Tomato Ketchup, to pour on foods of endless variety.

These rich, red drops "pick up" foods of many kinds. Heinz Ketchup fires foods with new, refreshing flavor, as nothing else can do. Meats, egg dishes, croquettes, fish, sandwiches and many other things. Few menus include no dish which cannot be improved by this uncommon flavor aid.

All bottles of Heinz Ketchup are uniformly flavored —this week, next week, a year from now—in Boston, Chicago, Los Angeles — in Shanghai, Paris, Madrid.

THE GIBSON FAMILY · Jerry Abandoned? · Clancy Worries · Mr. Gibson Fusses

"Where's the station drug store? Where's my head?" demands Nurse Tippit. "Why did I forget to pack Jerry's cake of Ivory?"

"Lots o' time," says Sam, smooth as a chocolate custard, now that he knows the whys and wherefores.

And he explains to Jerry, "She's gwine to get Iv'ry to keep yo' clean as a angel on dat smoky train!"

"PURE IVORY FOR BABIES" SAY DOCTORS

"A NEGLIJAY IS IT!" puzzles Officer Clancy. "You mean Miss Sally wears it for a kimona? There's no warmth to it!"

"It's not meant to be warm," sniffs Julia. "It's pretty. I love it."

"A handful of nothing!" declares Clancy—worrying over such extravagant ideas in the girl of his hopes. "A doodad like that won't wear long, I bet."

"DON'T WOOF AT ME, lamb," begs Sally. "I didn't put out the pink soap and the guest towels for you. I gave a party today. The bathroom needed elegance."

"Elegance!" twinkles Mr. Gibson. "So a measly little towel is elegance, eh? As for this soap—phew! Please, can a hard-working father have a big bath towel and a big honest cake of IVORY? Sally, the clean smell of Ivory will be bliss after a whiff of this phew-ti-ful soap!"

ODORLESS IVORY BATHS ARE A GENTLEMAN'S DELIGHT

ONCE A DOCTOR (who was very fond of his only daughter) got a surprise—

"Daddy darling," said his daughter who was sweet sixteen . . . "I've been reading the most thrilling soap advertisements—all about wonderful ingredients and beauty oils in soaps. So I bought the soaps. Now watch me get beautiful!"

"A DOCTOR'S CHILD," said her father, "should be more skeptical about beauty promises. Soaps can't feed your skin with magic oils or ingredients. If you want a really good skin, don't eat so much between meals, my dear. And don't, I beg of you, tumble into bed without washing off your make-up with Ivory Soap. Your skin needs careful cleansing with a pure, non-irritating soap like Ivory."

Complexion "freshness" comes from inside you, while fine "texture" depends largely upon thorough, gentle cleansing. IVORY, pure enough for a baby's skin, gives your skin the gentle cleansing it needs to keep itself SMOOTH AND FINE.

BLUE GEM OF TRAGEDY STILL WAITS BUYER

By Joseph U. Dugan

ONE of the world's rarest and most beautiful gems, the fabulous Hope diamond, a ball of blue fire which for centuries has fascinated all who have seen it, is still for sale at a bargain. Apparently there are no buyers. Could the reason be that for 291 years misfortune, disaster, and death have befallen most of the men and women who have owned this mysterious jewel?

The Hope diamond, of 44½ carats, is relatively small as compared with some of the other famous diamonds of the world, but its outstanding beauty and weird history have given it an international reputation not unmixed with notoriety. Mrs. Evalyn McLean of Washington, the present owner, never has stated publicly that she believes in the so-called curse of the diamond; but, in view of the tragedies and the unhappiness of her life since she became possessor of the gem, few would blame her for entertaining such a superstition.

Mrs. McLean put the diamond up for sale ten months ago for the announced purpose of saving some of the fast dwindling McLean estate, including the Washington Post, for her children. The price of the gem was quoted unofficially as $250,000.

McLean Jr. This picture was taken a few months ago, at the time Mrs. McLean announced her desire to sell the Hope diamond as a means of saving the control of the Washington Post for her children.

At right: May Yohe, former stage star, as she appears today. She wore the Hope diamond when she was the wife of Sir Francis Hope. After that marriage and another romance had ended in divorce courts May Yohe blamed her troubles on "the Hope diamond curse."

At left: Louis XIV. of France, who bought the blue gem from Jean Baptiste Tavernier, French jewel merchant. The king adorned his favorite, Mme. de Montespan, with the jewel and almost immediately tired of her. Louis XIV. paid Tavernier about $52,000 for the diamond.

Above: The famous Hope diamond, which has brought ill luck to a majority of its owners since the time of Louis XIV. of France.

Mrs. McLean, a daughter of Thomas F. Walsh, the Colorado mine king, came to Washington in 1911 as the bride of Edward Beale McLean, millionaire publisher, popular sportsman, and a power in the councils of the Republican party. She immediately took her place as one of the more important of the leaders of Washington society.

It was on the occasion of the first of many brilliant dinners over which she presided as hostess that Mrs. McLean first wore the flashing blue diamond. Its purchase by her husband from Cartier, the Paris jeweler, for $300,000 had been announced in the newspapers a day or so before. The occasion, a formal dinner in honor of the Russian ambassador, was auspicious. High government officials and important dignitaries of the foreign diplomatic corps, with their wives, made up the assemblage. The spacious rooms of the McLean residence were radiant with 2,000 yellow lilies, imported from England for the occasion at a cost of $2 apiece.

It is probable that many of the guests that night recalled the strange history of the blue gem worn by their hostess and asked the question: "Will the curse of the Hope diamond bring tragedy to this beautiful woman, too?"

The question has been answered—by events.

Within a few years after coming into possession of the stone the McLeans were victims of a major tragedy. Their little son, Vinson, who had been publicized throughout the world as "the $1,000,000,000 baby," was struck and killed by an automobile. The estrangement of Mr. and Mrs. McLean, the dwindling of the huge McLean fortune, the deposing of McLean from control of the Washington Post followed in later years. Recently McLean was adjudged insane by a Washington court.

In this enlightened age it would seem unreasonable to place undue credence in the legend of a curse; yet one is tempted to pronounce the story of the Hope diamond inexplicable. Here is the record:

The first purchaser of the fiery blue jewel was Jean Baptiste Tavernier, a French gem merchant. He visited the Kollur diamond mines on the Kistna river in India in 1642, bought a huge blue brilliant weighing 112¾ carats, and returned with it to France. In 1668 he sold the stone to the king, Louis XIV, for about $52,000. Soon afterward Tavernier was banished from France. He lost his money and died, penniless, of fever in a foreign land.

Louis XIV. had the blue stone recut to a heart-shaped diamond weighing 67½ carats. With the jewel he adorned his favorite, Mme. de Montespan, and almost immediately he tired of her. His successor on the throne, Louis XV., next owned the stone. He led an unhappy life. Louis XVI. ascended the throne and his consort, Marie Antoinette, wore the blue diamond. Her friend, Mme. Lamballe, also wore the gem. Louis XVI. and Queen Marie Antoinette were beheaded by the revolutionists. Mme. Lamballe was torn to pieces by a Paris mob.

The revolutionists seized the crown jewels in 1792. All of them, including the blue diamond, were stolen, and nothing was heard of the blue stone for several years. It next appeared in the possession of one Fals, a Dutch gem cutter. His son stole the diamond. His father died of grief; the son committed suicide.

The diamond next appeared in the hands of Francois Beaulieu, a French broker. Beaulieu could not find a purchaser until, penniless and almost starved to death, he sold the diamond for a fraction of its worth to Daniel Eliason, an English broker. Beaulieu died next day.

Eliason immediately sold the gem to Thomas Henry Hope, London banker. The diamond had been recut, possibly by Fals, to its present size and weight of 44½ carats. Hope bought the diamond for about $85,000. One of his daughters was married to the sixth earl of Newcastle, who assumed the Hope family name. A son, Sir Francis Hope, inherited the blue diamond. In 1894 he married an American musical comedy actress, May Yohe, attractive brunette, who had begun her stage career in Chicago and had made a sensational success in Europe. May Yohe wore the diamond. Her romance with Sir Francis chilled and she eloped with Putnam Bradlee Strong, a young American army officer. This caused an international scandal.

Sir Francis divorced the actress and she became the wife of Strong, who had been forced to resign his army commission. The marriage, unsuccessful, ended in a divorce.

Soon after his divorce from May Yohe, Sir Francis Hope sold the blue diamond to Simon Frankel, New York jewel merchant. Frankel eventually went bankrupt before selling it to Abdul Hamid, sultan of Turkey. Abdul Hamid gave the jewel to his favorite, Salma Zubayaba. Shortly afterward, in a fit of rage, the sultan shot her. He later was deposed. In the meantime his servant, Abu Sabir, and another servant had been slain while guarding the diamond. It came into the hands of the revolutionists and was sold to a Greek broker, Simon Montharides. The Greek and his wife were killed in an accident soon after he had sold the stone to Jacques Colet, French jeweler. Colet went insane and died a few months after he had sold the diamond to the Russian Prince Kanitovski. The prince gave the diamond to Mlle. Lorens Laduc of the Folies Bergere. The next day he killed her. Subsequently Kanitovski was stabbed to death. The diamond next came into the possession of a Spanish gem collector, Selim Habib Jr. Habib's fortunes declined and he auctioned his jewels, the blue stone going to M. Rosenau of Paris. A month or two later Habib was drowned in the wreck of the steamer Le Seyne off Singapore. M. Rosenau soon sold the blue diamond to the Cartier brothers, who in turn sold it to Mr. McLean.

Few, if any, of the other great diamonds of the world have such exciting pedigrees, but most of the other famous stones are larger and more valuable than the blue gem. Just a few days ago fresh interest in large diamonds was stirred by news dispatches from Pretoria, South Africa. The dispatches announced the finding of a pure white flawless diamond weighing 726 carats, the fourth largest ever found. It was discovered by J. J. Jonker, a poor prospector, at Elandsfontein, three miles from where the famous Cullinan diamond was found in 1905.

The Cullinan originally weighed 3,025 carats. Among other famous diamonds which exceed the Hope blue gem in weight are the Jubilee, 245 carats; Orloff, 199.6 carats; Regent, 143.2 carats, and Kohinoor, 108.8 carats.

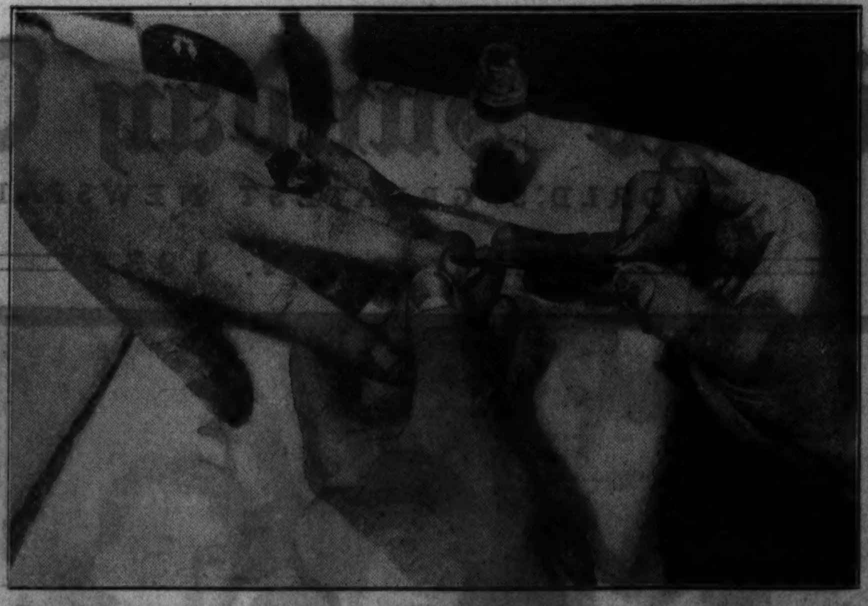
NEW TOUCH FOR PERFECT NAIL



One of the final manicure steps—application of liquid polish in the desired shade to the lower part of the nail. Polish is not brought over the nail tips.

The hands of Jean Howard of Hollywood, with nails white enameled almost to their centers.

When the polish dries the manicurist carefully applies the white enamel to the nail tip—free to make it a finger flattering outline instead of following the natural line.

LADY, do you belong to the anti-nail white group? Just not able to use it because it makes the under side of the tip of your nail look grubby a day or so after manicuring?

Or are you one of the thousands of women who simply cannot keep the nail tip white and clean looking, despite valiant efforts with soap and water, nail brush and cream softenings?

Then you'd better look into the new and neat little trick in nail care—a white enamel applied to the nail tip exactly as is polish to the lower part of the nail. And because it's applied to the outer surface it covers a multitude of sins in the way of grime and roughness beneath. Its use constitutes the last step in the modern manicure, either the professional or home grown variety.

Cream nail white pushed beneath the nail tip makes the nails look immaculate, but needs almost daily renewing. With the new enamel for the nail tip the condition of the under surface of the nail doesn't matter particularly.

In using it no particular technique is necessary. When the first steps of the manicure are completed the hands are thoroughly cleaned and dried. Then the liquid polish is applied in the usual manner from the outer rim of the "half moon" at the nail base to the lower rim of the naturally whitish tip.

The nail enamel is not applied until the polish is dried. Then, finger by finger, it is carefully put on over the natural nail tip. If the outline is not the same on all nails, or perhaps not too flattering on any, the application of white enamel permits improvement on nature, since the tip can be outlined by it in the line most suitable to the shape of one's fingers. The accompanying pictures illustrate the method of applying the white enamel properly.

FEMALE CHEFS PROVE SUCCESS

THIS is a kitchen scene in one of New York's large hotels. In case you didn't notice immediately, the remarkable thing about the picture is that there are no men in it. The hotel some time ago decided to try the experiment of employing only women chefs in its kitchens. The idea, of course, was that in this country women generally are the best cooks. The experience of the hostelry, after the kitchens had been turned over to women, proved the experiment successful beyond the fondest hopes of the management. The restaurant business increased from $200 to $2,000 a day! Entire credit for the achievement was given to Miss Charlotte Field, head chef. She is a native of Pittsfield, Mass. The secret of her success is the same which has always brought prosperity to restaurants—good food, well cooked.

"NOAH'S WIFE" WINS PRIZE

ANTIQUITIES

RELICS dating back to the fifth century B. C. have been uncovered by archæologists in recent excavations at the site of the ancient city of Minturnæ in Italy. Minturnæ was a city of the Arunci and was conquered by armies of the Roman empire. The city stood on the northwest bank of the Liris river, a short distance from the mouth of the stream, where the Via Appia crossed it over Pons Tiretius. Minturnæ was one of three towns of the Arunci which made war against Rome in 314 B. C. Among the larger ruins are the amphitheater and a fine aqueduct. Archæologists expect to find traces of Etruscan life in the ruins. Most of the relics, however, are of Roman origin.

1934 FAIR IS RISING OUT OF SILENCE

More Attractive Thar Last Year's; Alluring Features Added

By Frank Cipriani

HUGGING the frozen lake front from 12th street to 39th street lie the ghostly grounds of the 1933 Century of Progress. Queer structures rise in strange silhouette against a white and gray background. Everything seems silent, inanimate. To all appearances the scene is that of a dead, deserted village.

It's a bogus scene. In the Administration building, at the far north end of the World's Fair grounds, all is teeming activity. Everywhere are busy girls and men, chattering typewriters, and ringing telephones. In one office sits Rufus C. Dawes, president of the Exposition, scanning, through beribboned spectacles, reams of charts, blueprints and figures. Near by is Maj. Lenox Lohr, general manager, successfully handling half a dozen telephones at the same time.

They're working on the 1934 Century of Progress.

Of course, no one needs to be told there'll be another World's Fair on Chicago's lake front this coming summer. The world, from President Roosevelt down, demanded it. The world will get it—bigger, better, more elaborate, more stupendious. Mr. Dawes guarantees this. It will open, he says, on or about June 1.

This much known, the question now is: What is the 1934 Fair going to be like? How will it compare with the 1933 edition? Will it have as much—or more—color, frills and freaks? Will it be one colossal carnival, one substantial circus? Will it be edifyingly educational, severely serious, solidly scientific—and how about the fan dancers?

Mr. Dawes knows the answers. He will not tell everything, but he'll tell something. Covering the subject broadly, he says the 1934 Exposition will retain the best features of the 1933 spectacle and add many new and alluring ones. Very briefly he disposes of one palpitating question. Sally Rands will be nix in 1934.

The complexion of the 1934 Century of Progress may be envisioned from these points:

1—The basic theme of the new Fair will be science.

2—The entire grounds will scintillate in a more grandiose color scheme, bizarre, beautiful, and maybe a wee bit crazy.

3—Bits of Europe will be scattered about abundantly in the form of old world villages, true to type, modeled after the romantic Belgian Village. There will also be an American village.

4—The lagoon will be transformed into a fairyland of myriad lights, and, perhaps, dotted with an artificial island.

5—The Fair grounds proper will be shortened on the south, from 39th street to 35th street, to make them more compact.

6—The gay Midway will be moved from its old site near 23d street to the north end of Northerly island, south of the Adler planetarium.

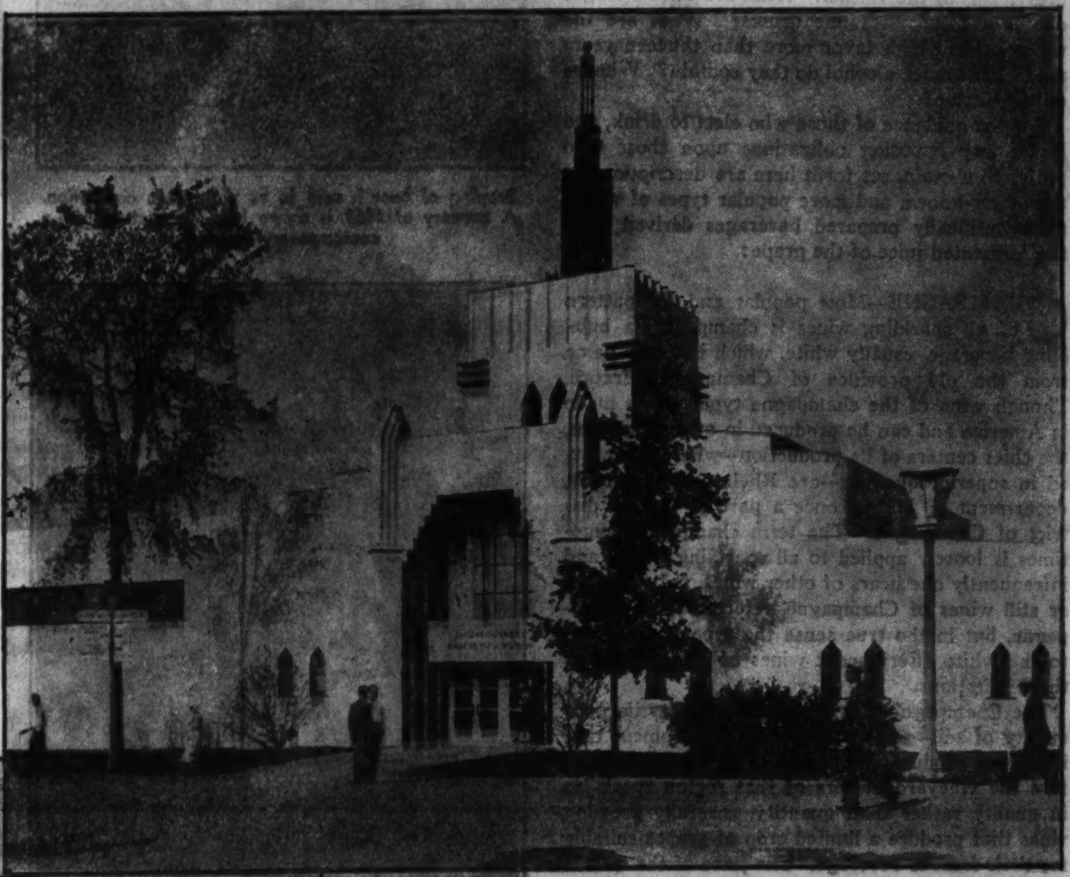
Obviously, the outstanding new vogue of the 1934 Exposition will be the various foreign villages. They will be built on and near the present grounds of the Midway, and it is for that reason that the Midway is being moved. The villages will be German, Swiss, English, Irish, and Spanish. There will be others, undoubtedly.

Added to the foreign hamlets will be the New England village. It will be early American, and will serve as a theater for the reenactment of stirring episodes of colonial days.

Among last year's successful features to be retained this year will be the Enchanted Island, the children's fairyland; the dizzying Sky Ride, the epic Wings of a Century, the Lama temple, Fort Dearborn, and the World a Million Years Ago. Most of last year's old restaurants will reopen, but will have to compete with many new and more elaborate ones.

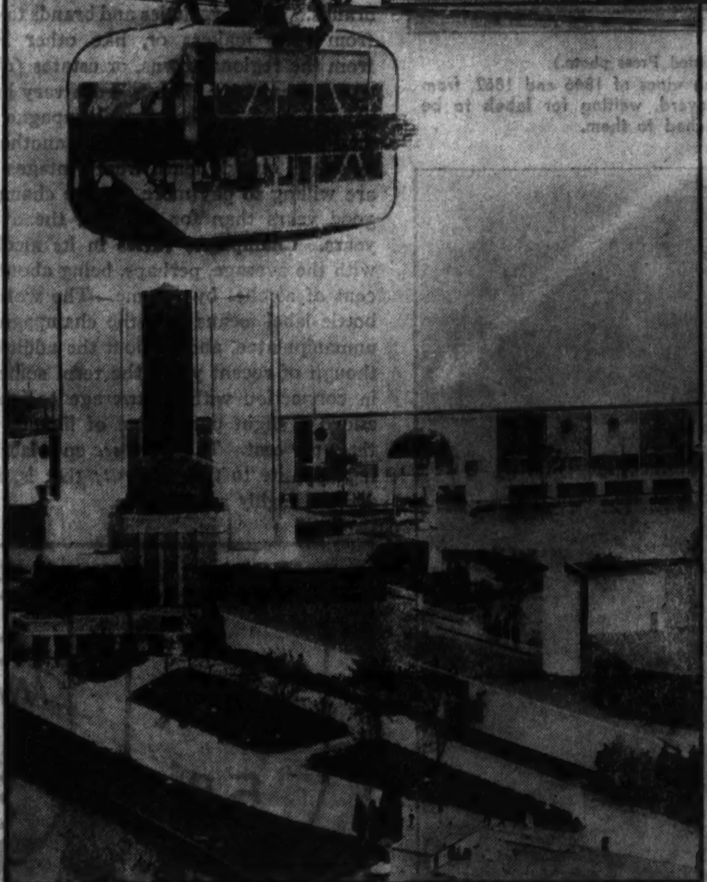
An aerial view of A Century of Progress as it appeared last year. Vast improvements are planned for this year.

One of the rides that thrilled the youngsters in 1933 and will thrill them again in '34. It is among the many features retained for the coming Fair, while new ones are being added. Aside from Enchanted Island, most amusement features will be concentrated on the Midway, which this year will be on Northerly island.



The Hall of Religion attracted visitors by the score of thousands at last year's Fair. Much to the surprise of a good many persons, it approached the Hall of Science in popularity.

A small section of Enchanted Island, the children's playground that scored such a hit last summer and that will hold forth again this summer. A number of changes will be made there.



The dizzying, dazzling Sky Ride, from which, high above the earthbound mortels, the passengers got a general view not only of the Fair but of Chicago's entire front yard.

The Travel and Transport building, perhaps the most spectacular of all the Fair buildings, insofar as its architecture was concerned. Across the way was enacted the epic Wings of a Century.

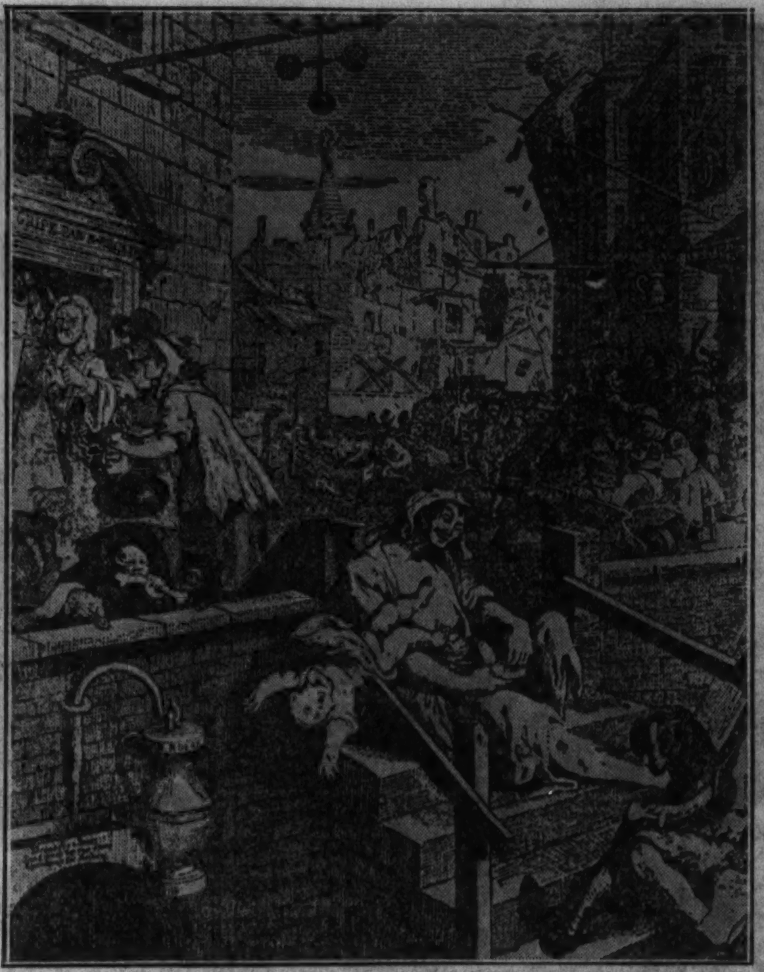
"Beer Street," famous engraving of 1751 by William Hogarth, pictorial satirist, showing the British opinion of beer in the eighteenth century.



"Gin Lane," also done by Hogarth in 1751. Happy, industrious people of "Beer Street" became debauched and lazy in "Gin Lane."

REPEAL arrives so suddenly it takes America by surprise. Drys, long wrapped in cloaks of smug satisfaction, and wets, long hoping for a miracle, alike are stunned by the swiftness of the legal machinery that restores that which has been contraband for more than thirteen years.

Yesterday the furtive bootlegger plied his trade. Yesterday was another era. Today arrayed in display windows of apothecaries, stationers, confectioners, grocers, and others and sundry in the small trades are bottles—bottles little and big, impressively plain or ornately dressed in flashing labels, tall slim ones and short fat ones—all filled with potable liquids, the natures of which may be mysteries to many.

Whether one drinks or whether one doesn't alters not the undeniable fact that spirituous and vinous beverages and beer and ale of unrestricted potency have been restored—and there are the bottles to prove it. Labels may tell little; perhaps they are worded in a foreign language or in the cryptic abbreviations of the vintner. What are the beverages one drinks today—if one drinks? What are the wines held in high favor more than thirteen years ago? How much alcohol do they contain? Whence do they come?

For the guidance of those who elect to drink, and in no way imposing obligations upon those who prefer to abstain, set forth here are descriptions of the better-known and more popular types of wines, all scientifically prepared beverages derived from the fermented juice of the grape:

CHAMPAGNE—Most popular and the pattern of all sparkling wines is champagne, a bubbling beverage, usually white, which takes its name from the old province of Champagne, France. Though wine of the champagne type now is made in America and can be produced in other countries, the chief centers of its production—where it is vinted in superior qualities—are Rheims and Epernay, department of Marne, once a part of the old district of Champagne. The term champagne sometimes is loosely applied to all sparkling wines, and infrequently one hears of other wines, red sparkling or still wines of Champagne, referred to as champagne, but in the true sense the type is restricted to the white effervescent wines of Champagne or their imitations.

The Champagne district is notorious for its poor quality of soil—soil so lacking in nourishment that it will not produce an abundance of grapes. Therefore the vineyard owners of that region specialize in quality rather than quantity, carefully growing vines that produce a limited crop of grapes suitable for their famous beverage. The juice of the Champagne grape is light and fine and well suited for sparkling wine.

All grape juice in fermenting generates within itself carbon dioxide, or carbonic acid gas, a poison in any marked quantity, but harmless in the amounts in which it develops in wine. In ordinary still wines the carbon dioxide is permitted to escape during fermentation, but in sparkling wines, such as champagne, sparkling Burgundy, and the like, it is confined to some extent during fermentation, the wine being bottled finally before fermentation has come to a stop. The tightly secured stopper of the bottle holds the carbon dioxide prisoner in the wine. When the stopper is drawn, usually with a loud pop, that part of the gas in a free state immediately escapes from the bottle. The gas within the wine itself is slower in escaping, coming to the surface in bubbles, at first rapidly and then more slowly. Wine experts say that the carbon dioxide of the sparkling wine makes the stimulating effects of the alcohol quicker in their action than those of ordinary still wines. The same experts aver that because of the presence of the gas, sparkling wines keep better and can be handled with less danger of losing their fine taste and bouquet. For that reason sparkling wines are better ocean travelers, not being greatly affected by the rolling and plunging of a ship at sea.

Champagne is produced in numerous varieties and brands. These varieties and brands take their names from their makers or, like other French wines, from the regions, towns, or estates (chateaux) from which they come. Grape crops vary in quality from year to year, so that the champagne for one year may be far superior to that of another year. Connoisseurs quickly learn what vintages are best, and are willing to pay more for the champagnes of the good years than for those of the average or bad years. Champagne varies in its alcoholic content, with the average, perhaps, being about fourteen per cent of alcohol by volume. The word brut on the bottle label means that the champagne is new and unmanipulated, and without the addition of liqueur, though of recent years the term sometimes is used in connection with a beverage to which has been added a slight percentage of liqueur, from one to three per cent. The word sec on a label has a meaning opposite to that of brut; that is, it describes a dry and highly refined wine.

PORT—Of all wines, perhaps that which is best known in America is port, a fortified red beverage of rich taste and aroma. Wine of the port type is made on a large scale in the United States, though the genuine port comes from Portugal, where it has been produced for hundreds of years. Made from grapes grown principally in the valley of the Douro, it takes it name from Oporto (The Port), the Portuguese city from which it first was shipped to England and other foreign countries. Port may vary in alcoholic content from eighteen to twenty-three per cent of spirits by volume, with the average about twenty-one per cent. The type with which nearly everyone is acquainted is a heavy, slightly oily beverage of a deep red color, though there is a white variety.

The high percentage of alcohol in port is obtained by the addition of spirits, as wine in its natural fermentation is said to develop not much more than fourteen per cent of alcohol. All wines to which spirits have been added are classified as fortified wines.

Port, once a wine restricted in its consumption largely to Portugal and Portuguese possessions, was popularized in England two hundred years ago through an international compact known as the Methuen treaty. It was during the reign of Queen Anne, in 1703, that the treaty was put into effect. The measure was intended as a political affront to France, which for more than five hundred years had been supplying Britons with wine. An import duty of fifty-five British pounds per tun (252 wine gallons) was slapped onto French wines, and wines from Portugal were admitted upon a payment of only seven pounds per tun. Britishers at first were slow to develop a taste for port, but now it is one of the favorite beverages of the country.

It was just a few years before the introduction of port into England in appreciable quantities that the invention of the corkscrew, or bottle-screw, as it then was called, changed completely the methods of maturing wine. Before that time all wine was consumed young or allowed to remain in wooden casks or tuns, where, except in the case of a few varieties, it slowly lost its flavor and fragrance. Bottles of those days were of the bulbous kind, employed only for bringing the beverages from the cask and for pouring purposes. First stoppers were wedge-shaped pieces of wood. Later cork, also in wedge shape, was introduced. With t[he] invention of the corkscrew, corks were turned [in] cylindrical form and driven in flush with t[he] mouth of the bottle, making the container a[ir] tight. In the case of a bottle standing upright fo[r a] long time the cork stopper gradually dried a[nd] shrunk and air penetrated the bottle, destroyi[ng] the wine. This brought the invention of the cyli[n]drical bottle, which supplanted the bulbous bott[le]. Cylindrical bottles could be stacked or binned [on] their sides, permitting the wine to touch the co[rk,] keep it damp, and thus prevent the entry of a[ir] for long periods—many years in the case of expe[n]sive wines of rare vintages. Today most wi[ne] bottles are shaped so that they will lie horizonta[lly] and pack well in large numbers in a small space.

The invention of the corkscrew made it possible to age wine in bottles.

SHERRY—Another of the popular fortifi[ed] wines is sherry, containing from seventeen [to] twenty-one per cent of alcohol by volume, with t[he] average about twenty per cent. It is a so-call[ed] white beverage of the still wine type, ranging fr[om] amber to a rich brown in color.

Sherry takes its name from Xeres, now Jerez [de] la Frontera, a town near Cadiz, Spain. The x [in] Spanish originally was pronounced with the sou[nd] of sh. Wine of the sherry type was first produc[ed] in Spain, and that country today still is looked up[on] as the home of the finest sherry, though a lar[ge] amount of the type is produced in America, a[nd] possibly only experts can distinguish the differen[ce] between true Spanish sherry and that produced [in] the United States. California wine makers of rece[nt] years have become increasingly more skillful in d[u]plicating the wines of Europe.

There are many varieties of sherry, though t[he] two principal kinds are amontillado, immortaliz[ed] by Edgar Allan Poe in his hair-raising tale, "T[he] Cask of Amontillado," a sweet and full-bodied wi[ne] and manzanilla, generally a light and dry wine.

BURGUNDY—All wines made in Burgundy [or] resembling them in type are known as Bu[r]gundy wines, though they may be either red [or] white in color. They vary widely in the proportio[n] of alcohol contained within them, and also in bod[y,] taste, and bouquet. They may have as little [as] eight per cent of alcohol or as high as fourteen [or] fifteen per cent. The best comes from the depar[t]ment of Cote-d'Or, especially from about Nuits a[nd] Beaume. Chablis, a fine white wine, is a Burgun[dy] wine. Sparkling Burgundy is an effervescent wi[ne] similar to champagne.

CLARET—All wines originating in the regi[on] about Bordeaux, France, are known as Bo[r]deaux wines. All red Bordeaux wines are plac[ed] under the classification of claret, and those [of] Medoc are considered the best. Claret, howev[er,] must be considered purely as a type, for countle[ss] are the varieties and brands offered to the publ[ic.] American producers turn out wine of the claret ty[pe] which is considered of very fair quality, as likewi[se] do producers of some other countries besides Fran[ce.]

Claret is a dry wine, for centuries consumed pri[n]cipally as a table beverage, from the belief, fr[e]quently confirmed by medical opinion, that it ac[ts] as an aid to digestion, as well as serving as a ton[ic.] Clarets contain from eight to twelve per cent [of] alcohol, with the average very near the last-nam[ed] figure.

Wines from France, especially the Bordeaux wines, often carry on their labels words such as graves, cotes, and palus. The first, graves, is an assurance to the buyer and the consumer that the grapes from which the wine was made were grown on light, gravelly land; cotes means from the hills; palus indicates wines from vines grown on alluvial soils. Each kind of ground means a different flavor in the wine.

SAUTERNE—Another of the favorably known Bordeaux wines is sauterne, which takes its name from the Sauterne district of France, lying on the Garonne above Bordeaux. Sauterne is a white wine, full and sweet and of a fine characteristic bouquet. It varies widely in alcoholic strength, from as low as eight and nine per cent to as high as fifteen. The sauterne commonly available in America and the wines of that type produced domestically generally are of about fourteen per cent alcohol by volume.

Different varieties of French sauternes, like other Bordeaux wines, take their names from the localities, towns, and estates in which they originate. Long considered the finest is that of Chateau Yquem, which goes under the name of haut sauterne, or excellent sauterne.

TOKAY—Hungary, a country producing a large amount of wine for its limited area, is the home of just one single type of vinous beverage that has attained international importance. That is Tokay, a rich, sweet drink of topaz color, which has been imitated successfully by wineries in a number of other countries. The name comes from the Hungarian town of Tokay, center of the vineyards from which come the grapes employed in the making of the wine.

Tokay contains by volume from twelve to fifteen per cent of alcohol, with the average about thirteen per cent. The vine has been transplanted and cultivated widely in America, and California today is an important producer of Tokay grapes and Tokay wine.

RHINE WINE—From the valley of the Rhine and its tributaries come the Rhine wines, light and dry and generally white, and containing from seven to ten per cent of alcohol. Though still wines, they are said to be passable imitations of champagne when charged with carbonated water. Best of the Rhine wines are those of the Rheingau district, near Mainz, bearing such names as Johannesberger, Steinberger, Marcobrunner, Rauenthaler, Rudesheimer, Geisenheimer, and Hochheimer. The last named has been abbreviated in England to hock, a term now sometimes applied by Britons to all varieties of Rhine wines.

Wines similar to the Rhine wines are grown about Baden, but these usually are of higher alcoholic content, ranging from eleven to thirteen per cent of alcohol.

MOSELLE—German wines from the Moselle district are of a quite different character from those from the Rhineland. Whereas the last named as a rule are of a marked and definite flavor, the Moselle wines are light and of a delicate nature. Another difference is that Rhine wines age splendidly in bottles, but Moselle wines are usually as palatable when young as when kept in glass over any period. The most popular of the type are those of Brauneberg, Bernkastel, Zeltingen, and Piesport.

Nearly all German wines are white, the outstanding exception being that known as Assmannshausen. Riessling wine may be either of the Rhine or the Moselle type, the name indicating only that the wine is made from Riessling grapes.

Moselle wines are imitated by American producers.

CHIANTI—Though Italy ranks second to France in the world's production of wine and helps greatly to swell the annual output of billions of gallons (average three billion), its wines generally are not of the fine quality of those of France. Chianti, a typical Italian wine and one better known than most varieties, comes from the vineyards of the Chianti mountains in Tuscany. It is a dry red wine of piquant variety, similar in many respects to claret, and contains about eleven per cent of alcohol. A strong red wine, inexpensive and similar in some respects to Chianti, is the every day drink of thousands of Italians.

MUSCATEL—From both Italy and France comes muscatel wine, produced from muscat grapes, which also are grown extensively in other countries, including the United States. The white muscatel wines of Vesuvius are of good quality, as are also those from the island of Capri. Marsala is a fortified white wine originating in the neighborhood of Marsala, Sicily. Muscatel wine varies so widely in its percentage of alcohol that it is difficult to fix an average here.

MADEIRA—In American colonial days and for several generations later the wines of Madeira were drunk in great volume in this country, but Madeira no longer holds the place in the tastes of the drinkers that it did a hundred or more years ago. Madeira, from the Portuguese island by that name, like sherry and port, is a fortified wine, with a wide variance of alcoholic content. The falling away in popularity of this wine is attributed to two reasons: a change in public taste and a deterioration of the vineyards of the island.

The so-called kick of each and every kind of beverage depends almost entirely upon the amount of alcohol in the liquid. In other words, those who would drink lightly, wishing to avoid intoxication and other menaces to the health and still obtain benefits attributed to alcohol when taken sparingly, can do so by restricting their drinking to beverages known to contain small percentages of alcohol in relation to the total volume of the drink. It is easily understood how a specific measure of liquid containing fifty per cent of alcohol would be ten times more potent than a like amount of liquid containing only five per cent of alcohol. The first type of drink could be found only among the ardent spirits, or hard liquors; the second type would be beer, for even the lightest wines contain more than five per cent of alcohol. Yet wine of twelve per cent alcohol would be less than one-fourth as potent as 100-proof whisky, which is fifty per cent alcohol.

Though the making of wine goes back to before the beginning of history, the brewing of beverages similar to modern beer is as old or almost as old. Alcoholic drinks are not, like the steam engine, the linotype, or the incandescent bulb, inventions of man, though they have been refined and perfected through the long centuries since some nameless and shaggy cave man somewhere in the world found crushed wild grapes fermenting in their own juice (the first wine) or stumbled upon honey of the wild bee converting itself into mead. At the very dawn of history men were drinking and had been drinking for ever so long. The ancient Sumerians of Asia Minor and their predecessors back in the impenetrable haze of antiquity were winemakers and winebibbers. Egyptians as early as the first dynasty and earlier were brewers of beer. Noah, skipper of the biblical ark, which archeologists say grounded on Ararat 5,200 years ago, was a wine presser of more than local reputation.

At least as popular as wine, and produced in far greater volume in many countries, including the United States, are the beverages brewed from cereal grain, chief of which are beer and ale.

BEER—Plebeian of all drinks is beer, a beverage produced in various manners of brewing for the last seven or eight thousand years. It is made from the alcoholic fermentation of crushed cereal (cereal malt). In early days various spices and herbs were added to it to give it flavor, though in modern times hops, actually a kind of herb, are the flavoring used. When hops were first introduced into England from Flanders in the sixteenth century they were said, when used in making beer, to favor the flow of bile, thus aiding digestion. That idea has stuck to beer for four hundred years. The principal health claim for beer today, however, is that it is indispensable to men working at jobs that make for excessive perspiration. Beer is said to restore the essential salts that are removed from the body by aggravated action of the sweat ducts. Beneficial results, other than these mentioned, of course, are attributed to beer.

The chemist is an important factor in the modern brewery, where the mother yeast used in producing fermentation is a subject of constant study. Each big commercial brewery jealously guards its yeast cultures, some having pedigrees fifty years old.

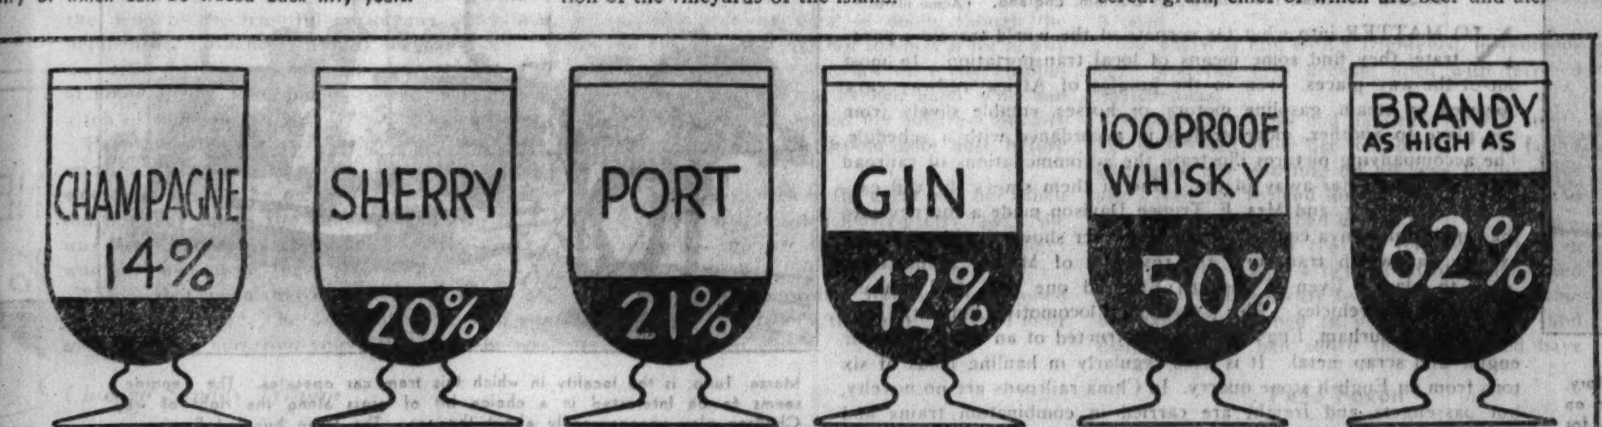
America's pre-prohibition beer contained from three to four per cent of alcohol by volume. Beer legalized in this country by the special beer measure that preceded shortly the ratification of repeal contained 3.2 per cent of alcohol by weight, roughly four per cent by volume. Beer as it is being made today may contain as high as five or six per cent of alcohol by volume.

What is generally accepted as beer in the United States is of that type called lager beer, in which the yeast used to bring about fermentation sinks to the bottom of the fermenting vessels. Top beer, or beer in which the fermentation takes place on the surface, is sometimes known as English beer, and generally is drunk or bottled immediately after it is made. Lager beer, on the other hand, usually is kept in wooden casks from three weeks to six months before it is offered to the public.

Pilsener (or Bohemian), Bavarian, and Dortmund types of beer are lager beer. The famous weissbier of Berlin is top beer. Virtually all varieties of beer are produced in America, though mostly they are of the lager type.

ALE—Originating in Europe and taking its name from the Anglo-Saxon word ealu, ale has come to be a popular drink in England. In America virtually all top beers, or English beers, are classed as ales, but in Britain there is a difference in the manner of brewing true ales and other top beers. Ales may contain from five to twelve per cent of alcohol.

In olden days the colleges of England brewed their own ales, and handed down in name to the present are the famous "Chancellor" ale of Queen's college, the "Archdeacon" of Merton college, Oxford, and the "Audit" of Trinity, Cambridge.



[...]lume of alcohol in a few of the better known beverages. Beer, shown as containing five per cent of alcohol, may contain less than three per cent or more than six, [...] cent. Sherry and port both are fortified wines, that is, they have had spirits added to increase their percentage of alcohol.

PROVING THAT STYLE IS UNIVERSAL

Representatives to the Inter-American Commission of Women at Montevideo demonstrate the universality of occidental style. These delegates are from Mexico, Cuba, Brazil, Uruguay, Paraguay, Haiti, the Dominican Republic, Bolivia, and the United States.

WHEN the Inter-American Commission of Women assembled recently in Montevideo, Uruguay, it took more than a glance to decide whether a delegate hailed from Mexico, Bolivia, Paraguay, Cuba, Haiti, the Dominican Republic, Uruguay, Brazil, or the United States. For there was a similarity of style in their garb as well as a community of thought in their interests.

All sought, for their constituents back home, equality with men in each of the participating states. Each subscribed to the draft treaty providing for it, which was submitted to the Pan-American conference, meeting concurrently in Montevideo, of which Dr. Sophonisba Breckenridge of Chicago was the only woman member.

Dr. Breckenridge, professor of public welfare administration at the University of Chicago, has had a distinguished career. She was the first woman graduate of the University of Chicago school of law, is descended from a famous Kentucky family, and has made outstanding contributions in the field of sociology.

BRINGING BACK THE '60'S

FLOWERS TRAVEL IN ICE

INTEREST was centered at the flower show of the Royal Horticultural society, London, in the unusual exhibit pictured above, consisting of flowers frozen in solid blocks of ice. The display was sent from Australia and kept frozen from the time the flowers were picked until the London show was over. The exhibit was labeled "Wattle" and "Bottle Brush," flowers which more familiarly are known as mimosa and callistemon. The mimosa plant, common in the United States, is so named because of the movements of the leaves in many species which seem to mimic animal sensibility. The leaves of the plant move upward in a delicate folding motion. If the plant is shaken, the leaves fold up and the stem droops, but if the shaking is continued the leaves re-open and the stem straightens out. The plant is found, usually, in semi-tropical climates. Some forms of the mimosa plant have poisonous roots. Contact of the hands with this type of the plant is exceedingly irritating to the skin. The poisonous mimosa is definitely a tropical plant, however.

CLOTHES may or may not make the man, but there still is a distinction in being well dressed. Pictured above are some celebrated and some not so well known gentlemen who, in the opinion of the tailors of London, New York, and Hollywood, are the five best dressed men in the world. The tailors decided this momentous question recently by ballot. First place was awarded to the Earl of Westmorland, British sportsman. Prince George of England was runner up. Third place went to F. Frazier Jelke, socially prominent New York broker. William Goadby Loew, another New York broker, was given fourth place, and Michael Farmer, husband of Gloria Swanson, movie star, was awarded fifth position.

AN UNORTHODOX GOLF GRIP

SEVERAL months ago Maurice G. Luxford, member of a New York golf club, was at the top of his golf game, shooting consistently in the low 70's. All of a sudden everything seemed to go wrong. It was impossible for him to break an 80. Then, some weeks later, Luxford, while playing in an important match, accidentally placed the index finger of his right hand on top of the club shaft, instead of under. He made a splendid drive. Thereafter he used the new grip and soon had regained his lost form. The above pictures illustrate Mr. Luxford's new grip. His chief worry now is that he may forget his accidentally acquired new form. For that reason he practices the grip constantly.

RAILWAYS IN FAR CORNERS OF WORLD

NO MATTER into what far corners of the world travelers penetrate, they find some means of local transportation. In most out-of-the-way places, even in the jungles of Africa, railway cars, powered by steam, gasoline motors, or horses, rumble slowly from one place to another, more or less in accordance with a schedule. The accompanying pictures illustrate the accommodations of railroad travel in several far-away places. One of them shows the rail car cage in which Mr. and Mrs. F. Trubee Davison made a journey into the jungles of Kenya colony, Africa. Another shows the horse-drawn railway car which transports the residents of Marza, Tunis, from place to place. Even in modern England one may find unusual transportation vehicles. The "mystery" locomotive built by John R. Hales of Durham, England, was constructed of an old automobile engine and scrap metal. It is used regularly in hauling loads of six tons from an English stone quarry. In China railroads are no novelty, but passengers and freight are carried in combination trains and there is no hurry.

Another Man's Wife

By Mrs. Belloc Lowndes

SYNOPSIS

Rex Chandos, ace racer, meets and falls madly in love with Delia Seaton, the most beautiful girl he'd ever seen. Delia, self-centered and of a naturally cold temperament, is the adored wife of Jim Seaton, world-famous cricketer captain of the English team. She receives a large allowance from her wealthy father, Achilles Taylor. Jim is often away on long cricketing tours. Delia falls under the spell of the masterful Rex Chandos. There begins for her a double life.

INSTALLMENT II.

DELIA SEATON and Rex Chandos had known one another six months almost to a day when there came a longer cable than usual from the other side of the world, and this time it contained grave news. Jim Seaton had injured his leg, not sufficiently badly to go into a hospital, as some members of his team wanted him to do, but putting an end to any play for the moment. However, there was a great surgeon on his way to Australia from England, and he would probably cure the trouble right away. Meanwhile he had a jolly young doctor who was a cricket enthusiast.

Then there appeared, sent by Reuter's Melbourne correspondent, the following cable:

> Mr. James Seaton, "Jim the Bowler" to thousands, nay hundreds of thousands of his fellow countrymen, sustained a far more serious injury than was at first supposed. He has been moved to a private nursing home.

A man from a very great paper called at the luxurious apartment in Park lane and had the luck to find Mrs. Seaton at home. He explained that he was the sporting editor and that he had come in person in consequence of a cable which had just been received from his paper's own correspondent in Melbourne.

"What is the news?" she asked anxiously.

"According to our correspondent, Mr. Seaton will probably be compelled to lose his leg."

"Would that mean that he could never play cricket again?"

"Well, yes, I'm afraid it does mean that. But he's still quite a young man, only thirty-one, isn't he?"

"But that would be dreadful—frightful——"

Delia melted into tears. "Perhaps it isn't true! You think it may not be true?"

"I think the fact that you've heard nothing yet is a very good sign, Mrs. Seaton."

But alas! Early that same afternoon, just when she had come back from a merry lunch party where she had remained absolutely silent concerning that horrible rumor, her father had come in, looking very much concerned indeed.

"I've had a cable from Melbourne, Delia. I would have obeyed poor Jim's instructions, but the awful news is already in the evening papers. Here is the cable, my poor, dear child."

And then he read out:

> Mr. Seaton's left leg has had to be amputated below the knee stop He is most anxious that nothing should be told to Mrs. Seaton till the last possible moment, as he knows this will cause her fearful pain and distress stop When she has to know he wants you to say to her from him, "Cheerio, darling, while there's life there's hope" stop As a matter of fact he is the most brave and plucky chap I've ever met and I would have done anything in the world to prevent this happening stop Letter follows

The cable was signed by the great surgeon for whose arrival Jim had insisted on waiting.

"My dear little girl, my poor little girl, this is a most frightful misfortune! But of course I'll do everything I can to help poor Jim. After all, he's only thirty-one. We'll be able to find him some kind of job, without doubt. Meanwhile I'm going to cable him some money, darling."

"I wonder, dad, if you could let me have a little money?"

"Why, of course I will, my dear. Not that things are too good with me just now."

He walked over to a writing table, taking a check book out of his pocket as he walked along.

"I'm not a millionaire any more," he muttered.

She looked at him in dismay. Always he had been so ready, so gaily ready, to give her whatever money she wanted.

HE WENT on slowly: "I've given you a good bit of money since the beginning of the year. Where has it all gone?"

As she said nothing, he asked:

"How much do you want?"

"How about a thousand pounds?" she said coaxingly.

"I'm afraid that's too much. Let's make it five hundred."

She looked downcast.

"Can you really be hard up, my dear?"

"I lost such a lot at bridge," she said lamely.

"I wish you'd give up bridge just for a little while. I really am rather short."

And then, since he loved her with all his heart, and she was all he had to love, he made out another check, this time for two hundred pounds.

And then, just a little ruefully, he exclaimed: "I'm afraid I shan't be able to give you any more money for some time. So be careful of this."

And then he went away, glad that she had taken the news of the frightful misfortune which had befallen her husband as well as she had done. It was true that she wouldn't like having poor Jim at home all day long, but of course he'd get Jim a job of some sort.

People treated her as if Delia were herself the invalid. Wonderful flowers were sent to her by women as well as by men. The only friend who did not play up as she had expected him to do was Rex Chandos. He said he was sorry—but he was obviously more angry than sorry.

"Does that mean that now you and he will always be together?" he asked abruptly, and she answered in a surprised voice, glad that she was hurting him in so doing: "Why, of course, Rex! I should be a beast not to have him always with me. Poor Jim! No one in the world has ever been as fond of me as is my own husband."

On hearing those words Chandos had turned on his heel, made for the door, and disappeared. But four hours later there had come a pleading voice over the telephone:

"Only to say I'm sorry I was such a brute and to ask if I may come and take you out this evening."

But she answered in a very cold voice that she was engaged, and wouldn't it be better if they didn't meet for a while? The next post had brought her a letter in which he had tried to make her understand how terribly unhappy he was at the thought that from now on Jim would always be there. And after she had read it twice, for Chandos had the gift of the pen and could write a most moving love letter, she began to see that after all it was natural that Rex should feel "like that." So she sent him one of those convenient telephone express messages, of which no record is kept, saying she had thrown over an engagement and that they could meet on the morrow.

To his delight, she had shown herself on that one occasion far more what he longed for her to be than she had ever done before.

ONE day, when there had been an account of a hundred and eighty pounds for which payment had been suddenly pressed at a time Delia was what she called "hard up," Chandos had found it out and at once he made out a check to "self." Then he had given Delia the money as if he were handing her a wad of so much waste paper.

The fact that Rex Chandos had done that made her suppose him a far more well-to-do man than he was. She would have been surprised to learn the truth, which was that when he had given her that hundred and eighty pounds the gift had pretty well cleaned him out. As a matter of fact, Chandos lived from hand to mouth. That is to say, he made only a fluctuating income from what had become his profession. Also, as the world depression increased and he found it more and more difficult to earn a living, it was to him a source of deep satisfaction that, in spite of what he had taken to be a moment of quite temporary difficulty, the woman he loved so devotedly had an immensely rich father.

And then one morning in the space of less than half an hour Delia Seaton's house of life crumbled about her, leaving her stripped of all that delightful dwelling place had contained. And this included all that brings with it the power of obtaining the careless luxurious living, as well as the comfort and peace provided by invisible security.

The first warning knell of doom, though the victim of misfortune was not to know it for at any rate some minutes, was struck on a late autumn day when Adrienne, the French maid, who had been bidden not to waken her mistress on any account, opened the bedroom door just before eleven o'clock.

Delia was lying back in the great bed, her ashen fair curls framing her deliciously pretty face. She was sound asleep, breathing lightly, and a slight smile hovering her lips. She had been out till four o'clock that morning, having accompanied a merry party on from a theater to the then most fashionable night club.

Adrienne walked up close to the bed. "I'm sorry to wake you, madam, but——"

Delia stirred, and there came a frown over her face.

She opened her eyes. "Really, Adrienne, this is too bad! I told you not to disturb me, whoever rang up."

"It is not the telephone, madam. It is a gentleman who is determined to see you. It is a Mr. Peters. He says that it is of great importance that you see him."

Delia sat up.

"Peters? I don't know anyone called that. Send him away at once!"

And then she realized that the girl standing by her bed looked quite unlike her usual lively, smiling self.

There came to Delia a slight sense of discomfort. She was aware that she owed a considerable number of bills, for of late her father had not paid her allowance. She told herself that this unknown Mr. Peters was probably a debt collector.

"I think Mr. Peters has come from madam's father," Adrienne said in a low tone.

"From my father? What an extraordinary thing!"

Still, that was better than a debt collector, and so Delia leaped out of bed and thrust her feet into the charming feather-trimmed slippers which matched her quilted cerise velvet dressing gown.

"I am afraid Mr. Taylor is very ill," went on the maid.

"Why didn't you tell me that at once? Where is the man? In the hall?"

NO SUSPICION of what lay behind her maid's odd manner reached Delia's brain as she walked into her finely furnished drawing room.

A tall, thin, elderly man was looking out of one of the windows. As she came in he turned around with the question, "Are you Mrs. Seaton?"

"Yes, of course I am. Is my father really ill?"

At once came the answer, uttered in still, cold accents: "I am sorry to tell you that your father is dead."

Something curious had happened over a month ago which had made her feel uneasy. Her father had come one morning on his way to his office and asked her to lend him all the jewels he had given her since she had grown up.

He had explained that he required a sum in cash connected with a ticklish bit of business and that, as he did not care to draw this money from his bank, he wished to pledge her pearls and diamonds. He had added that she would have everything back within ten days or so. She had obeyed him, and bought some false pearls to take the place of her own fine string for the few days she would be without it. But the jewels had never come back.

And then the man who had broken the news of Achilles Taylor's death in so heartless, indeed, in so cruel, a way, exclaimed: "I am sorry to have to further inform you, Mrs. Seaton, that your father died by his own hand."

"Do you mean that my father killed himself?"

"Mr. Taylor shot himself, and the doctor who was sent for this morning says he must have done so at a late hour last night. I live in the Piccadilly mansion, and I was acquainted with Mr. Taylor. I am sorry to say I entrusted a considerable sum of money to him some months ago for a special form of investment, and I shall be a heavy loser by his death."

Delia stared at the speaker. Anger, pain, and bewilderment filled her burdened heart. What a horrible man! She longed intensely for him to go away.

But he showed no intention of doing that. "Surely you must have been aware that your father's affairs were in a very serious state? As a matter of fact," and at last he did hesitate for a few moments before he said, "he was to have been hammered tomorrow. That, no doubt, is the reason why he killed himself last night."

Now, Delia Seaton had known very little about her father's city life, amazingly little considering she was the only child of a man who had been regarded as one of the great figures in the London stock exchange world. But she did know what it meant to be "hammered," namely that the stockbroker who undergoes that ordeal is not able to meet his obligations, and so incurs public disgrace.

"I'm sorry to have had to break bad news in so abrupt a fashion. But you are apparently the late Mr. Taylor's only living relation."

"I suppose," she said in a shaky voice, "that you have got in touch with Mr. Brown?"

Philip Brown had been, for as long as Delia could remember, her father's confidential clerk.

"Your father sent a wire to Mr. Brown just before he shot himself, and it was delivered this morning. As a result he arrived about nine o'clock. He's waiting for you now."

She looked with dismay into the speaker's cold face. "Do you mean you want me to go to father's apartment?"

"Most certainly I do. We found his will. In fact, it had been witnessed by Mr. Brown, and you are executor, Mrs. Seaton, as well as residuary legatee. It is plain that when your father made that will, shortly after your marriage, he believed he was going to leave you a large fortune, though even then, according to Mr. Brown, he must have been a much less rich man than he supposed himself to be."

"Then wasn't he rich any more when—when——" She could not bring herself to say "when he killed himself."

"Mr. Taylor has left nothing but debts. I had a glance——" He corrected himself quickly. "Mr. Brown thought it well to glance at the counterfoils in your father's current check book. He drew surprisingly few checks; in fact, the bulk of them were drawn in your favor. No doubt you have a certain amount of that money left?"

And then Delia had a sudden attack of hysterics. Adrienne, the butler, the cook, and the housemaid all rushed into the room, and one and all made Mr. Peters at last feel ashamed of his inhuman conduct. Before leaving he drew the butler aside and spoke to him as man to man.

"I'm very sorry for Mrs. Seaton, but the fact has to be faced that her father"—his voice shook with cold anger—"was a rascal. As soon as she has calmed down and is dressed she must come around to Mr. Taylor's apartment. Or do you think I'd better send her Mr. Taylor's head clerk, the man called Brown?"

The butler looked at him with deep distaste as he answered: "I'm sorry you didn't send Mr. Brown to break the bad news. Mr. Brown knows how to handle a lady."

The days that followed were filled with a blurred haze of pain, surprise, and yes, something like terror. Soon, all too soon, the inquiry into Achilles Taylor's death revealed that had he lived to face a disgraceful bankruptcy he might, indeed probably would, have had to stand his trial and been condemned to a long term of imprisonment.

WHEN Delia saw her husband hobbling into their apartment on two crutches she burst out crying. It was too terrible, too awful—indeed, everything in her shattered life had become too terrible and awful almost to be borne during the three weeks that had elapsed since her father's death.

Jim Seaton looked entirely different from what he had on the day they had had that touching parting just before he had started on what was to be so glorious an adventure in Australia.

The appearance of health and youth which had been his only physical attraction for the girl he had married, in so far as there had been any physical attraction, had completely gone. He was now pale. His bright brown hair had lost all its luster. He had even become a little fat.

Instinctively Delia could not help comparing him with the only other man who had ever been in her life. Rex Chandos, with his strong, ugly face, was yet a perfect specimen of manhood. He hadn't an ounce of superfluous flesh on his body, and kept himself, as he was naturally obliged to do, in first class physical condition.

And yet in one way Seaton showed plenty of strength. But it was moral strength. He was an absolutely honest man, and though he knew very little of finance, he had been brought up in a frugal home. His father had been a hard-working country clergyman whose children had been early taught how far money will go. The great luxury this young man had enjoyed during the last five years had not obliterated memories of his early youth. However, none of that was apparent on the somber day of his return home.

Two man friends, cricketing pals of old days, had met him at the steamer and motored him to London. They stood awkwardly by his side filled with pity for Seaton's beautiful wife.

"Look here, Mrs. Seaton. He'll be much better soon when he's had a cork leg fitted and regained his balance. What you've got to do now is not to cry, but try and cheer him up," said one of them.

Delia could not help crying, but she was crying for herself.

WIG WAS A RIOT; SO IS PERMANENT

HAIRDRESS IS A COMEDY —AS ALWAYS

Above: In gran ma's day. This old Currier & Ives print, "An Artist in Hair," depicts a hairdresser at work in that era when a woman's tresses were referred to reverently as her crowning glory.

By Kathleen McLaughlin

SO THE woman of today is "a free soul," is she? Not while feminine vanity lives and flourishes. They've done a lot of talking—and still do—about the untrammeled life they lead in this age that has been singularly kind to their sex. But here on this page is proof positive that they still bow their heads to the yoke of fashion, even though that yoke be heavy, as it often has been of yore.

Every time some mischievous soul drags out the old kodak album and starts flipping the pages the assembled group goes off into hysterics at the comic features of modes less than a decade old. The more extreme they were at any given moment, it seems, the more ridiculous they loom as the years recede. Nevertheless, the cycles of style bring back every now and then some "fantastic" angle which sent a group into howls of mirth—and the girls who laughed the loudest frequently are the first to sport the revived favorite.

Reproduced herewith is a collection of old prints poking fun at the hair modes of earlier eras, for the most part, and of foreign extraction, as it were. The two American illustrations are the dignified Currier & Ives print at the top, portraying a fashionable scene a couple of generations back, and a bonnie young beauty winner of this day and age, Miss Marjorie Kavanagh, undergoing the more or less rigorous operation of "getting a permanent."

It is obvious that the lure of beauty still survives—that the courtly ladies who went in for ponderous and perilous structures of powdered wigs built high on their heads in France under the Louises had no monopoly on the urge to enhance their appearance after the fashion of the moment. And fashion at the moment in twentieth century America indicates an artificial permanent wave—if fate neglected to provide a natural one.

Eighteenth century chic. The cartoonist naughtily added a survey through a sextant, but the stepladder was authentic.

How fickle a tyrant style can be is vividly illustrated in this group. The French, ever slavishly devoted to each new whim of the mode, went the limit in those prerevolutionary years that led up to the multiple extravagances of Versailles, and thereby furnished the artists of the day with topics for burlesque, resulting in three of the accompanying pictures. The trio on either side of the photo of the modern young woman comprise the set.

They are contained in a book of old French caricatures, and in fact needed only slight distortion to bring them into the category of comedy from that of reality. Never before or since has hairdressing monopolized so much time, attention, and effort or reached such an extent in the realm of the ridiculous.

Or is it ridiculous? The mode is only queer because of one's perspective, the steady procession of the years would seem to prove. Had one of these becurled and bepowdered belles of the French court been conceded a glimpse at the clipped and shorn beauties of today, what would have been her reaction? Would she have envied or pitied the modern miss her coiffure? One thing can be safely assumed—she would have been shocked!

Feminine emancipation (?), twentieth century progress (?), and such. Miss Marjorie Kavanagh poses. And emerges looking stunning.

Between the expensive headdress of the French lady of 1735 who is startling her English host—in the picture at the bottom of the page—and the sleek, snug boyish bob of recent years, coiffures have followed an uncertain course to two extremes. It is safe to predict that never again will the world witness such proportions in ornamental headdress as the first, and, short of a shaved skull, nothing could be more radical than the last.

It would be folly to assume, however, that the world of women would rebel at a return to elaborate hairdressing in the years to come. The boyish bob, for instance, has been succeeded by the current vogue for exceedingly feminine coiffures, with swirls and curls and even aigrettes, tiaras, and bandeaux of flowers.

There were those who hailed the disappearance of the whalebone type of corset as complete and permanent—only to be confounded by the speedy return of a foundation garment that covers the entire torso as the "princess line" in gowns came back to favor. The flapper who astounded the world by checking her corset when she went out to dance grew up into a young matron who meekly climbs back these current weeks into an elastic altogether that fits so tightly it all but takes a shoehorn to get into and can't possibly be donned in a hurry. Fashion still holds sway. By the same principle, it is equally possible that succeeding generations may witness a revival of the length of hair shown in the upper illustration and in the French print below it, to the right. At the present moment the emphasis on health and hygiene approves the short-cut hair as sanitary as well as convenient and becoming. But the rapidity with which such principles bend before the ultimatum of fashion is demonstrated in the bold challenge flung before the designers by one Mae West of Hollywood, who by sheer force of personality threatened for a few months to wreak havoc with such conceptions. She missed, it is agreed, by the narrowest of margins.

The fact remains that had the West influence clicked in certain strategic centers, the entire world would have flocked, like sheep to the fold, to the close embrace of the whalebones of an earlier generation, the pinched waist, the weighty, unwieldy hats, dust ruffles, multiple petticoats, and all. And smirked back at itself in the mirror, convinced that of all costumes this was the most becoming.

The World war aftermath of freedom for women was characterized in a modicum of clothing. Each component part of the feminine costume was impressed with that spirit of release. Skirts were short, sleeves were plain, necks were low, lines were straight.

Dresses depended largely on richness of design or luster of material for their smartness. Gradually this "rebellion" palled, in garb as well as in manners. Another generation was coming to the front, with a different background and a new heritage, and it wanted—and got—something different.

That something was more feminine, more ornamental, more decorative. The trend continues, and up to the present time has been vigorous enough to have included in its wide sweep even the puffed, preened sleeves of the nineties and the ensuing Gibson girl period. The latter contributed as well the ultra-smart hats that topped many a trim head last fall, even though the lines were altered somewhat from the original.

The world changes, and fashion with it. And women will keep up with fashion even if it twists their necks, breaks their arches, bows their heads, or gives 'em pneumonia, no matter how emancipated or advanced or modern they may be. And men, we'll wager, will keep right on falling in love with 'em.
